The Minden Herald gives its readers 53 issues this year, as the first number was issued Friday, June 20th, 1890, and ended on Friday, June 19th, 1891, but as the Herald says that it will not happen again they will try and stand it.

Philetus Ivory, a farmer living near Lapeer, died of arsenical poison one day last week. His wife, son and three hired men are also very sick. About three weeks ago the family ate of some canned currants and it is supposed that the paria green which was used spraying the bushes caused the illness. A sample can of currants has been sent to the state chemist for analysis.

SOCIETY IN WASHINGTON.

The Secret of Social Success At The Capital.

The material for a salon very possibly exists in Washington, but the most of it is a little raw and unshined. The average Congressman is not going to worry himself into a dress suit, and go to some clever woman's house merely to talk, to discuss public questions, and say bright things. He pretends to do that at the Capitol, and have it printed in the Record, or pour it into the interviewer's ear, and have it spread broadcast through his district. His ideas of sociability include a bounteous hospitality, and are inseparably associated with bodily food. A thin water with a glass of gooseberry syrup and water will not satisfy, stimulate, nor adequately reward his expectations, founded upon even a verbal invitation. He appreciates terrapin and champagne, and getting them, seeks for the ulterior motive. "I've been asked to dinner twice this session by Smith. What do you suppose he wants?" queried a perturbed Congressman. And this is the all too usual view taken of even the simplest and most friendly hospitalities extended for good-fellowship's sake.

The family of a certain high official means came to Washington intent upon setting an example of Spartan simplicity and frugal elegance in the way of entertainments. They sent out engraved cards a fortnight beforehand, and the heated and crowded guests were regaled with a vision of a young lady, a teapot, and a plate of wafers when they reached the dining-room. Society naturally criticised, and a blunt old soldier wished that the money paid the engraver had been spent on a caterer, and that an informal entertainment had not succeeded a formal invitation. A shrewd, rich, and illiterate woman who came to Washington determined to get into society, looked the field over for a season, and said: "I know how to do it. Feed 'em!" And she did, and conquered, and rose to that ultra circle which affects to scorn officials and politicians, and hangs upon the diplomatic corps. The secret of such a social success lies solely in the pocket-book, the salad-bowl, and the punch-bowl, and is attained by any one who will judiciously distribute their contents. Such circles are the antipodes of a salon, but it is out of the mass of such material that a salon must choose its recruits, and people more or less affected by such social standards and surroundings must be educated and raised to a higher level. Because of this general vulgarity, a salon is all the more needed as a place of refuge for public men and clever people with trained and refined social tastes.—Harper's Bazar.

"It was very kind of you to print my poem, but I didn't want my name attached to it." "That was necessary, my dear friend," replied the editor, "for if I hadn't done so undeserved suspicion might have fallen on some of my other contributors, you know."—Pittsburgh Courier.

"What's that awful noise in the next room?" asked the early guest at the banquet. "That," replied the newspaper reporter, who had already arrived with a sharp pencil and a sharper appetite, "must be the table groaning under the delicacies of the season."—Norristown Herald.

Mrs. Hire (to applicant for cook's place).—"But how am I to know that you have had experience? Have you any recommendation?" Cook (producing a paper).—"Experience, is it? Look at that mum; it's a list of the crockery I've broke in the last twelve months."—Boston Transcript.

"I can't understand it, Reilly," said the Post-Office Superintendent. "These green hands get through your routes quicker than you do." "I know that," said the postman. "But you'd oughter remember they aren't acquainted with the door ladies. I have social responsibilities, sir."—New York Sun.

Youth in New Suit to Evident Tailor.—"Tell you what, I'll give you a $50 watch and we'll call it square," the young tailor—"Let me have it." Youth.—"Well, you'll have to wait till the close of the fair—but it's all right—here's my ticket for the chance—prettiest watch you ever saw!"—Philadelphia Record.

DO YOU WANT A HOME

On Easy Terms?

If So, Examine Our Lots, Prices and Terms Before You Buy, for we Can and will Save You Money

NOTICE THESE:

1.—A FINE STREET: This runs directly through the entire plat and in front of every lot, and there is more public travel than on any other except Main Street.

2.—SHADE TREES: We have nearly a mile of living shade trees, and every lot on the plat is provided with them. These alone must make this the most desirable residence street in the village. Don't neglect to examine for yourself.

3.—SIDEWALKS: A good sidewalk is provided for and is now being constructed. This makes a fine and continuous walk to all parts of the town. Take this into consideration in buying your home.

4.—DON'T PAY RENT: If you do you soon pay out the price of a home and are still homeless. We can sell you so that your rent will build you a home.

5.—MAKE A START: If you never buy a home you will never have one, and making a beginning you will save money that you would otherwise spend. Come and see us and we will treat you well.
