A SUDDEN BLOW

JUSTICE SAMUEL F. MILLER STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS.

HE RALLIED, BUT IS GROWING WORSE.

The Doctors Consider His Condition Critical, and Give No Hope.

THE CLOSE OF AN HONORED CAREER.

Mrs. Miller Overcome by the Shock---Many Sympathetic Visitors---The Jurist's Left Side Partially Paralyzed.

Justice Samuel F. Miller of the Supreme Court was stricken with paralysis of the left side yesterday afternoon while on his way home from the Capitol. He had been suffering from dysentery nearly all the summer, but returned to Washington last week feeling much better. He was feeling unusually well yesterday morning and walked part of the way on his road to the Capitol. During the day he appeared to be in very good health and spirits.

About 3 o'clock he left the Capitol for home, and, stopping the car at Thomas Circle, he started to walk to his home, about 150 yards distant, when he fell across the car track. He was immediately assisted into a cab by two colored men standing near by and conveyed to his residence, 1415 Massachusetts avenue, and carried into his private office.

Mrs. Miller, who was visiting friends, was notified, and upon her arrival the Judge was removed to his bedroom. His condition then did not papear to be serious, and he related in detail to the family his trip from the Capitol to his home, and laughed and joked with them, telling them not to be alarmed over his attack.

Drs. Cook and Lincoln were called in, and after an examination found the left side partially paralyzed from the arm down. About 10 o'clock, however, alarming symptoms developed, and the doctors were again called in. Sedatives were administered, and the Justice expressed himself as very comfortable, and had experienced no pain since the first attack.

During the evening the house was besieged with callers, among the first being Justice Blatchford, who had just arrived from New York. Chief Justice Fuller soon followed, and nearly all the associate judges called.

The Judge's strength has suffered severe tests within the last three years, and some time ago he underwent an extremely trying surgical operation. But, aside from the slight attacks of dysentery during the summer, he seemed in the most robust health and spirits.

Some years ago one of the Judge's sisters was attacked with a stroke of paralysis in almost the same manner as he has been. She recovered, however, and this fact gives some hope to the Judge's family.

Mrs. Miller and her son Irving are the only members of the family in the city at present. Of his two daughters, Mrs. Stocking is now in Vienna, and Mrs. Tonzalin is at her husband's ranch at Colorado Springs.

Late last night the Judge's condition became very alarming, and his side was found to be completely paralyzed. He was attended throughout the night by Drs. Lincoln and Cook, Professor Wilson of the Smithsonian and Chief Clerk McKenny of the Supreme Court.

This morning Dr. Cook reported Justice Miller's condition as being very critical, and that the family entertained no hope whatever of his recovery.

Chief Clerk McKenny, who had just come from the Justice's bedside, was seen this morning and expressed himself as having given up all hope. The Judge, he said, had lost a great deal of blood and had fallen into a comatose state. He was unable to recognize anybody and was slowly sinking. His wonderful vitality may sustain him for a few hours longer, but his death is but a question of hours. Dr. Lincoln has also given up all hope, and said that he did not expect the Justice to survive more than twenty-four hours.

Mrs. Miller is completely prostrated over the sad occurrence and is now under medical treatment.

The latest reports from Justice Miller's physicians are that the patient is gradually growing worse.

At 1:55 p. m. Justice Miller was sinking very fast. His phy-icians say that there can be no hope of his recovery, and that death is likely to occur at any moment.

Could Not Resist Temptation.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Mrs. Mary Rice, cashier of the Prudential Insurance Company of Jersey City, was arrested last night, charged with embezzlement. The company has been missing small sums of money, and finally had detectives to work on the case. The woman was detected by the old trick of marking money, which was found in her possession. Mrs. Rice is but 22 years of age and was recently married. She is well educated and has been employed by the company for the past three years.

THE CROWN WILL CONTINUE.

The Prosecution Decide to Continue the Trial of Dillon and O'Brien.

TIPPERARY, Oct. 11.—When the court opened this morning Mr. Ronan, counsel for the Crown, stated that since yesterday's adjournment of the court it had been decided that the Crown would continue the prosecution of the conspiracy cases, notwithstanding the absence of the defendants, Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien. Mr. Ronan contended that in the fact that the delinquent accused were absent by their own volition would be found ample justification for the recognition by the court of the Crown's right to proceed.

Mr. Healy, counsel for the defendants, argued at length that the course suggested by the Crown to be pursued was unjustifiable and impossible.

Mr. O'Mahoney, one of the defendants in the conspiracy cases, who has been unable, by reason of illness, to attend the sittings of the court up to the present time, but whom it was expected would appear shortly, is again prostrated, and his physicians have been ordered by the Court to make a report on his condition.

FLEECED BY AN OLD GAME.

A Farmer Swindled Out of $1,000 by Bunco Men.

GREENFIELD, MASS., Oct. 11.—T. B. Voice, a Shelbourne farmer, was yesterday fleeced of $1,000 by bunco men. He offered his farm for sale and a week ago a man representing himself as a son of a former North Adams banker named Brayton partly bargained for it. He came again yesterday with a companion and induced Voice to give him $1,000 on deposit for a trunk, said to contain $3,000, which he left with the farmer. The men then disappeared, and Voice, on opening the trunk, found that it contained only a lot of Confederate money and other things of no value.

She Loves Her Son Too Much to See Him Disinherited.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 11.—A sensation was created in business and social circles last night by the announcement that Mrs. Edward Langevin had refused to offer the will of her late husband for probate, although Mr. Langevin died three weeks ago. He left an estate valued at $4,000,000 divided pretty equally between his five children, with the exception of George W. Langevin, his only son, whom he left nothing on account of his waywardness. It is stated that Mrs. Langevin, with the consent of all the children, will burn the will and allow young Langevin to come into his full share of the estate under the common laws.

HIGH LICENSE

TEMPERANCE BELIEVERS HONOR FATHER MATHEW.

THE FAMOUS IRISH TOTAL ABSTAINER

Marshaled a Bigger Host Under His Banner Than the World's Armies.

BISHOP KEANE'S EULOGISTIC REMARKS.

The Centenary of the Great Apostle's Birth Appropriately Celebrated by His Disciples in This City.

The centenary of the birth of Father Mathew, the great apostle of temperance, was appropriately observed last night by the Father Mathew Total Abstinence Society of St. Patrick's parish at Carroll Institute Hall. The audience was a large one, the addresses excellent and the music by the Marine Band inspiring.

When the Right Rev. Bishop Keane, escorted by Fathers Walter, McGee, Mackin, Hannan, De Wolf (of Hyattsville) and Riorden (of Batnesville) and President Dougherty of the Father Mathew T. A. Society, entered the hall and advanced to the stage the audience arose and the orchestra played "Hail to the Chief." Bishop Keane was attired in his sacredotal robes and wore his golden cross and chain.

Father Walter presided and made a few opening remarks ending with the hope that the centennial celebration would be productive of good.

Father Hannan of Havre de Grace, Md., was the first speaker. It was, he said, in that hall (then old St. Patrick's Church) that he first knelt at the feet of Father Keane and made his vows in the cause of religion and temperance. He had returned again to renew his allegiance and to raise his voice in favor of high license.

Bishop Keane, upon rising to deliver his address, was warmly greeted with applause. "We come," he said, "to celebrate the birth of that great apostle of temperance, Father Mathew, to emulate his deeds and to carry on his work. Father Mathew had incomparably more disciples than Carroll, and more followers than fought under the banner of Washington. When Washington retired from the Presidency the United States had only 12,000,000 inhabitants. Throughout England, Scotland and Ireland Father Mathew could count 6,000,000 of persons who had enlisted under his banner.

Bishop Keane, continuing, drew a picture of the little school-house in Ireland in which on April 10, 1838, the first Catholic Temperance League of the world was organized. From that little school-house the cause of total abstinence spread over Europe and the United States. It did not end with Father Mathew's death, but, like the grain that is covered by the snows of winter, it now ripens in the springtime that follows. "I am opposed," he continued, "to the taking of liquor as a stimulant. There is no use for any man to take an artificial stimulant, and I have always set myself strongly against such a habit. Drunkenness today is looked upon as a disgrace, and the time may come when there will be no more drunkenness, but until that time does come we must strike the axe to the roots of the tree and tear up the roots. Every one should emulate the example and carry on the work of Father Mathew.

Bishop Keane was followed by Mr. Milton E. Smith, editor of the Church News of this city, who gave some sound, practical arguments in favor of total abstinence. Father McGee was the last speaker and was frequently applauded throughout his remarks. He said that he was in favor of high license.

After passing the following resolutions the meeting adjourned:

Resolved, That this meeting of temperance people, who are residents of the District of Columbia and city of Washington, desiring to advance as much as may be in their power the progress of the cause of temperance and good morals, express their approval of the high license for said District now pending before the Congress of the United States, and approved by the honorable Commissioners of said District. It is our belief that the enactment of such a law will largely diminish the number of saloons that are now permitted to carry on a business that we believe is injurious to the best interests of the city, will increase the peace and good order of society, diminish the burdens of taxation, and materially aid us in our efforts to minimize the sin and consequent evils of intemperance.

Resolved, That we earnestly commend to the members of the Catholic Church of this city the cause of total abstinence as advocated and practiced by the Father Mathew Total Abstinence Society of the city of Washington. It has brought peace, happiness and prosperity to many desolate homes, and it is worthy of the cordial encouragement and support of all Christian people, who contemplate with sorrow the existence of the sin of intemperance.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and to the Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States.

Theobald Mathew was born on the 10th of October, 1790, at Thomastown House, near Cashel, Tipperary, at that time the seat of George Mathew, earl of Llandaff. At an early age young Theobald was sent to Maynooth to be educated for the Catholic priesthood; but an infraction of discipline, said to be the entertainment of some fellow students in his rooms at forbidden hours, led to his retirement from college. He completed his ecclesiastical training, however, at the Capuchin College, Kilkenny, and was ordained in 1814. After a few years of clerical labor in the city of St. Cathe, he was moved by his superiors to the Cork friary of the order, where he devoted himself with more than ordinary zeal to the duties of his position.

In the burst of success which hailed Father Matthew's crusade against intoxicating drink, people came to regard him as the originator of parent of the temperance movement; yet this was not so. He was a recruit, brought slowly to espouse the cause which but for his adhesion might have perished in Ireland. As early, at all events, as 1836, there was in Cork a little band of men who had embraced the doctrine of total abstinence from alcoholic beverages. They were chiefly Protestants, says Alexander M. Sullivan in "New Ireland," some of the most active among them belonging to a religious denomination the members of which have been leaders in nearly every social and moral reform and every humane and philanthropic effort in Ireland—the Society of Friends.

Toiling laboriously amidst the squalor and poverty of the poorest quarter of Cork city, the young Capuchin was at this time laying the foundation for that marvelous personal influence which afterwards formed so great a part of his power. He was not content with discharging the ordinary duties of his sacred calling, although these were in themselves severe and trying. He pushed entirely outside the strictly spiritual sphere. He set up schools—infant and adult, Sunday and weekday; rented a loft here and a thatched floor there, wherein he established industrial teaching; the girls being taught various knitting and needle work occupations, the boys such trades as seemed most suitable. Then there was not a dispensary or an hospital, not an alms society or room-keepers' aid fund, in Cork, that he was not in the thick of the work, pushing on every good endeavour, and constantly devising some new experiment in the same direction. Before long the name of the young friar was a household word; his untiring activity, his noble unselfishness, his ardent anxiety for upraising the moral and social condition of the wretched masses, were the theme of every tongue. It is said that of the population of Ireland, which was then seven millions, five millions took the pledge from Father Mathew, and his success was equally wonderful in other lands. On the 8th of December, 1856, after a life of usefulness and honor, he died in the city of Cork.

HIS VISIT TO WASHINGTON.

The story of Father Mathew's visit to Washington is an exceedingly interesting one. Seldom, if ever, has a man received such honors from the hands of Congress as did Father Mathew, and, too, it is doubtful if any other man ever unintentionally created such a commotion in political circles at the Capital in so brief a visit as he did. The fame of the great temperance orator had reached America years before he landed in New York on the morning of July 2, 1849, so that when it was known that he was on our shores invitations poured in upon him from all the large cities in the Union. The great meeting in Irving Hall, New York, was one of the most noted in the city's history. Daily levees in the City Hall were the programme for a week. While there, Hon. Millard Fillmore, Vice President of the United States, and Hon. Lewis Cass called upon him and invited him to visit Washington. About this time William Lloyd Garrison extended him an invitation to visit Boston as the guest of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, and Father Mathew unwittingly complied with the request. This afterward caused much embarrassment to Father Mathew, as will be seen later on.

In Boston he addressed very large audiences on temperance, and refused to be dragged by Mr. Garrison into discussing the slavery question. Philadelphia paid him equal honors, and on December 13 he arrived in Washington. As soon as his coming was made known to Congress a resolution was unanimously carried in the House admitting him to a seat.

THE HIGHEST DISTINCTION

that could be conferred upon the subject of another country by the Representatives of our republic. The following day, when Father Mathew entered the Hall, the members rose to receive him, and an informal reception was held during the noon recess. In the meantime a resolution had been offered in the Senate extending him the courtesies of that body, which gave rise to a most animated debate. Senator Walker of Wisconsin had moved "that the Rev. Theobald Mathew be allowed a seat within the bar of the United States Senate during the period of his sojourn in Washington."

Mr. Clements was the first to oppose the passage of the resolution, and said: "The reason which prompts me to make objection is that I have been informed that the individual named in the resolution has been charged with denouncing a portion of this Confederacy with the maintenance of an institution which he is pleased to characterize as a sin and a crime, and when respectfully invited by the Governor of Georgia to express his views in relation to the he refused to answer. Under these circumstances I do not think I could conscientiously suffer such a resolution to pass. I therefore object to the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Clay expressed deep regret that any opposition should have been made, and said in concluding a half hour's speech on the resolution: "It is intended as a homage to a distinguished foreigner for his humanity, his benovolence, his philanthropy and his virtue. It is but a merited tribute to a man who has achieved a great social revolution, a revolution in which no blood has been shed, a revolution which has involved no desolation, a revolution which has caused no bitter tears of widows and orphans to flow, a revolution which has been achieved without violence, and a greater one, perhaps, than has ever been accomplished by any benefactor of mankind."

Mr. Seward delivered an eloquent eulogium upon the object of this intended compliment. Mr. Hall said he would gladly vote for the resolution as a tribute to the virtues and the philanthropy of Father Mathew, although he disapproved of the course which he had taken on the slavery question.

JEFFERSON DAVIS THEN TOOK THE FLOOR, and made a very bitter attack on Father Mathew. He said: "Shall this Senate, having upon its floor those who represent a slave holding constituency, vote an extraordinary compliment to one known as the ally of O'Connell, and in whose opinions he coincides? Why, if he came here as a guest to share our hospitality, and not to disturb the peace of the country, did he not say that our domestic affairs are our own, and that he came here to express no opinions in relation to slavery? No; but he comes covertly, a wolf in sheep's clothing, and I shall oppose his entry into this chamber by my vote."

Mr. Cass deprecated the introduction of the slavery question, respecting which the public mind was already in a high state of excitement. "This is but a complimentary notice of a very distinguished stranger."

Mr. Foot, Mr. Downs and others followed in support of the resolution, which was finally carried by a vote of 33 to 18—an honor which had been previously conferred by America only on Lafayette, and now accorded to who had won a name even more glorious by his services in the cause of suffering humanity.

Father Mathew delivered his famous address in the hall of the House of Representatives the following evening, and the next day he was the guest of the President of the United States at the Executive Mansion, who gave a grand dinner in his honor, to which fifty guests, including the foremost men in the country, had been invited. The President in person presented each member of the distinguished company to Father Mathew. It is said of this dinner that though the choicest wines of Europe sparkled on the board, not a drop was used by the company out of respect to the guest of the evening.

MEN OF BRAWN.

CHAMPIONSHIP MEETING OF THE AMATEUR ATHLETIC UNION.

Big Crowd at Analostan Island---Many Ladies Present---Excellent Sport Furnished by the Crack Performers.

The third annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union, the most important gathering of its kind ever held in America, took place at Analostan Island on the Potomac river to-day, and was distinctly successful in every respect. The weather was perfect for the knights of brawny muscle, and long before the hour at which the games were scheduled to begin thousands of people made their way to Georgetown whence they were ferried to the island. There was a large contingent of handsomely attired ladies present. Impromptu stands had been erected from every point of advantage, and although there was more or less crowding every one managed to squeeze into a resting place.

The scene along the river front at Georgetown was an attractive one, and not since the famous sculling race between Hanlan and Courtney have the banks of the historic old Potomac presented such an interesting sight. The contest proper were held on the grounds of the Columbia Athletic Club, to whose management credit for the success of the meeting is due. The track and lawn on the grounds were in excellent condition. There was a large list of entries, and each event furnished an exciting finish and caused great enthusiasm. More than 100 delegates were present, representing as many clubs.

The officials having charge of track and field events were as follows:

Referee—F. W. Eddy, D. A. C.

Inspectors—A. G. Stevens, N. J. A. C.; Edward Milligan, A. C. S. N.; G. S. Atwater, C. A. C.; A. H. Hartwell, P. A. C.; J. B. Stead, N. Y. A. C.

The events were conducted much after the manner of a two-ring circus, so many contests having been arranged that it was deemed advisable to have several of them occur simultaneously. The first exhibition was a game of lacrosse, the first of its kind ever played in Washington, the Staten Island and Schuylkill Navy clubs being the competitors. These clubs were named as follows:

Staten Island—Goal, H. A. Matthews; point, D. Brown; cover point, Cyrus C. Miller; first defense field, W. Mitchell; second defense field, W. C. Post; third defense field; W. Schrage; center field, A. D. Richey; third attack field, W. C. Davis; first attack field, R. G. Moses; outside attack, W. D. King; inside attack, R. Mathews, substitutes, E. J. Carter and W. Curry.

Ogle; third attack, H. Chesterman; second attack, J. W. Greer; first attack, R. D. Adam; outside, H. H. Larkin; inside, J. H. Shell; substitutes, George Hoskins, F. Rose and W. H. Milne.

The lacrosse began promptly at 10:30 o'clock, and at the end of the first half of the game the score stood two to one in favor of the Staten Island team.

The game was finally won by Staten Island by a score of 7 against 1. Preparations were then made for continuing the programme.

In the 440 yards run, trial heats, the first heat was won by Downs of the New York Athletic Club, and the second heat by Dickinson of the Columbia Athletic Club of Washington.

Death Under Peculiar Circumstances.

KALAMAZOO, MICH., Oct. 11.—Charles E. Killam of the Michigan Buggy Works was found dead by the side of the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad track last evening, with a gash in his head. There is no theory as to the cause of his death. The wound itself could hardly have produced fatal results.

WILL NOT PARTICIPATE.

The State Commander of Missouri Says Harrison's Trip Is Purely Political.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—A special to the Sun from St. Joseph, Mo., says: The Sons of Veterans had made arrangements to participate in the reception to President Harrison, when State Commander Kline ordered them to drop the reception. Kline says the President's trip is clearly political, and as the organization purported to be non-political the Sons of Veterans should keep hands off. A St. Louis camp which was making preparations for a reception was also ordered to desist.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—A special to the Herald from St. Louis says: The order of State Commander Kline ordering the Sons of Veterans not to participate in any reception to the President has caused considerable excitement in local G. A. R. circles. The lieutenant-colonel of the department said last night that the camp here would certainly disregard the order and turn out as the President's escort. He claims that the coming reception is in no way political. Over 5,000 veterans and sons of veterans are expected to be in line.

As the train was slowing up to take water the engine was mounted from each side by the masked robbers, who compelled the engineer to dismount and knock at the express door for admittance. The messenger threw out the money packages. It was not a heavy money train. The robbers were evidently novices. The proceedure was very similar to the recent work at Otterville.

The firm yesterday confessed judgment to ex Postmaster John A. Myler for $12,088. Mr. Myler has been appointed trustee for the firm. Mr. Waller of the firm estimates the company's assets at $18,000. A TIRED MAN

WAS THE PRESIDENT---THE PUBLIC TIRED, TOO.

TAMMANY'S TICKET AGAINST THE FIELD

Grant for Mayor---De Lancey Nicoll for District Attorney.

NON POLITICAL DINNER IN NEW YORK,

At Which Many Politicians Are Present. Depew's Eulogy of Cleveland---How the Ex President Looks.

The press dispatches convey the information that yesterday President Harrison spent a most exacting day in receiving the public at the points visited in Missouri and Kansas, and that last night he was en route for St. Louis a very much fatigued traveler.

There has probably never been a President who became tired oftener, easier or for longer periods than Benjamin Harrison.

"The President is tired and needs a rest," has been a pretty constant refrain since Harrison was inaugurated.

The public heartily reciprocates the feeling.

It is Tammany against the field in New York city. The Tammany Democracy put a complete city and county ticket in the field last night. It is headed by Mayor Hugh J. Grant. Another notable name on the ticket is that of Delancey Nicoll for District Attorney. He is the bright, brilliant and brave young lawyer who, as Assistant District Attorney, sent the boodlers to the penitentiary. The others are all representative citizens of New York and Democrats.

A notable dinner, which, though non-political, was attended by many politicians, was that given last night at the Astor House, New York, by John Russell Young, ex-Minister to China, to General Roger A. Pryor, in honor of his elevation to the Bench by Governor Hill. There were present as guests ex President Cleveland, Chauncey M. Depew, Henry George, John S. Wise, General W. T. Sherman, Senator A. P. Gorman, Senator George Hearst, General Daniel E. Sickles, Daniel Dougherty, Murat Halstead, Dan Lamont, Joseph Jefferson, William J. Florence, ex-Congressman John B. Haskins, Thomas Nast, John Chamberlin, Captain Robeson of the Navy and a lot of newspaper men.

Each distinguished guest introduced to the party another distinguished guest. It fell to the lot of Mr. Depew to introduce Mr. Cleveland. In so doing he spoke as follows:

"If I were asked to name the most forceful character in American life, the man who best represents the energy, the unswerving determination and the courage of the true American, the man who knows duty and it alone when public service commands it, the man who wars in war and is for peace in peace, I would name General W. T. Sherman.

"But if I am to name the typical American, the man who loves and believes in his country beyond everything else, the man who, determining once in what direction his duty leads, cannot be swerved from the path, the man who is doggedly persistent in what he believes to be right, the man who thinks not of self, but of his country and its needs, I would name Grover Cleveland. What he has accomplished is the very highest tribute to the possibilities of American citizenship. A country lawyer in the city of Buffalo, he shed lustre upon the high profession which he had chosen. As the Mayor of his native city he presented as his record a clean and economical administration. Coming into the highest position in the land without previous experience and with scarcely a precedent to guide him in the conditions which surrounded him, he won the affection of his party and commanded the respect and admiration of his opponents. I find myself in one of the proudest positions of my life in being permitted to present to you Grover Cleveland as the typical American."

The warmth of this eulogy, coming from a man frequently named as a possible Republican nominee for President, caused in the hearers admiration and amazement, and led to long continued applause.

Mr. Cleveland arose, bowed to Mr. Depew and said, with much feeling:

"If what has been said of me is true I occupy a prouder position than I ever dreamed of occupying."

Afterward he spoke only as a lawyer. His appearance is described as being that of a man in the perfection of physical vigor. He evidently weighs less than when he left the White House. His skin was clear and his eyes bright. His form was erect and he spoke with the high, sharp voice of a young man.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 11.—The President arrived here at 8 a. m. very tired. Private secretary Halford came near being lost in Kansas City and left behind last night. After the train had started it was found he was not on board. The train was run back and he was found and put on.

All night long the quiet, cool President's rest was disturbed by brass bands and cries of "Cleveland and show yourself." He was not tired to go.

At St. Louis he was received by the Governor of Missouri and the Mayor of the city. The military, G. A. R., and like organizations turned out. The crowds of people wanted a speech, but the President was too tired to respond. If not too tired, he will visit the fair this afternoon.
