WALLACE SAYS ZIONISM
IN U. S. GROWING

LONDON (JTA) — Although most American Jews are not (organized) Zionists, they have developed since the end of the war a strong sympathy for the Jews of Palestine, Henry Wallace told a press conference here. He described the growth of pro-Zionist sentiments among U. S. Jews as "an amazing development."

Wallace, who is in England at the invitation of a group of British liberals, refused to comment when asked what solution of the Palestine problem he favored, explaining that he was here as a guest. He added that American Jews feel very deeply on the Palestine question and have given with extraordinary liberality to the Jewish community there.

He said that when many of his Jewish friends in America ask him how Britain can have difficulty in maintaining 12,000 troops in Greece, when she apparently has no trouble in maintaining 100,000 troops in Palestine, he "can't answer that." He commented briefly on the clash of American, Russian and British interests in the oil bearing sections of the Middle East.

Asked if resettlement of Jews was hampered by immigration restrictions in the U. S., he replied that it is quite true that before America criticizes British policy in Palestine she should be ready to admit more Jewish and other refugees from Central Europe. However, he added, if the U. S. opened its doors to all Jews who wished to come, that would still not solve the Palestine problem.

Replying to another question, Wallace said that he favored the creation of a Jordan Valley authority in Palestine, which would provide electric power for industry and water to irrigate huge areas of presently barren land.

The Southeastern Young Judaeon Conference is being planned by Jacksonville to be held on June 21-24 . . . In charge of the event is Morris Worman and Edwin Presser . . . Although publicity for the event is being sent out to all organized chapters, I have been asked to extend an invitation to all young men and women between the ages of 14 and 18 living in small communities where there is no opportunity to affiliate to plan to attend the convention . . . All those desiring to make arrangements for housing are asked to contact this column by writing P. O. Box 903 . . . The local organization will be happy to take care of them . . .

The point was recently made by a former small town girl that lone Jewish families in small communities are more apt to become conscientious Jews than Jews living in large Jewish centers . . . A census taken in New York and any quick glance of the Jewish families in small Florida communities bears out this observation . . . It is through the suggestions of the small town matron that this invitation to the young people of such communities as Live Oak, Waycross, etc. is being made . . . There is a hunger in the small communities for things Jewish . . . Attending conventions can do a great deal to satisfy that hunger.
