Reunited With Mother After Twenty Long Years

Max Knisbacher, of Baltimore, sweeps his mother, Mrs. Cilli Knisbacher, 68, off her feet and into his arms as she disembarks in New York with her granddaughter, Gisele Strassburg, 18. Their immigration was aided by HIAS, the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society. Max and his mother parted 20 years ago, and he last saw her 10 years ago when, as a G.I., he was stationed in Belgium. The parents of Gisele, his niece, were deported by the Nazis when they invaded Belgium, and were never heard from again. The girl's grandmother brought her up. HIAS filed the necessary documents to bring Mrs. Knisbacher and her granddaughter to the U. S., where they will live with her son in Baltimore.

Gentiles Protest Anti-Jewish Paper in Maine

PORTLAND, Me. — Statewide protest by religious, civic and political leaders against the distribution throughout the state of the anti-Semitic publication "Common Sense" was reported here last week by Attorney William Cohen of Lewiston, state chairman of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

Sharp counter-action to the appearance of the anti-Semitic publication in Portland, Bangor, Augusta and Lewiston resulted almost immediately as soon as the extent of the circulation was made known by the ADL. Protestant religious leaders in Portland issued a statement saying "we are concerned about the dangerous divisive character of this paper. Jews and Gentiles in Maine have always had a fine relationship and the attempt to set group against group and brother against brother is against the best interests of America and religion.

"In making this statement, we join with other organizations such as the Rhode Island Legislature, the Massachusetts Legislature, the Knights of Columbus and the American Legion Committee on Americanism in Maine who have on other occasions vigorously opposed the tactics of Conde McGinley of New Jersey, who publishes this paper."

BRAZILIAN JEWISH YOUTH GROUP SETTLES IN NEGEV

A group of 24 Jewish youths left Brazil to settle in a Negev cooperative last week. This is the fifth group of the Brazilian Zionist youth organization, "Dror-Gordonia" which is settling in Israel. About 200 Jewish youths have left Brazil to settle in Israel agricultural cooperatives during the last few years.
