OPEN SHOP IS FEARED

CONFERENCE REQUEST OF MAS-TER PAINTERS IS SO REGARDED.

Jnion Men and Employers are Now Discussing Matters of Interest to Both Builders' Exchange Sent Out Ultimatum to Unions Several Weeks Ago, But Nothing Further Was Done. Now It Is Feared That Fight

Minneapolis, Minn., June 9 .- Arrangements have been completed for a conference of the representatives of the local Painters' union and the employers, which will be held today. It is the belief that the conference has been asked for by the master painters in an effort to secure the open shop. The painters have contracts with nearly all the local contractors for the present season, in which this question is fully covered and guarded against, and it is not likely the union will at this time consent to any modification of the terms of the agreement entered into with the Master Painters' association last spring. The committee chosen by the union is made up as follows: S. J .Spencer, M. Jurgenson, C. Harriman, A. G. Bainbridge, C. D. Newton, C. J. Axen and R. L. Warham..

Although several weeks have passed since the ultimatum of the Builders and Trades' Exchange was received by the officials of the Buildings Trades Council, nothing of a serious nature has happened to disturbe the industrial peace. But there is a feeling of uneasiness and uncertainty among both contractors and workmen in the building trades which is becoming more marked and a storm may break out at any time. Neither side is anxious to take the initiative but men who ought to know say that the questions at issue will have to be met sooner or later and settled amicably or fought to a finish. The unions are anxious to avoid a tie-up of building operations, and are doing their utmost so to conduct their affairs as to render such a thing impossible.

The action begun by certain electrical contractors against the officers of the Building Trades Council and the Electrical Workers' Union is regarded as simply another move on th epart of the "open shop" contractors to place the unions in such a position as to compel the workmen to work upon buildings where non-union men are employed. The decision in this case may have the effect of forcing the issue and should the courts decide that union men must work upon contracts without regard to the presence of non-union workmen, the result will be hard to determine. The unions are not at all alarmed, and the officials say they feel secure because they have refrained from all acts forbidden in the injunction governing the case. The matter comes up for hearing next Monday.

'CONSPICUOUS BY HIS ABSENCE."

From the Kansas City Journal: The authorship of the significant "conspicuous by his absence," which has been used unnumbered times, is in loose dispute. The London Saturday Review gave it to Shakespeare; the New York Times Saturday Review described it as "a clumsy adaption of a French phrase;" a corespondent of the last named review, correcting both, says it was "really an adaption by Lord Brougham, I believe, of an expression of Tacitus, who at the close of the third book of the Annals. describes the funeral of Junia, the sister of Brutus and wife of Cassius, who survived her husband and her brother for sixty-three years and died in the reign of Tiberius. Twenty images of her illustrious relatives or connections were caried before her bier, 'sed praefulgebant Cassius atque visebantur.' This writer is correct, except as to the English adapter, and he and the others could have found all about it by consulting Bartlett's Dictionary of Familiar Quotations, where the phrase of Tacitus is quoted from the Bohn translation, as follows: "The images of twenty of the most ilustrious families -the Manlii, the Quinctil and other names of equal splendor-were carried before it. Those of Brutus and Cassius were not displayed, but for that rea they shone with pre-eminent

THINGS THAT WENT WRONG.

From the Chicago Tribune.

The other morning Mr. Wilkins Hablixell, a citizen of the Fourth ward, called at the office of a down town "I want to know," he said, evidently laboring under strong excitement, "if a school teacher can be sued for whipping a scholar." "Certainly," the lawver replied.

"Well I want to bring suit against the principal of the school in the district where I live and I want damages. He whipped my boy one day last week." "The punishment was unusually sev ere I presume."
"I don't know whether it was or not not, and I don't care, but I take the ground that when a boy is punished at school he ought to show some improve-ment, and the youngster's worse now than he was before he got the licking. I want to make that man pay for the deterioration in my boy's character,

VIA INLAND WATERS.

From the New York Tribune:
A detachment of the New Jersey Naval Militia is going to the St. Louis Fair by inland waters, embarking in a cutter, and using only sails and oars. The route wil be from New York to Buffalo by way of the Erie Canal, from Buffalo to Toledo by way of Lake Erie, from Toledo to Cin-cinnati by way of the Miami-Erie canal, down the Ohio River from Cincinnati Cairo, and from Cairo to St. Louis on the Mississippi. The amateur mariners wil be given a camping place on the grounds, through the courtesy of the exposition management with wharfage for their boat. The return trip will be made by way of New Orleans, and from there by merchant vessel.

DRAMATIC FORM.

"How far," mused the dramatist of the old school, "should substance be sacrificed to form?"

The dramatist of the new school stared perplexedly.

"When you say substance you doubtless mean costume," said he, after a moment.

INSPIRATION

FOR "ULALUME."

From the Metropolitan Magazine: On the post road, a little to the east of Mamaroneck, we stopped at a small a brook. Curiously remote from the world seemed this ancient, unpreten-tious hostelry. Outside through screening vines, you could see the yellow sun-light and the purple shadows. The brook brawled from some unseen depth in the leafage. When it was time to take the road again we decided to follow the brook seaward. At one turn in the wandering path our exclamations of delight and interest caught a new ac-cent, or rather they were stilled alto-gether in awesome wonder. A little way before us, their solemn Gothic forms tantic row of cypresss trees loomed out from the sunny landscape. Once with-in the enclosures the cypresses shut out all the world. They were found to hedge with their towering shapes a little round cemetery established more than a century ago on the steep sloping hillside. At the top of the cemetery there stands a low stone vault faced with an iron door. 'Ulalume—Illalume Tis the vault of thy lost Ulalume." The clue once hit upon, it was easy to recognize in the sedgy stretch of shallow tide-water Poe's "dim lake of Auber" and in the spectral cypresses "the gouhl-haunted woodland of Weir."

SCRAPS OF FUTURE HISTORY.

Stealthily the stalwart, determined men surrounded the house, undetected, owing to the darkness and the dense og that covered everything.

Posting one of their number, fully armed, at every possible avenue of escape, the leader accompanied by a dozen trusty followers upon whose courage and fidelity he knew he could rely in any emergency, approached a rear door.

At a given signal they threw their united weight against it.

The door yielded, and the next moment they were inside.
Rushing through the house they soon found the man for whom they were
