SENSIBLE TALK ON STREET CAR CONDUCT at the few men who are too tired to

Courtesy in Men is Good, But There Are Sacrifices That No Woman Ought to Expect.

By CYNTHIA GREY.

Should a man give up his seat in a street car to a woman? Yes, and no. The man who will selfishly allow his ailing wife to get up in the morning and thaw out the water pipes before he rises, will often give up his seat in a crowded car to a woman who has nothing else in life to do but gad around bothering her busy friends. Oh, if he would be a little more ourteous and considerate at home, and less polite in public.

Courtesy is beautiful at all times if somewhat rare—but there are sacrifices no woman ought to ask or ex-

Why should the working man, who has toiled all day in some noisy shop, or under the broiling sun, and who completely exhausted, give his seat in a car to a woman, unless she is very old or in ill health?

Women, young and strong, with rosy cheeks and bright eyes, who have never done a day's real work in their lives, who do not know the meaning of exhaustion, fight with workers for seats at the rush hour, and if they are obliged to stand, look scornfully

There is nothing fair or just in this. The thoughtful woman would try to keep of the cars at such times, when there are not nearly enough seats for those who need them and should have

People with good sense do not expect a man to give up his seat on a street car, if for any reason he needs it worse than the woman who is hanging to a strap, or should the worker feel obliged to give up his seat to the idler-even if that idler is a woman. Other things being equal, a man is better fitted by nature for strap hanging than a woman, but the woman has re right to his seat, as so many seem to think. SERVANTS SIT AT THE COMMON TABLE

New Housekeeper in White House Abolishes Certain Differences Down Stairs.

WASHINGTON, May1.-There is great excitement among the hired help at the White House. The new housekeeper brought in by the Tafts has ordered that the three separate dining rooms hretofore maintained by the colored servants be merged into one and that all shall eat together in the future. Up to present there were three "sets" among the help employed by the president-first, the upstairs crowd, which includes the waiters, the coachmen, and the chambermaids with the colored steward presiding; second, the kitchen help; third the laundresses and scrubwomen. The members of the first class have been living on the fat o fthe land and have had a share of everything that the president's afmily ate. The kitchen nelp fared pretty well but not quite so sumptuously, and the third were glad to get what was placed before them.

Under the new regime the housekeeper will insist not merely on all the colored help eating together, but on their getting only plain food. The haughty waiters, coachmen and chambermaids will no longer partake of quail on toast, mushrooms or strawberries in the winter. They are awfully sore over their descent to the common level of the other help, but none has yet resigned his job.

WOMAN AS SHE COMPARES WITH MAN

Woman, as she compares with man, was the gist of a lecture given not long ago by a well-known professor. He thus analyzed a woman's mental qualities:

Sensation-Woman just as sensitive as men. Perception-Very quick; more so than men. Memory-The sexes are equal. Feeling and emotion-Women differ materially from men.

Obstinacy and Sympathy-Strongly developed in women. Jealousy-Another important quality of women.

Love-The most important thing in woman's life. Incidentally the lecturer referred to flirting. "I do not believe," he said, "that women are particularly desirous of flirting first with one man, then with another. They are simply prospecting; just inquiring into the mental condition of different men, to find which is the type suitable to themselves."

Married "Old Maids."-The true "old maid," like the true poet, is born, not made, old maidishness being a question of innate character rather than of incidental condition. There are old maids of every state, and age, and sex, says Ellen Thorneycroft Fowlercreatures who revel in fuss and fatten upon detail, and abide in the narrowest of narrow ruts. Do we not all know married women with large families who are nevertheless old maids to the backbone, just as we know adorable elderly spinsters who have the minds o fgirls and the hearts of mothers? And do we not also know members of the so-called stronger sex whose absorption in trifles and avidity for gossip proclaim them old maids o fthe purest water?

The Ideal Hostess-She must make you feel individually that you are the favored guest. She must make you feel perfectly at home. She must see everything, and yet possess the art of seeming to see nothing. She must never look bored. She must know how to get congenial people together. She must know how to keep conversation going. She must never let anyone be slighted or overlooked, especially shy and unimportant guests. She must know when to ask the amateur mucician to display his or her talents. She must remember that nothing is so tiresome-so surely death to all enjoyment-as the feeling that one is being entertained.

they become a cream, then add two well-beaten eggs and one cupful of milk. Mix two heaping teaspoonfuls of cosos powder with two heaping cupfuls of baking powder. Sift these well together, then mix into a paste thoroughly with a fork and bake fifteen minutes in a moderate oven.

Delicious Raised Doughnuts. Put into a bowl one cupful of sugar and stir through it half a cupful of butter; then add two eggs, one pint of warm milk, one cupful of yeast, one yeast cake dissolved in warm water, half a teaspoonful each of soda and salt and a dash of nutmeg. Mix with flour like soft bread dough and let it rise over night. Turn out the next morning on a floured board, roll out one inch thick and cut into rings and let rise again until very light. Fry in hot fat, turning often. When cold, roll in powdered sugar. If these doughnuts are kept in a jar and heated and rolled in sugar until they are needed, they will seem like freshly cooked cakes. Spice Cake.

Stir together half a cupful of light brown sugar, half a cup of maple syrup, one tablespoonful of molasses one teaspoonful of cinhamon, onequarter of a teaspoonful each of mace and cloves, a pinch of salt, one tablespoonful of butter, and one small teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one cupful of sour milk. Stir with a silver fork and bake in patty pans.

Pinafore Cake. Cream together one and a half cupfuls of sugar and one cupful of butter. Stir in the beaten yolks of four eggs Add half a cupful of milk, one and a half cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonsfuls of baking powder, and half a cupful of cornstarch. Fold in at the last the stiffly-beaten whites of the four eggs.

Ring Cake. Bake a sponge cake in a ring tin; if you have not this kind of a tin, the center of a round or square loaf may be removed and replaced by the cream The cream must be beaten quite stiff and gelatine added to it, prepared by soaking one tablespoonful in enough cold water just to cover it until it is dissolve it, and when it is cold, but one pint of stiffly whipped cream. Fill the hollow center of the cake with this and stand away for an hour o two. Small cakes may be hollowed and filled in the same way.

Martha Washington Waffles. Beat six eggs separately until very light, put yolks and whites together sift into them one quart of flour and one teaspoonful of salt. Add one tablespoonful of melted butter, one and a half pints of new milk and three tablespoonsfuls of yeast. Let this rise overnight; stir well in the morning and bake in well-greased waffle irons.

Never-Fail Sponge Cake. Separate the whites and yolks of four eggs; place one of the whites in the mixing bowl and beat this until stiff, then add the four yolks. Beat a pound of sugar; place over the fire and stir constantly until the mixture is of a honey-like consistency. As there is a great tendency to burn, keep the pan tipning from side to side as you stir, never relaxing vigilance. Some cooks would use a double boiler to prevent this mishap, but it is better to cook rapidly. Now add the whites of four eggs, previously beaten, and stir as before over the fire for six or seven minutes, being more careful not to let it burn. Test it by pouring a teaspoonful on a plate dusted with cornstarch: if in a moment it seems firm, yet tender, the marshmallows are done. The hot mixture should be rather thin and not adhesive. Flavor with rose or vanilla and pour in pans dusted over with cornstarch. Square pans are best. The paste should be about three-quarters of an inch in thickness. Set on the ice to chill, and when cold cut into squares with a knife dipped into cornstarch.

Old-Fashioned Piepiant Pie. We are always looking for something appetizing this time of the year, and we all agree that pieplant is a healthful spring relish. A most delicious way to prepare this is to cut without peeling the tender stalks into pieces an inch long, put into an enameled or earthenware stew kettle, cover with granulated sugar in the proportion of a cupful of sugar to a pint of rhubarb, and let stand several hours, or until it has formed its own juice, then cook for five minutes, without stirring.

This can be served as a sauce, with a good shortcake crust. In making pieplant pie, cut small pfeces into your crust, then pour over them a sauce made of sufficient sugar to sweeten, mixed with a tablespoon-enough water to mix together the sugar and flour. If you take the additional caution of dampening the edge of lower crust before putting on the upper, you may
