Something to Think About By F. A. WALKER

IMAGINATION

SAT the other day in the studio of a great artist and watched him as he made ready to begin a picture. As he placed the canvas upon the easel I asked him what he was to paint.

The answer that he made to me was so vivid and so strikingly told that I almost seemed to see upon the blank canvas the finished work.

But I knew what I saw was only a dim counterpart of the thing that he saw, for in his imagination the whole picture was as plain in its form and as distinct in its colors, in its then mental existence, as it was later to be to thousands of admiring

This world would be a sad and desolate place without imagination. Art would falter and science would dry up and blow away. Imagination is the real accomplishment.

If the boy did not vision the man did not imagine himself as he will be when he grows up, all the great incentives of youth would vanish and all its endeavor disappear,

Nothing is so exhilarating a spur to endeavor as the imagination of what will result from effort.

It is the imaginings of what money will buy for us in necessities, comforts and luxuries that keep us keenly at its earning and conscientiously at its saving.

It is the imagining of what may be the result that keeps the chemist in his laboratory through night hours or the student at his books when nature would send him to bed.

Imagination helps us to live and it not infrequently causes us to die, A felon in an English prison, who had been sentenced to death, was made the subject of an experiment which showed the power of imagined suffering. He was blindfolded and it was explained to him that in the place of the usual form of execution he was to be bled to death. His arm was bared and across the large vein on the inside of the elbow joint was drawn, but without making any wound, the edge of a knife, immediately there was caused to flow down his arm a stream of blood-warm

Attendants counted his pulse and carried on a whispered conversation about the evidences of failing vitality.

Slowly the man grew weaker, his flesh lost its color, and about the time that a man would have bled to death from such a wound actually inflicted, the prisoner died from pure imagination.

Half our ills are no more substantial than was the cut in the prisoner's arm, but we, like him, suffer through our imaginations all the pains

"Imagination," said Napoleon, "rules Imagination ruled Napoleon. He lived on the vision of himself as conqueror, of Europe.

He imagined his battles long before the first gun of conflict sounded, and though he dwelt on victory he in his imagination Waterloo as lainly as Marengo or Austerlitz. Swifter than light the imagination travels in an instant of time to the outermost star of our universe and returns as quickly as it went.

It defies time and annihilates

It disregards probability and overlooks all laws. It has pioneered every progress that man has made since the world began and multiplied his happiness and his ills alike. It is one function which man possesses which he does not share with forms of life lower than himself. There are many animals who give proof of having the power of thought, even of reason.

There is not one that has ever shown the slightest evidence of being able to imagine anything outside of something it has already experienced.

Do you cultivate your imagination? Do you guide it along right and useful lines and direct it into resultgetting endeavors?

If you do not you are wasting a power that God bestowed on you when He said, "Let them (man) have dominion over all the earth."

Imagination will help you to have that dominion if you use it rightly. It will help the weakest thing in all the earth to have dominion over you if you use it wrongly. Base your imaginings on truth. give them a foundation of fact and they will prove useful and fruitful. profitable and worth while. (Copyright.)

June 20th, where they are employed. The graduation exercises of the Frank fort High school took place Friday even-ing, June 10th, in the K. of P. Hall. All parts were well taken. The hall was filled to its capacity with parents and friends of the school. The hall was very prettily decorated with the colors, yellow and white.

C. H. Clark, pastor of the Congregational church of this place, attended the ordination exercises of F. C. Hunt at South Gardiner recently, accompanied by Prof. W. J. Moulton, president of the Bangor Theological Seminary, Rev. H. E. LeMay of Searsport and Rev. W. R. Graham of Hampden.

The San Jose, Calif., Me.cury-Herald of June 10th says of Fred W. Angier, a former Belfast boy, and a man always loval to his home city:

"F. W. Angier of 600 South Fifth street, San Jose, has received an urgent invitation from the committee in charge of the Frontier day celebration committee at Cheyenne, Wyoming, to be their guest at the 25th annual celebration to be held in that city from July 26 to 29, this year. When Mr. Angier was in the service of the Union Pacific railroad in the territory of Colorado-Wyoming he organized the first 'Frontier day' celebration, and was actively interested in the annual affair for a period of 10 years, or until his re-moval to this city in 1907. Frontier day has been the means of making Cheyenne famous and has also provided the city with a fine entertainment park and camping grounds and one of the best buildings in the city for their commercial club, known there as the Industrial club,' and with the chamber of commerce takes active part in all community projects. Novel methods of advertising the cele-bration are used. A special envoy is sent east to present personal invitations to the president of the United States, governors of states and mayors of large cities. President Roosevelt attended a number of the celebrations and the affair has entertained former Presidents Wilson and Taft and many other notables. That a large crowd is expected is seen from the fact that arrangements have been made to care for 20,000 at the camping grounds

WHAT IT DID TO ED,

(Jay E. House in Public Ledger.) We have read Dr. Rudolph Steiner's analysis of class consciousness. Due probably to limited mental equipment, we were unable to understand it. But we very well remember when Ed Gleason got class consciousness, and we know what it did to him.

Ed Gleason was a mechanic who lived, ten years or so ago, in Grigsby City. He was a good workman, regularly employed, and he added to the virtues of reliability and industry those of frugality and thrift. He owned a home which he had bought and paid for bit by bit, some building and loan stock, and had money in the bank. He had plenty to eat, plenty to wear and a comfortable home. His children were in the schools made and provided. They were as well dressed and had about as many comforts and pleasures as the children of the bankers, merchants and professional men with whom they associated. If anybody had asked he would have said the Gleasons were as good as anybody in town. And

One night Ed stood for an hour near a blazing gasoline torch at the corner of Main and Fourth streets and listened to an orator who was busily engaged in painting the dawn of a new day. When Ed went home that night he had class consciousness. For the first time in his life he realized that he was a slave irrevocably chained on the treadmill of class. He never thought of it before. He immediately ceased to be industrious and reliable. In time he lost his job and drifted for brief periods into others less permanent and less lucrative. He spent the money in the bank, sold his building and loan stock and put, a mortgage on his house. Last fall the mortgage was fore-closed. Ed is living in two rented rooms and working casually. He hates capital-ism and established order. And he isn't worth a tinker's cam to himself or any-body else. Maybe class consciousness doesn't always work that way, but that's what it did to Ed.
