Cards Planning To Keep 12-Man Pitching Staff

By JACK HAND ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Manager Eddie Dyer reached into the showcase and ranked the "for sale" sign off his St. Louis Cardinal pitching staff today by announcing he planned to keep 12 of the 20 hurlers on his ball club. "Sam Bredon told me I could keep 12. Don't you forget we can option out five or six of these boys to the minor leagues who aren't returning servicemen, even fellows who were with us last year. Add to that the possibility that we may have to put a couple of others on the voluntary retired list. Pardon, we may not have much of a problem. "I can tell you one thing, I've said all along. We're not going to let any key men go. We don't need help like some of the others and if we do have to sacrifice for catching somewhere along the line it will be infielders and outfielders, not pitchers. I'm going to take a real long look at everybody. "Take Ernie White. Either he is a $100,000 pitcher for you or he's no good to anybody and might as well be on the retired list. He's had arm trouble ever since he banded his shoulder on a dugout in Brooklyn in 1941 or 1942. Nobody knows about Ernie, including himself. If he's right he's just about one of the toughest left handers in baseball. "Dyer shied away from putting a finger on his "key men" by name but a fellow who had been around baseball a little bit could pick Max Lanier, Johnny Beazley, Howie Lulett, Red Barrett, Harry Brecheen, and possibly Ted Wilks or Ken Burkhardt. He'd be pretty sure to be correct. The first three are returning servicemen, of course, and Barrett and Brecheen had excellent years in 1945. Wilks was a disappointment last year but he had five bone chips removed from his pitching arm during the winter and thinks he can regain his 1944 form. Burkhardt is perhaps the least secure of the top notchers despite his 18-win record. There are fellows coming out of service like Matt Surkont and Fred Martin who certainly figure. "Dyer pointed out that the pressure definitely will not be on until March 1 when everybody is in camp, explaining that he wanted to give the ex-GIs a 10-day jump to get what he called "baseball muscles" back into action. "The new skipper appears well qualified to fill the large sized shoes vacated by Billy Southworth when he left for the Boston Braves. He talks freely about his ball club, realizing full well that his position is one of tremendous responsibility. "Naturally he has a pretty good idea of his starting lineup right now but every kid in camp can be sure he will get a chance. Dyer had charge of the Birds' farm system and managed under Branch Rickey for so long that he knows by heart the complete record of each prospect's index card. "The skipper is neither high nor low on the club, figuring Brooklyn will be his toughest opposition. He also respects Chicago. "I know Rickey for too long," said Eddie shaking his head. "No sir, he isn't playing any tiddly winks over there in Sanford. He'll come up with a ball club tough to beat. But we figure kind of tough too."

Ben Hogan Holds Pensacola Open Lead

SHOOTS SUB-PAR ROUND OF '68 TO KEEP ADVANTAGE

Clayton Heafner of Charlotte Slumps Behind Haas, Mangrum

By CHICK HOSCH PENSACOLA, Fla., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Playing the third round with pains-taking care, Ben Hogan, the little pro from Hershey, Pa., met all challenges today to post a four-under par 68 and increase his lead in the Pensacola Open golf tournament to three strokes. Hogan's total of 203 gave him an edge of three strokes over Ray Mangrum of Los Angeles, and four over Freddie Haas, Jr., of New Orleans. Mangrum, playing in the final threesome of the day with Haas and Hogan, matched the leader stroke and each finished with 35-33-68. Haas had a 34-36-70, two under. Haas, in second place at the halfway mark, went after Hogan's two-stroke lead from the start, cutting it a stroke with a 10-foot putt for a birdie on the second hole. Hogan, however, putted back with a 20-footer for a birdie on the next hole. Then Hogan shot the worst hole he has had thus far, carding a six on the par four, 451-yard fourth. Haas parred the hole to make them all square and then went a stroke ahead by sinking a 25-foot putt. However, on the par-five 494-yard hole, Hogan caught up again with a birdie, as Haas was down in par. They stayed even until the eighth when Hogan put a birdie with a 25-foot putt as Haas parred the hole. Both parred the ninth, giving Haas a two-under 34 for the round, one better than Hogan. Haas never threatened on the second nine. Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, who was tied for second with Haas yesterday, had an uneven round of three birdies, giving him a one-under 71 and fourth place at 208. Dutch Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., posted a 69 for a sixth-place tie with Joe Brown of Des Moines, at 210. Brown had a 68. Harry Todd of Dallas holds fifth place with 209 after scoring 71 in the third round. Armand Farina of Schenectady, N. Y., turned in the day's best card, a 67, giving him eighth place with 211. Lloyd Mangrum of Los Angeles got off with a rush, being four under par after six holes, but finished poorly and had a one-under 71. Byron Nelson, the Toledo stylist, shot a 70 today, giving him 214 and a tie with four others for 19th place.
