COMMUNICATED.

EDITOR TELLER: In these days of investigation and advancement in the arts and sciences, I find a strong tendency on the part of our Therapists to bring into notice many agents heretofore comparatively unknown to the medical world. Some of which have proven valuable while others have not, as yet, shown any properties that entitle them to much consideration, which is unfortunate for the student as well as the practitioner, from the fact that the latter compose the larger portion, leaving but few that are worthy of other than a passing notice.

However the last quarter of a century has been fraught with much success and has added many very valuable medicinal agents to the list of our long tried and highly praised articles for the prevention and removal of disease, but the discovery of new remedies alone has not occupied the entire attention of those who have been and are now thus engaged as their attention has been drawn to the development of new therapeutic properties in some of our older agents that will, in all probability, lead to as great or even greater result than can be brought about by many of the new discovered remedies.

The discovery of an unknown property in carbonic acid gas (which is of recent date) is an example of this fact. It is now being demonstrated that this article, when used in a certain way possess properties that are marvelous in their effects on the animal economy, and should future investigation lead to as decided result as that which has already been developed in its use in consumption of the lungs (Phthisis Pulmonalis) will prove to be as great a boon to the world as the discovery of vaccination or chloroform and will be hailed with hearty welcome by thousands who are now looking forward to the hour when they will be compelled to yield to the ravages of the vile monster consumption.

Carbonic acid gas when inhaled into the lungs proves a deadly poison, but the manner in which death is produced by it is not exactly known but it is thought to kill by a specific poisonous influence on the system quite unlike nitrogen which kills only by exclusion of the air from the lungs. But when it can be used so as to have it enter the system by absorption rather than by permeation it can be so utilized, although an agent of very great potency, as to make it powerful in removing disease without any serious consequences on the system and should be looked upon as one of the greatest discoveries of the age.

The many scientific investigations relative to the cause producing consumption have established the fact beyond any question of doubt that it depends on a living germ that leads to that peculiar form of disease and when carbonic acid gas can be used in a manner to influence the system by absorption it serves as a poison to these microbe or micrococci formations and not to the human system.

These germs have their origin from decomposition of animal and vegetable matter and are found in the water we drink, air we breathe, decayed meats, fruits, vegetables and other things the human family live on and appear to be either of a different nature producing different disease or that the character of disease produced by them depends on the peculiar condition of the system at the time they are taken into the body from the fact that they all serve as causes producing different diseases. For instance diphtheria, Typhoid fever, Asiatic cholera, consumption, septicemia, pyemia, and all of the zymotic, (self producing disease) such as small-pox, chicken-pox, measles, scarlet fever, and probably many others, in fact, I have no doubt but all forms of disease have their origin from parasitic influence or cause.

How very important it is to have the food we eat, the water we drink and the air we breathe pure and free from all living germs. M. A. KELLY, M. D. Lewiston, I. T.

The Villard Hotel Murder.

PORTLAND, April 6.—The mystery which has heretofore surrounded the murder of Kennelly, who was found murdered in the Villard Hotel ruins, has at last been cleared. A squaw named Miper died this morning and before breathing her last confessed to another squaw and her husband that she murdered Kennelly where his body was found. Several others are implicated and the police are in full possession of the fact. The squaw's daughter, Georgia, saw the deed committed and is now in custody. The story is believed in police circles, as the squaw's dive is the last place in which Kennelly was seen alive. In her confession she says she allured him there, while he was very drunk, with the object of robbing him.

Later dispatches contradict this.

THE PARSON YELLED FIRE.

They tell a story on an Allegheny preacher, which to the best of my knowledge, has not as yet been in print. It occurred on a very warm day last summer, and the congregation was drowsy. The preacher was a long talker, and after his sermon had been spread out over the better part of an hour the congregation was drowsier. Heads began to drop on the respective chests thenceforth appertaining, and long, deep breathing became noticeable in various parts of the church.

Then the preacher began to lower his voice gradually. Step by step he reduced his elocution from a fortissimo tenor pitch to a low soothing bass, until eventually his voice died out altogether. He looked carefully over the congregation. All was still as death. No one stirred. All were nodding. Then the optics of the indignant servant of the Lord filled with gore.

He leaned over the pulpit—away over—waited an instant in that position, and then suddenly yelled, "Fire! Fire!" in a voice which sent its reverberations through every nook and corner of the edifice. That brought the congregation to life as though a boom had burst under them. One old deacon jumped up and yelled:

"Where? Where?"

That were the gag came in, and the minister shrieked, in tones of thunder:

"In hell! In hell, for all you sleepy sinners!"

Only strangers sleep in that church now.

How to Improve a Town.

A practical business man has the following to say: "If you want your town to improve, improve it. If you want to make your town lively, make it. Don't go to sleep, but get up and work for it. Push. Advertise it. Talk about it, and talk favorably. If you have any property, improve it. Paint your houses; clean up your back yards. Make your surroundings pleasant, and you will feel better, and your property will be worth more dollars in the market. If you are doing reasonably well, advise your far-away friends to come and invest near you. Work steadily for your home place and home interest. Keep your money at home as much as possible, and it is likely to help you in return. The successful towns have been made successful by the property owners pulling together. Public improvements are an investment that pays. Don't wait your time over some dirty neighborhood quarrel, and hold back your aid from some good object through spite, but work for some good, and you will find yourself benefited. Get at it. Wake up. Rustle. There is no time to be lost, and every little helps. Toot your horn and toot it loud."

Had Experience.

"Want to hire a man?" asked a blue nosed cripple of a Clark street saloon keeper.

"I'd like to get a good fellow to take charge of the wine room," was the reply.

"I'm the man you're looking for, then."

"Good hand at opening bottles?"

"Pulling corks, you mean?"

"Yes."

"You bet; I've been in practice for the past twenty-five years. Here's a cork leg I've been pulling off and on every night and morning since the war. What better recommendation do you want?"

"Pull corks?" Well, I should smile if you will but shout."

Wanted to be Sure.

They were sitting on the sofa closer than brothers, gazing unutterable things into each other's eyes, when Augustus gained possession of one of Angeline's hands, which causing no protest, the other was soon imprisoned. Then the ecstasy of silent companionship was resumed, only to be broken by her timid whisper:

"Gus, dearest, I want to ask you a question."

"Go on; ask me anything—anything."

"Well, Gussie, if I should take away one of my hands to wipe my nose, you wouldn't think I was mad, would you, dear?"

HE ASKED A QUESTION.—"And now," concluded the revivalist, "if there is anyone here who wants to ask any question, let him be heard."

"I'd like to know," said an old bald-headed sinner, rising in the back seat, "how many marbles have been dropped on my head by those scoundrels in the gallery. I'm no pavement."

THE WAY TO DO IT.—A good newspaper sent abroad will do more to bring wealth and settle up the country than any agent you can employ. If you expect a good paper, you must support and encourage it. A man may prosper without helping the printer, but if he does he certainly builds at the expense of his neighbor, and cannot expect to be patronized long, after they find out his policy.—Ez.

A man named S. W. Wall, a correspondent of the Post-Intelligencer, made a murderous assault upon the editor of the Tacoma News in his office.

A Genial Restorative.

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are emphatically a genial restorative. The changes which this great botanic remedy produces in the disordered organization are always agreeable, though surely progressive, never abrupt and violent. On this account it is admirably adapted to persons of delicate constitution and weak nerves, to whom the powerful mineral drugs are positively injurious. That it initiates those processes which result in the re-establishment of healthful vigor is conspicuously shown in cases where it is taken to overcome that fruitful cause of debility, indigestion, coupled, as it usually is, with biliousness and constipation. Thorough digestion, regular evacuation and abundant secretion, are results which promptly and invariably attend its systematic use. It is, besides, the best protective against malaria, and a first-rate diuretic.

THE WAY NEWS IS GATHERED FOR THE PAPER.—"I don't see how you get so much news into your paper," said the village clergyman to the village editor, "seeing that you have no local reporter."

"Oh! that's easy explained," replied the editor. "My wife belongs to three sewing societies in the village, and she has an excellent memory."
