Just before adjournment an individual spirits and health, but without avail. Frequently throughout yesterday he would ex-"I am broken-hearted." Dr. Warner was at his bedside all day, administering brandy and ice. About 8 o'clock he asked Mr. Gano to give him a glass of croton water without ice, saving "It can't hurt me now. I feel myself sinking now. Is it a bad heart that breaks so easy ?" About 12 o'clock last night Dr. Warner had to hasten to another patient, and Judge McCunn was left in charge of Messrs. Gano and Liddie. Mr. Gano occupied the same room. As late as half-past 3 he awakened the sick man to give him ice. He was lying almost in a state of stupor, but when aroused broke the ice with his teeth with so much vigor that Mr. Gano regarded it as a sign of increasing strength, and bore the good news to his wife. His rest seemed so sound and his breathing so regular that he was not dis turbed until, at 4:15, Mr. Gano noticed his breathing was imperceptible, and, on closes examination, discovered that all was over. The nearest physician was summoned, who, after applying the usual tests, pronounced life extinct. On Monday last the Judge was much depressed, and spoke very bitterly of the manner in which he had been treated by members of the Senate and

Bar Association. He announced his intention to carry his case to the Court of Appeals, and said it could be easily proved that he had been illegally removed from his position. During the night he paced the floor, and repeatedly exclaimed that mental excitement would kill him. On the following day he lost his appetite and began to look very much reduced in flesh His intimate friends called upon him and man on a merchant vessel. After pursuing this occupation for several years, he finally landed in this city, and He became acquainted with some Irish barristers, and the acquaintance resulted in his cultivating a taste for the practice of the law. He studied, and was subsequently admitted to the bar. branch of the Legislature. THE HEAT. Though the mercury, to-day, did not exceed SS, quite a number of deaths from sunstroke occurred, the victims having been greatly weakened, probably, by the previous raging heat. The mortality for the past week reaches the almost unprecedented total of 1,569. This is 801 more than last week, 869 more than in the corresponding week of 1871, and 928 more than in 1870. During the recent unusually hot weather, in London the deaths for the week ending June 20, numbered 1,207. The mortality during the past week in New York has, therefore, been relatively four times as great as in Loudon, during its hottest weather. This shocking disproportion is much commented on by the press here, and considerable alarm prevails in the community regarding the sanitary condition of New York. It is but fair to say, however, that an extraordinary number of deaths from Sun strokes have occurred this week in villages and on farms in New York and New

A hack-I saw Fisk enter the hotel, and, in a few went in, and ran up to Figs. There was no one there but myself. I caught him under the arms, and he said, "He's been too quick for me this time." Mr. Tremain ar gued that all the facts in the case should be allowed to go to the jury. Judge Ingrahan said he would carefully consider whether the conversation before the shooting was part of the res gestae, and would reserve his decision until Monday. Witness, resuming, said: I saw a lady at the window. Stokes took off his hat to her. He tried to pull me over. I did not go, and he left to cross the street. I saw him go over to the hotel. I then went up Broadway to the New York Hotel, crossed to the west side of Broadway, and, at the corner of great Jones treet, met Mr. Horace Stokes, near the New York Hotel. I walked down Broadway again, and heard of the shooting; went into the hotel and afterward to the Station

House, to try and see Stokes or get his brother to see him. I went back to the hotel to get some further intelligence of the shooting and went again to the Station House. The proprietor of the Hoffman House, where stokes boarded, was interrogated by the defence as to whether Stokes had expressed a fear that Fisk would shoot him; but after another heated struggle, the Judge excluded he question. Mr. Tremain said several of their witnesses were not present, and as he was desirous of getting in all the testimony elating to the circumstances preceding the an adjournment until Monday. Otherwise he would now be obliged to put on the stand the prisoner himself, which he did not wish to do at this stage. Judge Ingraham accordingly adjourned Court until Monday.

THE EVERLASTING ERIE RAILWAY is the source, to-day, of a new batch of reports. The statement in the Times of this morning, that Commodore Vanderbilt is about to be made President of the Erie Railway, was to-day denied by Mr. McHenry, who said that about three weeks ago the de sign was formed by himself, and seconded by the stockholders generally, to bring in the Commodore or his son as President of Erie. It was found, however, that according to the laws of the State, no shareholder in the New York Central can become even a Director of the Erie Road. The project therefore, fell through, and there is no possibility of Vanderbilt becoming President. The Presidency, Mr. McHenry says, is to be offered to the President of one of the Western banks, and should he decline, General Dix, in all probability, will be reelected. The present Directory will be re-elected, with few exceptions. Jay Gould sent in proxies for 15,000 shares to-day. McHenry claims to represent 400,000 shares. THE STOKES TRIAL.

NEW YORK, July 6.—The first witness in the Stokes case was John Moore, who testified that he saw Fisk go into the Grand Central Hotel, Jan. 6, and afterward the boy Redmond came out and said that Fisk was shot. The witness went in and caught the Colonel under his arms. No one was present but them. He was just going to ask, "Are you hurt!" when Fisk said: "He was too quick for mathistime." When the witness came out, Fisk's colored driver asked him what had happened, and on telling him he said: "Wonder the old man didn't pull on him, for he was fixed," and afterwards said: "I carried two myself for some time." The cross-examination brought out no contradictions.

the intervals of pain, he constantly repeated that his heart was breaking. It is undoubtedly true that the recent action of the Senate was the primary cause of his death.

The end is no possibility of Vanberbilt becoming President of the Eric Railway. By the laws of this State, no shareholder in the New York Central can become even a Director of Eile. McHenry says, in consequence of this, some other person will be selected for the Presidency. As already telegraphed, it is thought that person will be selected for the Michigan Central. The present Directory will be elected, with few exceptions. Jay Gould sent in proxies for 15,003 shares to day. McHenry claims to represent 400,000 shares. General Superintendent Ru-ker has resigued. After the election, all the old Gould heads of departments will have to resign. Their places will be filled largely by persons now cor nected with the Chicago & Alton Railroad.

The meeting was respectable in size, but was not particularly enthusias ic. Speeches were made by Cassius M. Clay and General Brinkerhoff. Mr. Clay devoted much of his time to an attack of the foreign policy of the Grant Administration, dwelling largely on the conduct of Grant and his advisers to ward the Russian Government; condemning the conduct of Grant and his advisors to ward the Russian Government; condemning their course in the most unmistakable terms. Mr. Clay was listened to throughout with close attention. General Brinkerhoff followed, but greatly diminished the numbers to the close, the crowd having rapidly dispersed after Mr. Clay concluded. The most notable feature of the evening was the decided satisfaction with which the audience received allusions to Mr. Greeley.

—She is Fassilly Burned.

From the Cleveland (O.) Herald, July 2.

Conrad Schweitzer, whose name sufficiently indicates his German origin, lives about seven miles from Cleveland, in Parma Township, on the direct road to Parma. With him and his aged wife dwelt Henry Walter, his son-in-law, his daughter, the wife of Walter, and grandchild of Schweitzer. On Saturcay morning the men of the household did considerable mowing in a field near the house, and afterward came to Cleveland with produce for market. Between 11 and 12 o'clock on that day old Mrs. Schweitzer went to the hay-field for some purpose, was absent but a short time, and then heard biercing, heartending soreams issuing from the direction of her dwelling. Retracing her steps at her utmost speed, she entered the house, where an appalling scene met her gaze. Her little grand-daughter was frantically endeavoring to tear all that remained of her burning garments from her person, most of them having been concumed, and was undergoing most severe and ornel torture from the burns upon her body. Procuring water, the aged grandmother dashed it over the little enferr, and soon extinguished the flames, but not until her innocent grandchild had been so badly burned that death ensued a few hours afterward. She at the time supposed the little girl had somehow set her own clothes on fice, and asked her what she had been doing. Betty replied that she had been doing. Betty replied that she had been doing nothing, but that "that brutely butcher that struck you, (meaning the grandmother) did it." She afterward gave further details of the sffair, saying two men had been there, who inquired for her grandfather. She told them he was not at home. They then seized her and got the oil-can. Then one of them jammed a hole in the side of the can by striking it upon the corner of the stove, and poured the contents over her body while his companion held her for that purposs

The funeral of Betty Walter took place on Tuesday from the house where she was so wickedly deprived of life. Her murderers are at large, and we do not learn that any well-directed efforts are yet on foot to effect their capture. It is said that the Constable of Parma has the names and is cognizant of the residence and whereabouts of the alleged murderers, but hesitates to arrest them because of the limited amount of testimony which can be arrayed against them. Of this fact, however, we have not complete knowledge. Information of the whole affair was on Tuesday evening lodged at the Central Station in this city, but without such details as are necessary to action by our officers, the crime having been committed outside of their jurisdiction.

M. de Paris.

On June 17 the new executioner of France, M. de Paris, made his debut in front of La Roquette, and with the aid of the improved guillotine, invented by the late headsman shortly before he died, lopped off the head of a deeperate criminal who murdered a woman a few months ago. The improved machine is not raised like the old guillotine, and consequently it is almost impossible for spectators to get a glimpse of what passes. It can be taken to pieces and packed up with great ease, and is altogether a handy instrument. M. de Paris travels about the country with it in a large van, which comprises a bedroom, a kitchen, and a cupboard for "les bols de justice." and the requisite sawdust. This van was found necessary when the country executioners were done away with, and the effice was concentrated in the hands of M. de Paris, who often found it difficult to procure bed and lodging in the places he visited. On June 20 Monsienr was to have operated on a man called Dore, who had a hand in killing a sergeant de ville under most atrocions circumstances, but at the last moment an accomplice, condemned to death by default, was apprehended, and Dore and two men called Mayer, all under sentence of death, will appear as witnesses on the trial of the newly-captured culprit. M. de Paris.

The little island in the Connecticut at Woodsville is a piece of patchwork, so far as geography is concerned. The Vermont and New Hampshire State line runs through it. Crafton, Caledonia, and Orange counties corner there, and also the towns of Bath and Haverhill in New Hampshire, and Ryegate and Newbury in Vermont. One can sit down at a certain point on that island and be in two States, three counties, and four towns at the same time, that is if he gets exactly on the "certain point."—Concord Patriot.
