Waterburians Join Movement to Stock Connecticut With Ducks—Non-Profit Corporation Formed

(Special to The Democrat)
New York, May 22—Irvin W. Day, A. J. MacDermid and William J. Latimer, of Waterbury, are members of a volunteer committee of prominent Connecticut sportsmen who are to carry forward the organization program of Ducks Unlimited in that state, it was announced today.

Ducks hunters during the next five years for waterfowl refuge establishment in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. The bulk of North America's wild ducks breed in this area—termed "the duck factory." Committees of leading sportsmen have been formed in over 40 states to carry out the organization phase of the program. Provincial government officials have offered full cooperation in the movement, including the setting aside of vast marsh areas, in reciprocation of the interest shown by sportsmen of the United States in restoring the wildfowl. Funds raised for the work are to be administered by a board of 60 trustees composed of representatives of all state committees. Field work in Canada will be guided by an international board of directors comprising eight American and Canadian business executives and sportsmen who will serve without remuneration.

SEAT IN SUPREME COURT IN DOUBT

may materially affect the controversy. Naming of Justice The constitution provides that the President may fill supreme court vacancies occurring during a recess of the senate. The appointees may take office and perform their duties. But unless confirmed by the senate before the end of the next session, the appointee automatically is removed from office. A vacancy occurring during a recess of the senate may be filled except when the senate is in session to confirm or reject the nomination. The court will recess June 1 and meet again in October.

Therefore, Justice Van Devanter's successor will be named before this session of congress ends. It appears possible now that the adjournment may be forced back to early autumn upon consideration of his executive department reorganization plan, wages and hours legislation and national planning, including flood control.

DUKE EDWARD GROWS NERVOUS

It was reported, and have been a severe blow to his pride.

First denied the attendance of members of his own family at his wedding to Mrs. Warfield on June 3, only 10 days hence, the duke now has been denied even the privilege of a religious ceremony.

In addition, it was reported today, he is disappointed because the Royal family has not yet formally announced his engagement in the court circular, which records activities of the Royal family.

There has been delay also, it was said, in transferring the $500,000 which is understood to be the contribution of the Royal family to the Duke of Windsor's financial independence in case that the duke predeceased her. This sum would be kept in trust.

It is emphasized that present ill-feeling is entirely between the duke and the government. He is said to be on better terms than ever with members of the Royal family, who appreciate his position and understand what he is so worried.

Preparations Progress Preparations for the civil wedding at the Chateau de Candé where he and Mrs. Warfield are guests are progressing. A French notary called at the castle to attest the final papers.

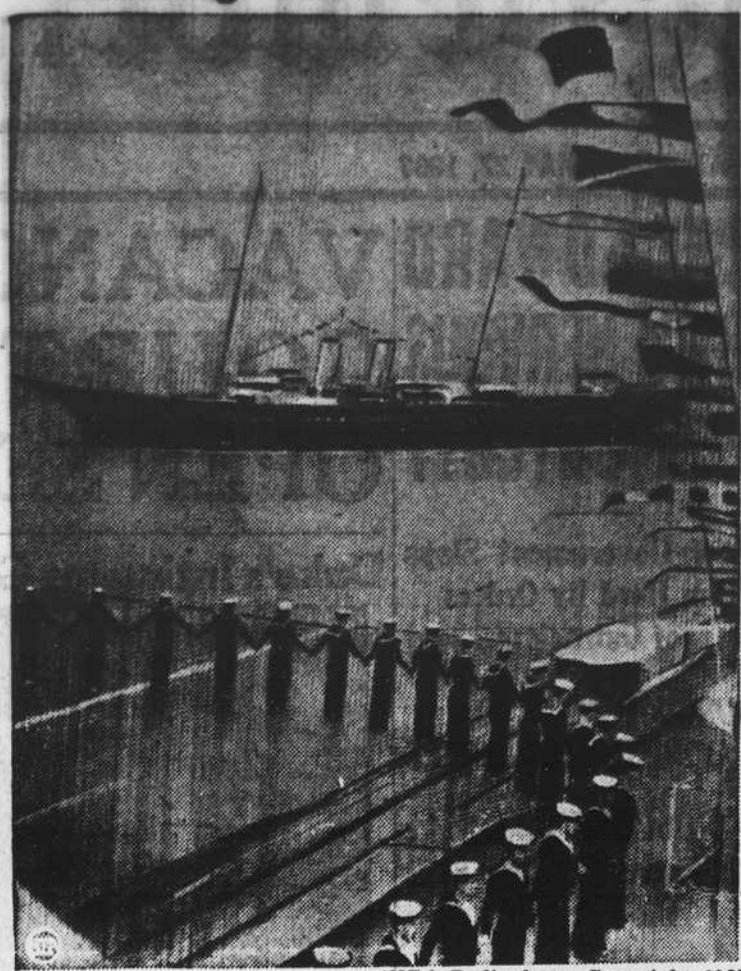

The man who was idolized a bare six months ago as king-emperor and defender of the Protestant faith must now content himself with a provincial British consular officer as the sole representative of his country at the wedding for which he gave up his throne. It is expected that the government will permit Consul W. Cummings Graham of Nantes to attend and this is regarded here as more a matter of red tape than of a concession.

French Clergyman Refused It was thought at first that a clergyman of the Church of England might be authorized to officiate, then that the local French Protestant minister might act. But even the French Protestant minister announced last night:

"I must refuse to marry them because I oppose the remarriage of divorced persons."

There seems no doubt that the duke is intensely bitter. It is understood also that he has listened with interest to counsels from powerful emissaries who are championing him with the idea of insuring his rehabilitation, and obtaining full honors as a "royal highness" for Mrs. Warfield.

Saluting The "Sailor King"

(NEA Radiophoto, Copyright 1937.)

From a flag-decked British warship, on which saluting sailors man the rail, the royal yacht Victoria and Albert is seen as it steamed past the nine-mile column of 166 British and foreign warships in a naval celebration review off Spithead, England. The collection of fighting craft was the greatest ever assembled. Breaking naval precedents by being accompanied by the Queen and Princess Elizabeth, King George VI, garbed as an admiral of the fleet, took the salute from the empire's senior service amid cheers from a million people on shore and 50,000 others aboard sightseeing boats.

Russian Scientists Land Top Of World

which Peary found 9,000 feet of Polar sea.

The historic landing was made yesterday morning by members of an expedition of 42 men who are based on Rudolf Island, in the Arctic ocean north of the European continent.

Landing of Plane For the Polar landing, the four-motored, Russian designed plane USSR N-170 was selected. It took off at 5 a. m. yesterday with Mikhal Vodoplanov, whose Arctic flights have won him the title "Hero of the Soviet Union" at the controls and Professor Otto Schmidt, Russia's leading Arctic expert, in command.

At 11:10 a. m. the plane circled wide over the pole and at 11:35 a. m. it was landed safely on the ice 20 kilometers (12½ miles) from the pole.

News of the landing was flashed at once from the plane's radio set to Moscow. During the message, however, the plane's transmitter broke down and the radio set was used to relay the message.

The claims advanced for Robinson include his record of good soldiering under the New Deal. Robinson was a prohibitionist, yet he followed Mr. Roosevelt to vote the repeal amendment and for 22 years in 1932. Robinson supported the President by voting "no" on these typical bills, thought to be politically dangerous for their opponents; payment of prevailing local wages to relief workers, reduction of the work relief appropriation and the Patman Bonus bill.

He voted for the Wagner Labor Relations Act, the death sentence clause of the Public Utilities Holding Company bill and the extension of NRA. He voted for the surprise tax-the-wealth bill which Mr. Roosevelt insisted congress enact.

Once last voted to pay the soldier bonus in cashable bonds and then voted to override Mr. Roosevelt's veto. Otherwise he stood by his leader, even to the extent of leading the fight to salvage something of the Passamaquoddy tide harnessing project of which democrats generally were not fond.

Robinson is alleged, however, to have a pre-New Deal record of conservatism, especially with respect to public utilities questions. Senator Huey P. Long once read to the senate a list of clients served by Robinson's Arkansas law firm from which he has since resigned.

Robinson voted in 1928 against senate liberals who sought a senate investigation of public utility propaganda. His vote helped shift the investigation to the Federal Trade Commission. The FTC made an inquiry so cold and searching that some persons believed the job had been done better than a senate committee would have performed it.

HELD RESPONSIBLE Danbury, Conn., May 22—(UP)—Joaquin Henriquez, 18, was held responsible today in a coroner's finding for the death of eight-year-old Jeanne Frede, on May 7, in an automobile accident.

The verdict said Henriquez' auto went out of control and mounted a sidewalk, fatally injuring the girl.

Harriett Bowman To Get No Compensation

man was engaged in interstate commerce and that would bring him within the statutes of that act. Boarded Truck Each Way Bowman was employed as a welder on the rails between Waterbury and Bridgeport. It was his custom to start work each day at 7 o'clock by boarding a truck at New Haven to be transported to the actual position of employment near Beacon Falls. The truck was an ordinary construction type, with top and sides covered with canvas and rear open with the exception of the tailboard. The exhaust muffler was located about midway under the body of the truck.

On November 23 Bowman and the other 30 men entered the truck, and Bowman sat at the rear of the vehicle with his back against the tailboard. Commissioner Lynch has explained that because of this position near the rear, he was more exposed to the carbon monoxide than any other occupant. This is due to the fact, he says, that the forward movement causes a vacuum to exist directly behind the truck, and the air and gases rush into that space.

At Beacon Falls the crew transferred to a truck and proceeded to their destination. When they arrived there, Bowman lay down on the bank and was found to be seriously ill. He died just a week later.

Examiner Edward H. Kirschbaum listed the cause of death as "cerebral vascular occlusion with cortical necrosis," but subsequent investigation convinced him that the decedent might have suffered carbon monoxide poisoning to be a substantial factor of death. Commissioner Lynch agrees in this statement.

What Company Claims The railroad company claims Bowman did not suffer from carbon monoxide poisoning, and further claims that at the time he suffered the attack he was engaged in interstate commerce, and therefore, outside the protection of the Workmen's Compensation act of Connecticut.

Bowman earned an average of $25.33 per week and contributed $10 per week to the support of his mother. Commissioner Lynch, who dismissed the claim, although he found that Bowman met his death as a result of an accident which arose out of and in the course of his employment.

Memorandum of Decision In his memorandum of decision, Commissioner Lynch makes reference to the judgment of the supreme court in the case of Moran against the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad. In that case it was held that the employee was still engaged in interstate commerce while he was leaving the property of the railroad. Commissioner Lynch says he can see no possible distinction between the two cases inasmuch as the truck was used to transport Bowman to perform work on a railroad admittedly used in interstate commerce.

Novel Situation The situation left the appropriations committee in the position where it must accept recommendations on the budget of the state board of finance and control. This body estimated state income during the next biennium would be $48,500,000.

After all "must" expenditures approved by the general assembly this session are added in, estimated expenditures during the biennium totaled $48,987,589, or about half a million dollars more than estimated income.

Projects in Danger Projects jeopardized by the new situation were believed to be: New state police barracks, $325,000; Teachers' Colleges at Williamstown, Danbury and New Haven, replacing normal schools, $75,000; aid to dependent children, $1,000,000; partial restoration of reserves to teachers' retirement fund, $700,000; jail farm, $850,000 maximum and $100,000 minimum; Bridgeport Armory, $500,000; New Britain Armory, $300,000; aid to crippled children, $120,000.

Regional farm market, $105,000; participation in New York world's fair, $50,000; topographical map of Connecticut, $250,000; buildings at Teachers' College of Connecticut, $484,280; New London Armory, $325,000.

Govt. Alarmed It was disclosed today that the government was alarmed when the pole plane's wireless broke down and there was no word of it for hours. Three planes were ordered to take off from Rudolf Island to the rescue when, the wireless repaired, Prof. Schmidt sent a message to Josef Stalin, the leader of the government, and Premier Vlaschelsky Molotov.

All planes of the expedition are to return to Moscow except one, which will remain at Rudolf Island and relieve the pole party at the end of a year. Everything incident to the fight was designed and tested with the
