

WIDE OPEN

Fairbanks Will Be Typical Frontier Town

According to all indications Fairbanks and Chena will not want for opportunities to scatter the golden dust on the wheels of chance. Several gambling outfits are among the freight going on the first steamers, says the Dawson News. It is well known that a number of old-time Dawson gamblers and a number from Seattle and other coast points have been assembling here preparatory to descending on Fairbanks.

It is probable that dance halls, variety theaters and other such places of amusement will be as numerous in the new camp as in Dawson in early days, and that life will be as fully if not more distinctly frontier. The new camp will not have the Northwest mounted police that this camp had. The United States marshal and deputies have charge of the law and order branch in the new diggings.

The Dawson police have been watching the incoming people from the outside closely. A number who have arrived in small boats are being given a blue ticket, and told to move on, it is intimated they are heading for Sana.

NEW POSTS

Mounted Police Will Have More Stations

A new Northwest mounted police post will be established next winter at Wounded Moose, on the overland trail between Dawson and Whitehorse. A long stretch now exists between posts in that vicinity, and the Wounded Moose detachment will make the patrols easier and more frequent.

No force will be stationed at Wounded Moose station during the summer. The police have acquired necessary ground for the new station.

A winter post will also be established at Mayo.

JURIST DIES

Member Nova Scotia Supreme Court no More

[Special Dispatch to Daily Alaskan.] Halifax, June 8.—Justice Ritchie, of the supreme court of Nova Scotia, is dead, aged 70 years.

Director of Mint Comes

George E. Roberts, director of the mint, will visit Alaska this summer. He is expected to arrive some time this month.

Roberts expects to make a report on the gold output of this district. He believes that Alaska is destined to become a much larger producer of gold within the next few years, not only in the placer districts, but in the quartz region of Southeastern Alaska.

The Last Straw

It was Saturday night, and owing to the temporary absence of his wife it fell to Mr. Brown to attend to the usual process of giving his eight-year-old son a bath and putting him to bed. He had left his evening paper with a man's reluctance and had hurried matters along with more speed than the little chap was accustomed to. However, he endured it all without a protest until it came to the prayer. It was his habit after "Now I say no" to ask the divine blessing upon a long list of relatives and friends, calling each by name.

"Please God," he began, "bless papa and mamma, grandpa and grandma and Aunt Edith and Uncle George and"—A pause. His father, thinking to curtail the list of beneficiaries, softly intimated an "Amen." Not heeding the interruption, the little supplicant drew a long breath and continued, "And Aunt Alice and Cousin Annie and"—"Amen," again his father said "Amen."

This was more than flesh and blood could stand, and, lifting his little head, he exclaimed, with tears of indignation, "Papa, who's running this prayer, you or me?"—Harper's Monthly.

At an entertainment at which Nelson met Benjamin West just before he went to sea for the last time he remarked to the artist, "I never pass a printshop where your picture of the 'Death of Wolfe' is in the window without being stopped by it." West, of course, acknowledged the compliment, and Nelson went on to ask why he had painted no more like it. "Because, my lord," answered the artist, "there are no more subjects." "Blasphemy," said Nelson, "I didn't think of that," and asked him to take a glass of champagne. "But, my lord, I fear your intemperance will yet furnish me with another scene, and if it should I shall certainly avail myself of it," the painter observed. "Will you," said Nelson, pouring out bumper and touching his glass violently against West's, "will you, Mr. West? Then I hope I shall die in the next battle." He sailed a few days later, and West painted "The Death of Nelson"—London Chronicle.

Like the Last Pins. "Where do dogs which are out of style go to?" asked a dog fancier. "We have masses of poodles, pugs, couch dogs, St. Bernards, bulldogs and greyhounds, and so on. And, yet, as each has his day the others disappear, and the one predominating style has the walk. Where do the others go to?"

"You can't make over a bulldog into a poodle; you can't reduce the size of a St. Bernard. And yet as dog fashions call for a certain kind of a canine he can be had in numbers sufficient to supply all demands. I deal in dogs, and yet the problem puzzles me."

"I only know that when pug dogs are the correct thing I have a large number. When the demand falls off, I find I am stocked with another breed."

"What becomes of the others?"—New York Times.

How to Judge Beer

SOLID, CREAMY FOAM

An infallible indication of body, age and excellence of brewing material.

A solid, creamy foam is the invariable indication of body, age and excellence of brewing material in beer. Unless the best grades of barley and hops, selected with extreme care, are used in sufficient quantity, brewed so as to give the beer the proper strength and body, and afterward the beer is thoroughly ripened and aged, it cannot show the solid, creamy foam always found in the famous
