CHICKEN LANGUAGE.

Them and Gives His Observations. Prof. Asger Hamerik, director of the Peabody conservatory of music and the composer of Norse symphonies, says he has made the discovery that chickens have a language which he, by careful attention and by experiments, has partially mastered. He says: "Chickens are the greatest gossips in the world. I know they have a language, for when one is alone it will not talk at all. It may, perhaps, sing a little song to pass the time away, EAST. Silcuro & Egests City ex. Edg p m. 266 p.m. but it will not talk to itself. As soon, they have acute senses of vision, hearing' and taste, but they can not smell. They are peculiarly susceptible to certrea m. tain colors. Red almost drives them crazy, while blue is not to their liking by any means. I tried to experiment with MAN other colors, but they did not seem to mind any but blue, and this they did not like. I found if a blue ribbon or string was tied to one chicken's leg all the rest would keep away from it. "I have noticed that chickens can distinguish between white and colored people. For the latter they have a special aversion. Whether it is because they know by instinct that nenurposes or not I can not say. I once had five Cochin China pullets to which I gave the name of Pete, Pet, Pat, Pit, Pot. Pete would respond readily when her name was called, but the others would come also with the exception of Pot, who would come when I called her. Pete would come when I called Pit, Pat and Pet, showing that she could not distinguish, closely between the vowels I. A and E short. There was such a difference between these and Pot that the latter would recognize her name as soon as called. If the consonants were trans-

Pot she would not notice. "Crowing among roosters is a most interesting study. I have noted the I felt her absence cruelly, and I don't crows of over one hundred roosters and I have never found two alike. The crow is nearly between twelve a. m. and twelve noon, and is from three to seven seconds in duration. Roosters begin to crow at dawn and those farther eastward crow the last. It is a kind of telegraph service to one another. Generally there are seven crows given in the space of ten seconds from each other. Cocks crow a few minutes after being frightened and after eating, and I can tell almost exactly when they will begin. A rooster is by all odds the proudest thing on earth, with no exception. A human being can not compare with one in this re-

Footsore and weary, one autumn evening, an old man, a lad, and a dog arrived in Wokingham, where they put up at a common lodging-house. They constituted a traveling show, and, after performing all day in the streets of Reading, they had walked over here -a distance of ten or twelve miles.

The old man seemed broken in health, and suffered from a severe cough; but on this particular evening he was worse than usual, for he had got a chill, and was giad to lay down his weary bones in bed, soon after his arrival. He complained of feeling very cold and thirsty, and the lad procured him some tea, which they both enjoyed. "Grimmy"—or to give him his full name, Grimwald, the dog, was not forgotten, for the trio were inseparable, and soon afterwards they all retired to

During the night the old man became very feverish, coughed incessantly, and complained of a pain in his chest, but Jimmy, the lad, did all he could for him, and sat up most of the night with him.

In the morning, poor old "Spangles" -a name dear to many children throughout England-was no better, and when the doctor was summoned, and had examined him, he told the landlady that he was very ill, auffering from an attack of inflammation of the lungs, and that he feared it would go

"Spangles" recognized his own dan-ger, and calling the lad to him, said: "Jimmy, my boy, you've been a good lad to me, and I fear the show will soon be closed forever! Sit thee down beside me, lad, as I have something to tell thee." When the lad had sat down, "Spangles" proceeded:

The great Mr. Shakespeare says: 'A man, during his life, plays many parts,' and that's the truth; for in my time I have played many parts, and under many and divers names; but I will begin at the beginning.

"My father died when I was only a boy, and my mother married again some time afterwards, my stepfather being an ill-natured, cruel man, who hated and ill-treated me; and, unable to bear his cruelty any longer, I ran away from home and joined a traveling

"But I soon found I had gone 'from the frying-pan into the fire,' for the new task-master to whom I had been bound had no compassion, and during the earlier part of my apprenticeship used to treat me shamefully if I was clumsy or made mis-

Find to us both, and a dear, wind, good father to me."

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS. YOUR WANTS SUPPLIED

Grimmy, hearing his name tioned, came to the bedside, and sat up begging, with his shaggy head on one side, as if trying to say: "I know "Poor Grimmy!" said "Spangles."

"You'll be good to him when I'm gone, Jimmy, and never part with him while he lives??" Grimmy jumped on the bed, and licked the old man's hands and face, and it was as much as Jimmy could do to remove him.

"I will, indeed, be good to him, and never part with him, dear master," said Jimmy, "but, oh! what are we to do when you are gone?" And the poor lad sobbed piteously.

"Be a brave lad, Jimmy, and He who cares for the sparrows will not forget either you or Orimmy. Be always truthful and honest, however you may be tempted to do otherwise, and whatever you find to do, do it with all your might. Bear in mind that your mother is an angel, Jimmy, and I am going to join her at last. In God's good time you, too, will join us; think how happy we shall all be there; and when tempted to do wrong, just think that if you do it you may be prevented from ever coming to us, and God will help you to de right. You and I and poor Grimmy have played through many towns, and tramped for many miles together; yet we never had an angry word, whilst we sought to earn an honest living. Poor old 'Spangles' is going to leave you, but life is before you yet, my lad; and although I have not been able to save much, yet you will find enough in my bag to bury me and to give you a start."

He then sank back exhausted, and while the lad sobbed as if his heart would break Grimmy howled piteously, and sat up begging in all directions.

During the succeeding night the old man rested more quietly, but had several severe paroxysms of coughing, which thoroughly exhausted him; he was also, at times, delirious, when his mind seemed to be dwelling among earlier memories and bygone scenes in quently and fondly mingled.

On the following morning, when the doctor called again, he was deeply moved by the intense and unrestrained grief of the poor lad, who held his dying master's hand in his own, whilst the lips of the poor old man were feebly: Even the faithful dog seemed to feel that he was losing a dear friend, for he was restless and uneasy, sat up beg-ging all over the room, and had refused to eat since his master's illness.

The doctor, however, spoke kindly to the lad, and when the weeping youth said: "My dear master was the only friend I had in the world," he cheered him up by saying that he must not give way, as the future was before him.

God bless you.' And I only saw her once

"I didn't blame the poor wench, for she was little better than a child, but think I have ever been the same since, although I have tried to do my duty.

"The greater part of my life was afterwards spent in traveling shows, of one sort or another, all over England. and for some years I was with a strolling company of actors who did the reg'lar drama; but it was just about twelve or thirteen years ago, when I was about fifty, and my poor wife was about thirty-five, that she sent me a letter, begging me to come to her, as she was ill; and I, thinking of nothing but of seeing her again, went at once, but only to find that he had been killed by a horse three months ago, and that she was dying after giving birth to a baby boy.

Here the old man seemed exhausted, from a fit of coughing, but he rallied somewhat after a dose of his medicine.

and he resumed his story. "Jimmy, my lad," said he, "that baby was you! I promised my darling Annette that I would be both father and mother to you, and I have tried hard to do the best I could for you." "Oh, dear, dear master," sobbed the

The Immense Amount of Money Spent in Theaters.

A Large Army of Professionals Are Kept Busy—Fortunes Annually Spent in Traveling on the

It is estimated that there are perheps as many as 1,000 traveling theatri osl companies in the United States. says the Washington Post. This in cludes everything that can be com sidared strictly professional companies, to say nothing of the countless amateur organizations. Of the strictly theatri-cal organizations it is safe to presume that the average receipts per night for the 1,000 companies are $400 each. At seven performances per week for each company the weekly average, as will e seen, would be $2,800. The average theatrical season is forty weeks. The entire 1,000 companies with an average nightly receipt of $400 would produce weekly receipts at seven performances per week amounting to $2,800,000. This multiplied by forty, the number of weeks in a season, would yield gross receipts amounting to $112,000,000.

From the above estimates some idea people spend annually for amusements companies which are known as dollars are also spent with amateur theatrical organizations and lecture dollars ment that a great deal of money is made by theatrical people. The expenses in-cident to carning $112,000,000 are very large. It is reasonable to say that one-third, or $39,000,000, of the total $118,000,000, is spent with railros another very large item is expended for printing. Great fortunes have been amassed by printing houses in the production of theatrical printing alone. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are also spent for advertising in newspapers. It is safe to say that 40 per cent. of the correspondence between theatrical managers is carried on by telegraph, which amounts to a great deal in a year's time.

The traveling companies, however, are not the sole possessors of the grand total, $112,000,000. This is divided between the traveling companies and the owners of the houses where the companies play. The net receipts derived by the companies would perhaps be in the neighborhood of 65 per cent. or to per cent., making an average net result of between $75,000,000 and $80,000. 000. Out of this, of course, comes all of the expenditure for railroad transportation, and over one-half of the total amount paid for newspaper advertising. Out of this also is paid fully 95 per cent. of the amount paid to print-ing houses.

The 1,060 traveling companies will everage fifteen people to a company, making a total of 15,000 theatrical people traveling over the country forty weeks out of the fifty two. This, of course, does not include the number of people employed at theaters. Upon the estimate made as to the number of companies there must of necessity be the same or more number of theaters, to two companies cannot play at the same theater on the same night. There are at least on an average fifteen people employed at every theater, which would be 15,000. This added to the number of people traveling would make a total of 30,000 people. It is make a total of 30,000 people. It is said that there 3,000 actors and actors seem now out of employment. There are at least engaged in the theatrical business directly or indirectly—those who make a living from it—60,000.

Some actors make a great deal of money; some do not. Those who make
