Homesteading To Be Given Every Chance

Governor McCarthy Sees Hope For Small Farmers In Hawaii—Says Plantations Are Helping—Chief Executive's Visit To Maui A Busy One

Governor Charles J. McCarthy, who returned to Honolulu on Wednesday night after a week spent on Maui and Molokai, carries back with him a mass of information which he expects to find of value to him in the future, according to his own statement shortly before he left.

With the Governor on his trip were Land Commissioner Rivenburgh, Territorial Forester C. S. Judd, Hydrographer Chas. S. Bailey, and a portion of the time Edgar Henriques, of the land commission.

Saw Molokai First

The party went to Molokai on Tuesday of last week by sampan, and spent two days looking over the resources of that island. The Governor had his attention called to a stretch of beach land near Kaunakakai which had been suggested by him and opened as homesteads.

"The land in question is covered all over with big boulders, has no water, and otherwise seems utterly unsuited as a place for making a permanent home," the Governor stated later.

To Give Homesteading Trial

Hawaii's new executive admits that he did not know a great deal about homesteading when he took office, but says he is learning a lot every day. He will not say that homesteading can be made a success in the Islands, but he does impress his determination to do his best for a few years to make it so.

"I saw some splendid examples of homesteading success on Hawaii," said the Governor, who recently spent two weeks looking into land matters on the Big Island. "And I also saw a good many that were anything but promising."

"These homestead I have in mind were on sugar lands for the most part. One family, by hard work now has a bank account of $3700 after only about 3 years. They are Hawaiians and are growing cane for a plantation. But they have done real work."

According to Governor McCarthy the plantations are showing a sincere desire to give the homestead idea a thorough and fair chance. Whatever may have been the attitude of the big companies in the past, it is not in the least antagonistic now, he finds. But he is not pleased with the ability thus far shown by the homesteaders

Kuhio And Link Hot On Same Itinerary

Maui This Week Is Stumping Ground For Both Parties—Each Hold Rallies On Market Street—Visited Hana District First

The political storm-center of the territory has been on Maui this week. With both Link McCandless and Kuhio on the island at the same time there is plenty of entertainment for the man with the ballot.

One of the interesting features is that Dr. Raymond, defeated in the primaries for the democratic nomination for delegate, took the platform at the big democratic rally on Market street on Wednesday night and preached the straight ticket doctrine to his hearers.

McCandless told the Maui voters all about the quantity of potatoes he is growing and eating, and compared his purchases of Liberty Bonds and other public bonds with purchases made by the vigilance corps. His discourse may have sounded very patriotic to some of his hearers.

Charlie Nottley, of Hilo; Kekoowai, of Molokai; and F. Benevides, of Honolulu were among the other visiting speakers at the meeting.

Kuhio's Rally Last Night

Delegate Kalaniano'le addressed a good sized audience at the Valley Isle Theater last night. He was the only candidate who spoke, and he shared his time with a lady speaker of the United War Work campaign and with a few reels of moving pictures.

Both Kuhio and McCandless were in the Hana district on Tuesday and Wednesday, the former going over by Harry Baldwin's yacht Albers, and the latter by the Claudine. Kuhio got back late last evening. He is in Lahaina today and expects to be back in Honolulu tomorrow. It is understood that he may visit Molokai later.

War Work Campaign Launched On Molokai

Rev. A. C. Bowdish of Paia, and Rev. Rowland B. Dodge, left on Thursday for Molokai, where they are touring the island in the interests of the United War Work Campaign.

The first day will be spent at the leper settlement where it was arranged through the kindness of H. A. Baldwin to show "The Spy". They will make addresses at Kalapapa and Kalawao. On Saturday, and until the boat returns on next Wednesday morning, they will speak in all the villages of Molokai upon the War work. This arrangement was made by the territorial and Maui speakers' committee.

Bertram Aiken Now In France In Tank Corps

Worth O. Aiken received a post card from his son Bertram Aiken, by Tuesday morning's mail, announcing his safe arrival in France. It was the first word his parents had had that he had, or was about to sail.

Young Aiken joined the army some months ago after working for a time in a big munitions factory in the east. He was stationed at Gettysburg, Pa., where his company was strenuously drilling and becoming familiar with the intricacies of their ponderous offensive engine, at last advices from him before this week.

INFLUENZA VICTIMS NOW MUST GO IN QUARANTINE

"Spanish Influenza," or perhaps just our old acquaintance, la grippe, has been declared, a "reportable" disease by the board of health. All cases must be reported as in the case of measles and similar diseases, and patients will be quarantined in their homes and their houses placarded. The action of the health board was taken on Monday. It is said that there are many cases of the malady in Honolulu.

Y. W. C. A. Women Arouse Enthusiasm

Campaign For United War Work Gets New Impulse From Fair Visitors—Number Of Meetings Held And Many Places Visited—Leave Tonight

On Monday evening Mrs. W. F. Frear, president of the Honolulu Y. W. C. A., Miss Grace Channon, secretary of the organization, and Miss Mary I. Bentley, executive secretary of the Pacific coast field of the Y. W. C. A., arrived on Maui. They had accompanied H. W. Rice, campaign manager for the United War Work Campaign in a tour of Hawaii.

Tuesday the ladies visited the Kula Sanitarium and had a number of private appointments. Wednesday they spent the morning visiting the High School and Maunaloa Seminary. In the afternoon at the Pala Community House about seventy ladies met in conference with the visitors.

The principal address of Tuesday evening was by Miss Bentley who dwelt particularly upon the part women are playing in this war and how the women are standing behind the men. Her address was forceful and filled with illustrations from the actual experience of women in munition factories and in Red Cross and Y. W. C. A. work near the battle front.

On Wednesday evening nearly 200 were present at the Kahului Community House, where Mrs. Frear opened the meeting by an address upon the United War Work Campaign. She explained in detail the meaning of the

The Pogue Service Flag Has Six Stars

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Pogue received a letter from their youngest son Henry just turned 18, to effect that he has enlisted in the navy at the Mare Island navy yard, California. This makes the 5th son that has entered the service since the war began, besides which one of their daughters is enlisted in the army nurses reserve.

Young Henry Pogue went to Honolulu some time ago to enter Punahou, but he wanted to enter the navy instead. He tried, but as he was under 18 he couldn't get accepted. But he managed to get a berth on a vessel going to the Coast, so he got to California and settled down with relatives in San Jose to wait till he should grow old enough. This occurred about 10 days ago and he evidently lost no time in getting to the recruiting office. His brother Charlie, who is in the navy, and at present on duty in Alaskan waters, has written lately urging Henry to keep on with his schooling for another year or two.

A War Stamp Challenge—Can Any One Beat It?

The employees of the East Maui Irrigation Co., with headquarters at Kailua, number about 220. They have been investing in War Savings and Thrift Stamps to the extent of between $1000 and $1500 per month for months past. They are away "over the top".

W. F. Pogue is superintendent of the company. Can any other community on Maui beat this record?

National Guard May Have Maui Company

Plans To Enlist New Class 1-A Men In Organization—Distance Between Residence Centers May Be Determining Factor Here

It is possible that a company of the new 5th Regiment, National Guard of Hawaii, may be established on Maui following the classification after the new draft registration which takes place tomorrow.

Governor McCarthy has advised the local draft board that it is the policy of the provost marshal general that all men placed in Class 1-A shall receive as much military instruction as possible pending their induction into the army, which may or may not occur in Hawaii. Wherever national guard units are available the draftees are expected to join them for instruction pending their call to the color.

The organization of a guard company on Maui will depend probably upon whether it is found possible to get a sufficient number of men enlisted who live near enough to one center to make training practicable.
