IMBECILITY OR MALICIOUSNESS?

Recently the Real Estate Exchange of San Francisco decided to call a State Immigration Convention, composed of delegates from the various counties of the State, to consider the general subject of immigration to the State of California.

The convention was promoted by the real estate agents, but to conceal the fact that its promoters were in the commission business, it concluded to assume the phase of a popular convention. Just what the convention proposed to convert itself into after it had met was not clear, but if it proposed the formation of a State Immigration Association on some new plan, under an old leadership, it was working in the direction of a divided effort, and it appears to be the course of everything done or proposed for the benefit of California that somebody should rise in a spirit of antagonism, neutralizing the good that is proposed by inaugurating hostilities, dividing counsel and dissipating effort.

It now transpires that the Immigration Convention called by the Real Estate Exchange was in reality a hostile movement against the State Board of Trade, and its purpose in this direction is clearly confessed by the President of the new convention. The State Board of Trade is an immigration agency conducted by private contributions. The reason why anybody should seek to antagonize it is past finding out. The promoters of the purposed convention, however, seem to think that whatever good is accomplished by the State Board of Trade should be arrested, because they say it is in alliance with the Southern Pacific Company.

In a recent interview with a metropolitan journal, the leader of the convention is quoted as saying to Secretary Maslin, of the State Board of Trade: "We do not care to join with you in any effort, for the reason that, whether it is a fact or a sentiment, the suspicion exists throughout the State that the State Board of Trade is too closely allied with the railroad to make it a public good." Now here is a superlative fool, who, when the Southern Pacific Company proposes to assist in promoting the welfare of the community, says the suspicion exists throughout this State that that corporation is engaged in promoting the public good, and that therefore the work proposed must necessarily be a public evil.

Under such leadership as this indicates, a convention is to be held for the purpose of preventing the Southern Pacific Company from joining in any effort for the promotion of the public good. It was further said in the interview: "We now intend to work independent of those who are under corporate influence, and who, when they come to San Francisco to attend a State Board of Trade meeting, travel on free passes." This is a very astonishing indictment, but it indicates a liberality on the part of the Southern Pacific Company of which we had not before been advised. It is a matter of public notoriety that the company has contributed $3,000 a year cash, and that it expended nearly $15,000 on the rolling exhibition known as "California on Wheels," and if it has given free transportation to the public-spirited men who have carried forward the very effective work of the State Board, it should be thanked for additional liberality. If the railroad company had refused to do any of these things, we can understand why somebody might have accused them of parsimony, want of public spirit, and charged the company with being a cormorant and an absorbent; but it is scarcely conceivable that a citizen of California, interested in the growth and development of the State, should object to the character of assistance which the Southern Pacific Company has rendered an immigration agency.

The State Immigration Convention is to be called for the purpose of creating dissensions, dividing the effort and neutralizing whatever good may have been or may hereafter be accomplished by the immigration agency known as the State Board of Trade.

It has come to a most contemptible pass when even the question of inviting a citizen of some State to make his residence with us involves recrimination, contention and controversy.

The dispatch of war vessels to China; the seriousness of the assaults there upon foreigners; the demands of European Powers upon the Chinese Government, the nervous edict the Emperor has issued to his chiefs in provinces; his appeal to Tartar Generals to protect foreigners and punish their assailants, all indicate a much graver situation than in this country has been believed to exist. That foreigners in China are very uneasy is certain; that they distrust the ability of the Imperial Government to maintain order, as well as its sincerity, all letters from China disclose. True, the advice of our own Government is that the protection promised will be afforded. But these are not borne out by private advices. The masses in China are not satisfied that the Tartar shall rule them; they are jealous of the influence foreign Governments have in the Imperial Court; they are beginning to know their strength, and have gained something from foreign contact, of boldness not characteristic of them. There is reason, then, to believe that the outrages are due to jealousy of foreign influence and the ambition of enemies of the Tartar throne, and if this is true then the assaults upon European and American missionaries have more meaning than we have attributed to them. We do not believe, as some Eastern journals allege, that the outrages are due to the restrictive laws imposed upon Chinese subjects abroad. China has not at any time manifested a retaliatory spirit. If she proposed such a policy it would appear in the form of laws bearing with greater severity upon European and Americans resident in China. It is more reasonable, as we have said, to believe that the riots against missionaries are intended to express discontent among local chieftains with the Imperial Tartar rule. The greater danger is that the dynasty will placate the chiefs and those they lead by manifest unfriendliness to foreigners in China. In that case we may look for far more danger soon to menace Europeans and Americans there than now threatens them.

WILLING TO FACE IT ALONE.

Only the Ambulance Surgeon Seemed to Have Plenty of Time.

A hodcarrier had been badly crushed by the fall of a scaffolding while he was at work on a tall building in Wall street, says the New York Tribune. His fellows had picked him up as tenderly as possible and had borne him bleeding and dusty to a shady spot to wait for the ambulance.
It was a long wait for the man in torture for the day was an intensely hot one, and people were being prostrated by the heat all over the city, and the ambulances had been on the run all day; short-hand was a long time for an ambulance to set out from a hospital, bring back a patient, and then reach another one, but to those who watch a man slowly bleeding to death for want of medical assistance, it seems an age.

Big, rough men stood around the fallen hodcarrier with tears in their eyes, uttering low curses at the tardiness of the ambulance. But the victim of the contractor's greed or carelessness was the most patient of them all. As the minutes passed alone he uttered no word of impatience, only he looked wistfully on those around him. After about half an hour of this suspense a doctor came, and passing was called over. He knelt down by the man, felt his crushed-in side and examined his fractured skull. Then he shook his head and said softly:

"Has he any friends among you?"

"None of us knows him, sir," said the foreman. He struck me for a job this morning, and after while he said to me:

"Put him to work without asking him any questions."

"Well, if any of you can get any information from him about his people, you'd better do so at once. He'll soon become unconscious and will die, without doubt, before night, no matter if fifty ambulances came after him. Nothing can save him. It's only a question of a few hours."

A flask of brandy was procured and a few drops put between his teeth. He seemed to revive him, and he opened his eyes and looked around, but to all questions as to his name, his home, his parents, his wife, his children, etc., he gave no answer.

"Well, old man," said the foreman at last, tenderly, "we can't do nothing at all for you, the doctor says, though you know we would if we could. The day is wearing on and our job must be finished.
The ambulance will soon be here, so you won't take it hard if we leave you now, will you?"

The hodcarrier looked up at him slowly and spoke with a great effort.

"I've got to die, eh?"

"Doctor says so."

"How soon?"

"Before sundown, my boy."

"No help for it?"

"No."

"Well," with a long sigh, "you go on with your work and I'll go on with my dying," and he turned his head—shut his eyes—and waited.

Teaching a Girl to Swim.

In deep water, under the care of an experienced person, a young girl may be taught to swim in a much shorter time than by practicing in shallow streams, says a good authority in the Ladies' Home Journal. A rope is fastened to the arms of her breast in such a manner that it will neither tighten nor loosen, and if courageous enough, she can, thus prepared, plunge in head first. The teacher will show her the proper way to use the arms and, finding herself protected by the rope, she will feel more faith in the exercise. The teacher will then draw her arms into the water until breast high, laying her nearly flat upon it, and supporting her by placing one hand under the chest, at the same time giving instructions as to the proper motion of hands, arms and feet. In a few days the hand may be gradually withdrawn, and the girl swimmer able to do without it. "There are ever so many 'dons' about swimming," Unlike Punch's, they begin after the act is signed, sealed and delivered, and you are a fool to listen to them. The most important piece of negative advice is, don't ever lose your presence of mind. With that you are mistress of the situation, and other things not overwhelming against you, can reach land again.

Fall Dress Goods.

Summer stuffs have passed into oblivion, as far as the retailer is concerned. Their day is done, and the people are now properly clamoring for NEW GOODS. The largest houses in the East and also in San Francisco are displaying the new fabrics, and this is the only house in Sacramento, as far as we have heard, that has anything like a respectable assortment at this early date. This is because we are importers. Goods are shipped direct to us from the foreign manufacturers without any intermediate delays, as in the case of goods which first pass through the jobber's hands. Fashionable fabrics with trimmings for the same are now here in profusion. We invite your inspection just as earnestly for seeing as for buying.

Cloaks and Jackets.

This morning over FIFTY new styles in Ladies' and Misses' Jackets and Children's Cloaks were put into stock. This lot is supplementary to several invoices received during the past ten days. The variety is consequently even now extremely large and the styles will be found as delightful as the prices are pleasing.
