Convention in San Francisco Frank Miller, Cashier of the Mills National Bank of this city, read a paper on "Improved Methods.'

He said the need of system, of order, of care-taking, of caution were necessary. The commercial banker must keep his surplus cash loaned, and risk and worry result. Savings bank men are often the envy of commercial bankers, due to the different systems of security. He urged that the laws relating to interest payment should be amended. If possible an enactment should be adopted requiring that no interest should be paid except out of the security pledged to the lender.

Methods of time-testing and rules desired were treated. Commercial banks are too prone to favor old firms who maintain standing book accounts and use both their own and the bank's money. Instead of lending on the strength of a borrower's ledger, the paper of their customers should be brought in more frequently for discount.

From the author, Edward Powers, C. E., of Delavan, Wis., we have a small volume entitled, "War and the Weather." The first edition was issued in 1871. The present is a revised and much improved issue. The topic is the production of rain by human agencies. Mr. Powers has produced a very interesting book. He has marshaled his proofs quite con-Montevideo dispatch it is denied that vincingly, and has certainly added mamembers of the Revolutionary Club, who terially to the reasons for believing that rain can be produced by artificial means. He adduces evidence that artillery firing 'sets in operation certain motions and forces" that cause condensation of aqueous vapor, thus bringing rain. He considers the equatorial and polar currents of the atmosphere and the ample supplies of vapor for producing rain, why a state of drought neither causes nor indicates an insufficiency of vapor, and how nature brings rain. He shows how concussion causes condensation of vapor, and why the air is moist in the Mississippi Valley and in the Eastern States, and dry and hold it is the control of the contr healthful in California and Colorado. Errors in Espy's theory and mistakes of meteorologists in placing effect for cause and cause for effect are pointed out. He reflects on the partiality of the Government in expenditures for the benefit of classes other than the agricultural class, and makes a plea for experiments to test and develop a plan designed to benefit this class by preventing droughts. Letters are given from Generals Marshall, Benham, Heintzelman, Hunt, Hagner, Wood, Robinson, Schotieid and Johnson, of the United States Army, Rear Ad-miral Goldsborough and Commander Barrett of the United States Navy, and from the following officers of the late volunteer army of the United States, viz.: General Chamberlain of Maine; Generals Hamilton and Serrell of New York; Generals McCoy, Campbell, Dana and Os-borne of Pennsylvania; Generals Gar-field, Hays, Knapp and Barnett, and Captain Manning of Ohio; General Milroy of Indiana; Generals McNulta, Smith and White, Colonel Kennicott of Illinois; Generals Rice, Vandever and Hedricks of Iowa, and Generals Bryant and Starkweather of Wisconsin, all tending to support his theory—which, however, is not now seriously disputed. The volume sells at $1, and is worth it for the scientific testimony it contains.

At the battle of Sadowa, in which the Prussians lost 9.234 and the Austrian forces 16.235 killed and wounded, and 22,684 Austrians were taken prisoners, Miss Granville was personally decorated by Prince Frederick Charles with the order of the Iron Cross, an honor which was subsequently con-ferred upon Miss Florence Nightingale. The novel is one of marked originality and unusual merit. One of the best points of the book is the exposure it takes of the present status of the French law of marriage, by which a French citizen who has been long a resident of this country can marry an American girl in France by the religious ceremony only, and then disavow the union if he so pleases. The author also boldly attacks the great American messenger companies, whose custom of sending boys into places of disreputable character he denounces in
