The Supervisors Refuse the County Assessor Extra Assistance.

Discussion on County Finances-The Ramie Man Disappointed-John Bandeen's Complaint.

C. Irvine, for four extra deputies to assist him in handling the assessment roll, was called upon for a report by the Chairman. The committeemen, however, had not held a consultation, and asked for time, At the suggestion of Chairman Greer they retired then and there, and indulged in a talk.

Returning a few moments later, they again asked for further time, and the request was granted.

Later in the day, however, they held

MURRAY ON DECK. W. H. Murray, the ramie culture enthusiast, appeared before the board and asked for encouragement in getting out a special Sacramento County edition of the San Francisco Journal of Commerce. He wanted the board to promise to take 2,000 copies of the edition for $200, and distribute them.

tribute them.

The Supervisors informed the gentleman that the county had already expended considerable money for such advertising this year, and they doubted if any more was needed. However, they promised to take the matter under con-sideration, and give him a definite answer later on.

Mr. Murray is of the "never-say-die" order, and remained with the board all day. When the adjournment hour was near at hand he went after the members again. When he threatened them with a speech Mr. Black jumped up and moved that the board promise to purchase 100 copies of the special edition Mr. Murray proposed to print. Mr. Greer seconded the motion, remarking that he would vote for anything that would advertise Sacramento County. But when the vote was called for the other three members voted against the proposition, and despite war. Ramie's" entreaties, they would not Sadie Clark and Katie Moore as witnesses

They represented that they were hemmed in on all sides so that they could not get off their farms. The board proceeded in the usual course to inquire into the matter before opening the road, and in that condition the matter now rests. But the might be a nuisance in the community, their farms. The board result of inquire into the matter usual course to inquire into the matter now rests. But the petitioners, particularly Bandeen, are impatient, and claim that every day of delay adds to their discomfort. Yester-day the board received a letter from Mr. Bandeen, in which the latter complained bitterly of the situation. Among other things, he said in his letter: "Heed as it is may duty to insist upon some of your honorable body to come out and view my petitioned road. I was shamefully abused this morning by William Presbery. Attorney R. T. Devlin was employed by the board to bring suit to secure the collection of commissions for State taxes, which Mr. Devlin has discovered was due from the State to the county for several years past. It is said that the money heretofore received by the county was below its due. The amount to be recovered will reach several thousand dollars. The agreement reached between Mr. Devlin and the board was that he should receive, by way of compensation, half of what he recovered for the county.

The roll was called, and Supervisors Miller, Bates and Black voted against it. "The motion is lost by the vote of the city members," said Chairman Greer. Mr. Bates took the floor and said he did not vote for the motion because there was now over $4,000 in the general read fund. Supervisors Greer and Jenkins dis-puted this, declaring that the Auditor's report showed that there was no money in that fund. Auditor Johnson substan-

TWO WRATHFUL PARENTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogg Respond to Hogue's Complaint.

How They Went After the Alleged Assailant of Their Child-Mrs. Hogue Faints in Court.

The case of Henry W. M. Ogg and wife, charged by Robert L. Hogue with assault to murder him, came up in the Police Court before Judge Cravens yesterday. The complainant testified that he resides on the alley between J and K. Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, and that on Tuesday Mrs. Ogg came to his house and demanded to know who was the man living there that had meddled with her little girl. Mrs. Ogg, Hogue said, was very much excited and flourished a revolver, threatening to blow the man's brains out if he was there. Hogue said he was very weak at the time, and had retired to his room. His mother met Mrs. Ogg and tried to pacify her, but she would not listen to anything. He said that Mr. Ogg shortly after appeared with the little girl, a child three peared with the little girl, a child three years old, and taking her into his room asked her if "that was the man?" The child, according to Hogue, nodded her head affirmatively, whereupon Ogg struck the witness on the head with a cane, grasped him by the throat and struck him a second blow. He claimed he was rendered unconscious by the blow, and has since suffered from its effects.

Hogue was cross-examined by Grove Hogue was cross-examined by Grove L. Johnson, counsel for Ogg, and answered the questions very guardedly, claiming that he had no time before Ogg attacked him to assert his innocence of the charge of having meddled with the child. He claimed to be innocent of the

A neighbor named Seaton, a clerk at 1404 J street, testified that he heard the screams of Mrs. Hogue, and upon going to the rescue found Ogg standing over Hogue, who was lying upon a bed. Ogg was in the act of striking Hogue with a cane, when he interfered and prevented him. He said [Hogue was then bleeding about the head and face from the blows about the head and face from the blows inflicted before his arrival.

Witness saw Mrs. Ogg in the room with a pistol, and she said she wanted to see Hogue well thrashed. Under his persuasion Ogg then left the house, notifying the Hogues as he did so that he would give the son three days in which to leave Ziele further stated that if he had known at the time that Ogg's charge against Hogue was true, he would not have interfered.

When the case was recalled, City Attorney Hart asked for a continuance, owing to the sickness of Mrs. Hogue, who had been removed to her home.

dered by the jury. Gordon and Casey told straightforward stories, and the jury did right in believing them. The murder was a cold-blooded and most cruel one, and Smith had been shown to be the arch-conspirator of the whole plot. The evidence warranted a verdict of hanging. Judge Van Fleet reviewed the evidence at length, and decided that the jury's verdict was a proper one. He overruled the motion for a new trial.

Smith was then ordered to stand up,
