is still accepted as the reason for her disappearance. Two years later, says the Philadelphia Times, there was another mysterious disappearance. A sloop-of-war, called the Levant, with about 200 men on board, disappeared as completely as the Albany. She was off Hawaii when last seen. No wreckage from her was ever found and no memento of her fatal cruise was left. Communication in those days was slow and it was many months before she was given up entirely.

A piece of wreckage picked up near Cape Hatteras in 1863 carried the only survivor of the brig-of-war Bainbridge which had gone down in a cyclone carrying more than 200 people. The survivor was a colored cook.

In January, 1870, the British ship Bombay ran into the United States corvette Oneida in the harbor of Yokohama. The Oneida was lost with 112 men. Captain Eyre of the Bombay did not even stop to see how much damage he had done, and when the matter was investigated by the Admiralty he was severely censured.

Two famous disasters to United States vessels were the wreck of the Monongahela in 1867 and the wreck of the Waterlee in 1868. The Monongahela was picked up by a tidal wave carried over a number of large buildings on the island of Santa Cruz, knocking one of them down, and was left high and dry in the streets of the city. She was blocked up by workmen and launched again, and she is now on the active list of the navy. There is no record of fatalities connected with this accident. In the accident to the Waterlee, which was of a similar character, only one man was killed. The Waterlee was a side wheel iron ship of 1200 tons, designed to do blockading duty in the narrow rivers of the South. She carried a very heavy battery, drew only nine feet of water, and, having a rudder at each end, could steam in either direction. She was almost flat-bottomed, being designed to carry a battery and a crew of nearly twice the tonnage of the ordinary model. This is what saved the lives of her crew.

The Waterlee was stationed at Callao, Peru, during the bombardment of that city by the Spanish in 1866. She cruised up and down the Pacific coast for two years, and in August, 1868, was anchored off Arica, Peru, where she had towed the storeship Fredonia. She remained at anchor at Arica overhauling engines and boilers preparatory to going to San Francisco. Arica was a rich town of some 10,000 inhabitants, picturesquely situated in a valley which ran up into the Andes. On one side was a perpendicular cliff 500 feet high and on the other side the mountain slopes. Twice Arica had been nearly destroyed by earthquakes.

On August 8, 1868, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the men on the Waterlee felt a violent trembling of the ship and saw a cloud of dust approaching from the southeast. They saw the hills moving and heard a heavy rumbling like thunder. The ship reeled but righted herself again, and when the cloud of dust had settled the whole town was seen to be in ruins. The officers of the Waterlee remembered the tidal wave which had stranded the Monongahela in the straits of St. Thomas, and began immediately to take all precautions. Additional anchors were put out, the hatches were battened down, the gunboats were secured, and the lines were stretched fore and aft. The people on the shore were crying for assistance, so a landing party of forty men, with a crew of thirteen, went ashore. A boatkeeper was left in charge of the boat, but a minute after the crew had landed the earthquake shock had returned, the pier was wrecked and the boat was hurled against the cliff. The boatkeeper saw what was coming, and taking the boat flag in his hand, he waved a farewell to his comrades as the boat went down. The Waterlee was carried three miles inland and her bones are there yet.

Men Who Deceive Bankers.

N. A. Painbolt of Norfolk, Neb., who was present at the World's Congress of Finance at Chicago, said to the writer: "I am more fearful of the man who makes a good appearance than the other kind. Men who expect to deceive bankers understand how much we have to depend upon looks. They prepare themselves accordingly. If a man comes to me with a certain amount of timidity and want of confidence I am more inclined to take him at his word and give him what he wants than if he is ready of speech and entirely self-possessed. As for the theory that the confidence man betrays himself by his manner I have my doubts. It hasn't been my experience with them. Dickens is considered an authority on human nature. Dickens said something like this: 'The general impression is that a dishonest man cannot look you in the face. Let me disabuse your mind of that, for I promise you a dishonest man can look you out of countenance every hour of the day if there is anything to be gained by it.' My experience in the banking business confirms that view of it."

J. M. Dinwiddie of Cedar Rapids said: "Let me add my experience. A man came into my bank with a check for $15—his wages as carpenter, he said. He was dressed like a working man. He looked like one. In every way he had the appearance of an honest man. I hadn't the least doubt he was what he claimed to be, and cashed his check. He had forged the signature. He cashed six others just like it in our city that day. We got him, and I looked him over afterward carefully, but I couldn't see anything about him which conflicted with my first judgment. That was an honest working man. Even after he was in prison he was just as honest looking as when he came to the bank window."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Aim at the Drake

And you are bound to hit some of the ducks. This is precisely the same with Wampole's Tasteless Preparation OF Cod Liver Oil.

It aims to cure Consumption, Hits the Mark, too, and it most effectively breaks up Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness and all Throat and Lung troubles that cause this disease.

It is natural logic to conclude that if WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION OF COD LIVER OIL has power to prevent Consumption, it surely is able to cure these lesser emergencies.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.

But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

In Pulmonary or Bronchial troubles it is unequalled. No one doubts the value of Cod Liver Oil, but not every one is able to take it.

WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION removes the nauseous objection and actually makes Cod Liver Oil palatable.

Bishop, Editor; published monthly, at $2 per annum, devoted to the religious and educational interests of these islands, as also a recorder of political and other current events. Sample copies mailed to any address. A limited number of advertisements inserted at reasonable rates.

The Hawaiian Annual now in its Nineteenth year, and acknowledged not only as the best authority on all information pertaining to the islands that residents should know and strangers invariably ask, but the only reference book of Hawaiian statistics, and annual recorder of current and remnant events. There are homes probably in this land in which it is unknown, except by name, and there are numerous friends abroad to whom this publication would afford untold satisfaction for the fund of reliable information it imparts in its one hundred and fifty or more pages, with nothing of the "Guide Book" gush about it. Price per copy to any address in these islands, 75 cents; or mailed to any address in the Postal Union for 85 cents each.
