We want, says the Government through its organ, a class of laborers whom not want men alive to the dignity of labor, forming that troublesome middle class who know their rights, and knowing dare maintain; -let such get brats and starve," or go elsewhere. Give us the unreasoning machines, in whose eyes a dollar is a god, and who know no rights beyond those of mere existence.

In connection with this subject of the rates of labor, we notice that wages in the United States are ruling high, while the eight hour system is generally adopted. Says the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, in a recent article on the prospects of "Taking Springfield as a representative of the spect, forworking centres of America, and we find the general rule to be, that the wages of all skilled labor will average higher for 1870 than in any former year. Thus, the stone-cutters here have achieved, during the last season, an hour's reduction of working time per day, and a part of them, in addition, an increase of wages from $3 50 to $4. In the Wesson carshops a portion of the carpenters have had their pay advanced from 30 to 324 cents an hour, while there has been no reduction in any other class of labor. In the Smith & Wesson gun and pistol shops, the pay is the same now as five years ago; their tool-makers get from $3 to $3 50 a day, and the workmen on pistols range from $2 to $3 25 per day, with boys at from $1 to $1 50. The Boston and Albany Railroad pays the same prices that it did during the war; common laborers receiving $1 60 a day, and brakemen and firemen $1 75 to $2, and mechanics in the shops from $2 to $3. So at the Armory, there has been no change for several years; and the average pay of the gun-makers is $3 a day of eight hours.

language was invented for the purpose of concealing one's thoughts. The rigmarole of words in the last Gazette under the heading of "Public own raising. Spirit," the style of which indicates the source of emanation as plainly as if the seal of the Foreign Office was attached, is an illustration in point. Doubtless many of our readers have heard the story of two young men in a ball room, criticising the style and carriage of the lady dancers, when one of the two made some disparaging remark regarding a young lady's appearance, whereupon his fellow critic, coloring up, observed-" That's my sister." Whereupon the other, after a pause of embarrassment, asked, "What is the price of sugar?" So the organ of the Minister, having in an unguarded moment made some uncalled for remarks touching a large and worthy class in our community-the mechanics-which remarks we took it upon ourselves to note and censure, now dodges the point and seems incl.ned to ask | ing into accounts of expenditures. To be sure, an the cost of building a hen-coop! This will not do for the reading, thinking portion of our community. If the Gazette has said something which it now wishes unsaid-let it repent, acknowledge its fault, and sin no more; but let it forbear its whine of sorrow about our " epithets and a style of writing which have hitherto been avoided " in our columns. in the article which means something serious. In the opening, the writer expresses himself pleased, (how condescending) that the previous week's remarks had attracted the attention of " mechanics as well as others whose desire is to promote the public good;" and farther along he gives us a doleful picture of an unfortunate capitalist. Not certainly in the price of the necessaries of "worried to death by seeing two, three, or four men on their walls working in a most leisurely Let us see what are the prices of "the neces- manner, and availing themselves of every excuse saries of life" in Honolulu. Rather is it not a base libel upon man is of the Anglo-Saxon stock. Beginning you, deliberately uttered by the Minister, through with the butcher, we find his retail prices his Gazette, for the plain purpose of showing that you are an overpaid, pampered set, who who employ you? That is just what those ministerial utterances mean, and nothing less.

The Hotel Project.

At the meeting of the subscribers to the Hotel Bonds, which was called for Wednesday last, there was an attendance of about twenty of the merchants and business men of the city. His Excellency, J. A Native Kahuna.

Every little while one of those pretenders to medical skill, a native kahuna, is brought before the police magistrate on a charge of practicing medicine without a license. The testimony given on these trials is interesting as affording an insight of the hidden life of the people which is seldom otherwise to be obtained; and at the same If erected there, at no matter how great cost and time leading to a conclusion not to be escaped, that the ancient superstitions of the Hawaiians still retain a strong hold upon them. Last Monday, a native who answered to the name of Levi, was arraigned, on information laid by another native, who accused him of doctoring his (com- ROYAL HAWAIIAN THEATRE plaint's) wife for some disease of the chest-probably asthma. The Doctor had exacted a fee of six dollars, but had failed to effect a cure, and hence the complaint.

On the trial, which occupied a part of two days, number of witnesses were examined, whereby it appeared that Dr. Levi enjoyed a pretty extensive practice, and was considered a kahuna of mana, or supernatural power. He had three gods, who by turns inspired, or possessed him, and when he was under their control he prescribed and prophesied. The first was a female, named Kahikina (the East) for whose reception the Doctor had to be robed in a white chemise. The second was also a goddess, whose dress was a deep red chemise. Her name was Kahuila, also Kamolokai, one of the gods, according to ancient mythology, who came from a foreign country and entered the Nioi, a poison tree, which once grew on Molokai and Lanai. The third was a male god, named Kapueromia or Kopala, and he invariably wore a cotton undershirt and a malo. Dr. Levi, before calling in the aid of these familiar spirits, was accustomed to name some chapter of the New Testament, and order it to be read aloud, BALES SUPERIOR ENGLISH PRINTS. listening meantime with all reverence.
