This was followed by more music, and then the reading of Declaration of Independence by Mr. W. H. Austin...

THE ORATION.

The following is an outline of Mr. Green's stirring oration. He said in effect:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and gentlemen—I had the pleasure, many years ago, of listening to a venerable clergyman who had spent his life as a missionary among the heathens...

The average American has long been considered a very good musician—I refer, however, to that class of music called "certain music," but it would appear that the enervating influences of this tropical climate have somewhat impaired his vocal organs...

Should a successful Arctic explorer reach the North Pole, and find a new world beyond the will do it? Yes, I believe there starting a new ice, gas or telephone company, but at what time in the history he began to go abroad...

I doubt if there is a State or Territory in the American Union that is not represented here today, besides the District of Columbia and New Jersey. But our country has very wisely sent us a guardian to watch over us...

If this faith be true, and we love to cherish it, then who shall call the roll of honored names of those who have fed the fire of Liberty and of Union for the past century. Our minds turn instinctively to our Washington and our Lincoln...

Let us review briefly some of the influences which have served to keep alive the spirit of '76, and sink deeper the foundation pillars on which rests the Great Republic. Who shall estimate the influence of a single thought properly phrased and thrown upon the hearts of a thinking, free and enlightened people...

and honored throughout the earth—still full high advanced its arms and trophies streaming in their original lustre: not a stripe erased or polluted, nor a single star obscured...

Another grand thought, framed and hung upon the walls of the Republic, as we have mentioned upon the walls of our homes: read by millions, memorized and declaimed by the youth of the land by scholars, statesmen and divines...

The legal status is made. Their Governors clap the hand of their great leader, and bid him be firm and true to the people. The offering is ready for the altar. The rugged Serras and the snow-capped peaks of the Rocky Mountains have sealed the Alps, and stand shoulder to shoulder with the sons of New England...

Morn came and went, and came again, but bright no day. But there is no fear. "Truth crushed to earth shall rise again." The eternal years of God are hers...

Four years have passed. Again we lift the curtain. The winged angel of peace hovers over the broad land. Yonder, beneath the shade trees of Appomattox sit the centuries—two great chieftains, the sword of slavery, of secession and disunion, is forever sheathed...

Two boats only, the Liliu and Puhuaiani, competed for the prize offered by the Fourth of July Committee. The former was entered by Lieut. H. Fisher, and the latter by the Myrtle boat club...

BASEBALL MATCH.

Immediately after luncheon several hundred people wended their way towards the Makiki Reserve, to witness the contest between the rival baseball clubs, the Honolulu and the Oceanic. The first named had the call in the betting, whilst a few firm friends of the Oceanics stood by the juveniles...

FIREWORKS.

On the evening of the 4th quite a number of invited guests assembled on the spacious veranda of the Spreckels' mansion to witness a magnificent display of fireworks.

The entertainment lasted over two hours, rocket after rocket soaring skyward, roman candles shooting many, sizzling or taking headers into the ground according to their disposition.

Mr. John Spreckels was indefatigable and evidently enjoyed sending off the fireworks almost as much as the noisy and delighted group of children on the second story veranda enjoyed seeing them.

Judge Widemann's active figure was seen alternately lighted by green, red and yellow lights, energetically waving Roman candles or stamping the grass that was on fire.

The audience on the balcony were refreshed with cake and wine, and many left at ten o'clock to attend the ball at the Music Hall.

Among those present were His Excellency W. M. Gibson, His Excellency and Mrs. Paul Neumann, His Excellency and Mrs. Guidick, Governor and Mrs. Dominis, Colonel Judd, Mr. and Mrs. Deane, Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt, Mr. and Mrs. Glade, Mr. and Mrs. Strong, Mr. and Mrs. Foreman and others.

THE BALL.

This year's ball was a grand success, well arranged, the hall beautifully decorated, and the floor managers knew just how to put the whole thing through without a hitch.

Though a public ball, most of our best people attended, irrespective of nationality, and with Minister Daggett's charming wife to receive, the whole affair was as quiet and delightful as a private reception.

His Majesty the King was present, accompanied by Col. Judd, Prince Giovanni del Drago and the officers of the Vettor Pisani, also Commodore, Captain and officers of the Vanadis, His Majesty's Ministers and the Consuls of nearly all the nationalities represented in Honolulu.

CORRESPONDENCE.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the statements made, or opinions expressed by our correspondents.

MR. EDITOR,—Is it true that the editor of a weekly newspaper in this town was lowered over the side of a man-of-war in this harbor in a hopeless state of intoxication?

Is it true that the same man was seen hanging to a lamp post outside a saloon in this town, with a yearning desire to enter, but with legs too unstable to move his tottering carcass?

Is it true this is forgotten? Is it true this man dares to set himself up as a critic? XXX.

KOHALA, HAWAII, June 21, 1884.

Judge Hart has been on a trip to Hamakua to hold Court.

Raffle at Kaiopih Hall for a breach-loading rifle resulted in Mr. Harry Bickard shouldering the article.

Kohala didn't "snap" everything at the races, as it expected to, but we ought not to expect all the good things.

We hear that Akiona has sued the B. S. Co. for $5,000 damages for forcible removal from property he claims to own. It seemed a little hard to turn a man's family into the street in the absence of the head of a family, but if it was done on the order of the Judge it would seem that he and not the B. S. Co. should be held responsible.

The Lock Chin Tong Society formed a regular organization by the election of Aseu President, Lung He, Vice-President; Ah Mo, Secretary, and Ah Fer, Treasurer. We think the society will prove of much value to the planters of the district, as it is comprised of the best Chinamen we have here.

When was the petition against a bank charter, and said to contain seventy names, circulated? Kohala petitions are very quietly gotten up, and generally contain the names of those of least importance in the district. Paper money backed by gold is all right.

Several of the Kohala people go to Honolulu next week to give evidence in the Kianu murder trial. They hate to go so bad that they almost wish there had been no murder.

Hamakua drops wages of field laborers from $20 to $18 per month on the first of July, and requests Kohala to sustain them by doing the same. We certainly ought to do so, but, as every planter pulls for himself alone in this district, we can hardly expect much unanimity, even in so important a move.
