Experiences with Alfalfa.

To get alfalfa started is one thing, but to keep it started and growing is quite another. In 1889 I sowed twenty-five acres. The ground is bottom and it was in corn the year before. I sowed it to spring wheat and plowed the wheat in, running the plow two and a half to three inches deep, then sowed the alfalfa, running a smoothing harrow and a plank; all done by the first of April. I sowed eleven pounds to the acre and got a good stand, and have it yet. In 1892 I sowed twenty acres. I waited until May to sow and went over the ground several times with disc and harrow. It was fall plowed. I sowed nothing with it. The seed came up all right. I sowed twenty pounds to the acre, but the wind and hot weather destroyed it in a very short time. I prepared 120 acres in the fall of 1894 by plowing from one to two inches deeper than the ground had ever been plowed before and let the cattle, sheep and hogs run over it as much as they liked. Last March I began seeding and by the 10th of April I had it all in. The first thirty acres I sowed a half bushel of spring wheat on the ground, then followed with a disc press drill, sowing thirty pounds to the acre, running the disc two to three inches deep. The seed came up generally very nicely and is now in fine condition with the exception of where we crossed back furrows and high places, allowing the disc to run in the ground too deep. There the stand is thinnest. The second piece, of twenty acres, I sowed three-fourths of a bushel of oats, followed with the drill, sowing twenty pounds of seed to the acre. The stand on this is equally as good as the first, but the same thing is noticeable where the disc ran deep. All of this and the bottom generally more or less sand mixed with the soil, although part of it is gumbo, and the alfalfa appears to be equally as good, if not better, there than elsewhere. The third piece is seventy acres of high land and rough. It has a subsoil mostly of clay, and in places at the heads of draws and along the edges the clay is so near the surface and so sticky that the plow will not scour. On this piece I reversed the order of sowing: putting the alfalfa on first with the seeder, fifteen pounds to the acre, following with the disc drill, sowing three-fourths of a bushel of oats to the acre. All three pieces of ground were immediately harrowed and rolled as soon after seeding as possible. The last piece of seventy acres was the finest stand I ever saw, and on the clay knobs it is as rank and fine as any one could wish. Do not pasture too much the first year. If you get a good stand after mowing it once or twice you can run pigs on it in the fall, with benefit to the alfalfa and pigs. Cut their noses so they cannot root, as they like the roots after freezing has killed the top. I. B. Hampton, in Kansas Farmer.

An Affidavit.

This is to certify that on May 11th, I walked to Melick's drug store on a pair of crutches and bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for inflammatory rheumatism which had crippled me up. After using three bottles I am completely cured. I can cheerfully recommend it. Charles H. Wetzel, Sunbury, Pa.
