899 on small transactions. The irregularity of the stock market during the past week is significant of the unsettlement of speculative sentiment and the present satiety of the voracious speculative demand, which took in all classes without discrimination, for a time after election. The decreased volume of dealings is a reflection of this condition of affairs. The sharp reaction in prices here and there represents the unloading of speculative pools, anx-ous to take profits and alert to the declining interest in speculation. This unloading process has served to reveal the collapse of the early buoyant buying spirit. The Sugar episode was in some part an aggravated cause of this tendency of stocks and in some ways merely an Hustration of it. The abortive speculation in Sugar had its own motive in the unwarranted expectation of a dividend increase, but other stocks in the market offer an analogy. The industrials, as a group, are showing the effects of the pending problem of the efficacy of the new ndustrial combination as a financial device. The "greener" newer industrials are more sen- | U. The principal of these ques-that only such prees for the product as invite new competition will bring in the requisite proment of dvidends on these stocks and the cours of events in the trade during the past year here obviously failed to entirely solve doubts on this subject in the minds of the speculative and investment public, as is shown by the prices of the securities. The outcome of events in the trade during the coming year are awaited to form a basis for more definite conclusions. The profits of manufacture at last year's level of price, it is proved, were so great as to invite the bringing into activity of a large aggregate of productive forces which resulted in an overeduction and necessitated concessions to work THE RULING FACTOR. The part taken in the loan market by trust companies and other fiduciary institutions makes it somewhat difficult to measure the absorption of credits for purposes of tock market speculation, as it does not figure a the loan item of the banks. While trust empanies were lending money on the Stock Exchange they were withdrawing deposits from are making preliminary arrangemens to meet the yearly settlements on Jan. 1, there is likely the banks. So that there was an actual loan contraction reported by the clearing house banks at the period of greatest speculative activity in the stock market. Now that trust companies to be an increasing disposition by these institu-tions to call loans, thus driving borrowers to the banks for renewals. The large movement of currency to the interior and the heavy bank clearings at interior points justify the predic-tions made by bankers before election of active requirements for money before the end of the car, although the effect is somewhat belated. With this inroad on New York bank resources to meet interior needs and speculative borrowers resording to the banks for renewals of loans cailed elsewhere, there is a possibility of forced liquidation in the stock market, especially with prices there invitingly high.

Money rates have been higher during the week, but the money market outlook has not prevented the continuance of strong points in the market, specially in the lower-priced railroad stocks. Organized buying has been in evidence in some cases, supposed to reflect the continuance of policy among the great railroad systems of securing representation in the companies of com-peting or connecting lines. These points of strength have served to vary the prevailing calf. 94c; No. 2 calf. Sc.

The business in bonds on several days during the week has arisen above the level of the dealings in the active stock market after the tion, but has at no time reached the high level of the January, 1899, period. The buying was more or less speculative and was specially directed to contingent interest bonds and junior issues. Gilt-edged and high grades are quiet.
