Attorneys of Mrs. Martineck File Mo tion That Is Overruled-Other Court Cases.

The case of Kate Martineck, charged with cruelty to Hazel Orme, went to the jury at 5:30 o'clock yesterday evening. The attorneys on both sides were allowed one hour and fifteen minutes for argument. Deputy Prosecutor Benedict opened the argument for the State. He recited the testimony against Mrs. Martineck and appealed to the jurors from the standpoint of humanity, regardless of the rebuttal testimony tending to show that the emaciated condition of the girl was due to causes other than starvation. He said the fact remained that the child had been cruelly treated. The fact that he girl was dull, he said, was all the more reason why she should have been treated kindly. He said that no punishment could be too severe for any one that would strike an afflicted child. O. B. Orton followed Benedict for the defense. He traced the girl's condition down | lant's brief (8.) to a sore on her ankle, which, he said, had caused the diseased condition of the body. N. W. Harding followed Orton for the de-closed for the State. The afternoon session of the court began with character witnesses in behalf of Mrs. Martineck. They testified as to her reputation for peace and quiet. Then Mrs. Martineck was placed on the stand and denied all of the allegations made against her. She said Hazel was attacked with a cold about Christmas time, which resulted in her wasted physical condition.

fense and Prosecutor John C. Ruckelshaus

In the forenoon John Williams testified that he had taken about twenty-four meals at the Martineck home, and that Hazel was allowed to eat with the family. Thomas Cook, an interne at the City Dispensary, who was called to see Hazel at the Martineck home, said he found her in an emaciated condition. He said the girl made few answers to his questions and that the Martinecks did most of the talking. Dr. W. B. Fletcher testified that he examined the girl and found indications of consumption. He sald in his opinion the girl suffered from malnutrition, possibly, but not probably, due to lack of food. William Martineck, husband of Mrs. Martineck, who is also under a similar charge and will be tried later, testified that he had never heard Hazel crying in the back yard at night. He also denied that she was not given the same to eat as the family. Dr. Dorsey, attending physician at the Eleanor Hospital, said that part of Hazel's treatment consisted of three square meals a day. He said she has a remarkable appetite and assimilates her food. Just before the argument was reached a question was raised by the attorneys for the defense as to the jurisdiction of the court. They contended that there had been no judgment entered against Mrs. Martineck because the Police Court docket had not been signed by the judge, and hence there was no appeal. Judge Alford overruled the motion in order that he case might proceed.

CITY WILL SELL TREES.

Thieves Are Stealing Timber from Sellers Farm-City Affairs.

To get ahead of lumber thieves the city will have a lot of valuable trees for sale within a few weeks. On the old Sellers farm, southwest of town, which is owned by the city, there are several hundred goodsized trees, which, in the opinion of the Board of Works, are worth at least $2,000. I shall attempt tonight a definition of the nature of this righteousness. I shall ask your attention largely to the Sermon on the Mount, in which Jesus summarized in a graphic way all His teachings. "The beatitudes might well have formed joyfulness of the life of the children of the kingdom and throw a flood of light upon the nature of its righteousness. From them we gather that it consists in humility in one's estimate of one's personal goodness; in a conscience sensitive to the presence of wrong in one's life; in gentleness, mer-cifulness, personal purity, peace making; in intense desire to have one's life right; in courage to take blows and suffer for the cause of truth.

Giving to the unfortunate and poor is to be very delicately and considerately done. Prayer is to be in secret and absolutely sincere. All religious service and sacrifice are to be unpretentions. The real thing that commands the hearts of men must be the progress and life of the kingdom. The modern world, like the world of Jesus' time, is intent on acquiring wealth. You must not let the ambition of your life be any such thing. said Jesus. 'Ye cannot serve God and Mammon' (the pursuit of wealth.) Venture out into the kingdom, therefore, and do not be afraid of the future. God will feed and clothe you if you do your duty. The righteousness of the kingdom, therefore, lemands the use of wealth for the purposes of the kingdom in the world. A man omes an administrator of what he has for the wide work of God.

We are not to say severe and bitter things about each other, not to judge hastily of men's motives, but observe the golden rule There are two teachings outside the Sermon on the Mount which receive great emphasis by our Lord. AN AFTERNOON LECTURE.

Rev. Joshua Stansfield at Meridian-

Street Church. The Rev. Joshua Stansfield gave his third Lenten lecture yesterday afternoon. His theme was "The Cross; a Fact; a Law of Life." He said in part: "We have already considered the nature and character of the Christ of the gospels, and also the nature and scope of the gospel of Christ, and have seen clearly that this gospel of the Godman, that is, of the divine in human life, is pre-eminently the gospel of divine activities through men, in service, sacrifice indeed, as proclaimed by Jesus, 'The gospel of the kingdom.' I would like to note today that it was in the full proclaiming of that gospel by word and deed that the cross was reached by Jesus. It was an inevitable necessity in a world like ours. The Son of Man must needs suffer and die. The best ness was a cross. The world's sin ever

Then it spring in the Fourth Presbyterian Church is that crosses of wood and stone and gold multiply, worship grows liturgical and exacting, but the world's burden and sin are not lifted thereby. It is at such points as these that one faces the real tests of discipleship as stated by the Master. 'He that loveth father or mother, or houses or lands, more than me is not worthy of me.' The cross, as a law of life, means sacrifice, selfdenial and, if needs be, death itself rather than the denial of the principles and claims of the kingdom of our Lord. The supreme test is that of personal loyalty to the light and truth of God. It is not a question of balancing probabilities, or estimating majorities. 'If a man will gain his life he shall lose it, but whosoever will lose his life for my sake and the gospel shall gain it.' The cross of Christ, as a historic fact is great; the cross as a law of life is greater; it is, however, the life of the Christ on the cross that illuminates and makes clear the 'cross as a law of life.' 'Here we learn to serve and give Fashions in Jewelry.

New York Commercial Advertiser. Never has the cult of the jewel been studied with greater zest than it is at present, let alone the fact that jewelry is more worn than ever and that there is immense scope for the skill of the designer. The rural congressman's wife, ambitious to be in society, and who fondly imagines that election to the House of Representatives carries with it the golden key to unlock all doors, learns her first and bitter that position means something, but persons are everything. Such a woman comes to Washington full of her own importance, profoundly impressed with the greatness of her husband, fondly believing that the wife of the President, the wives of the members of the Cabinet, the wives of senators, will receive her with open arms; that she will be invited to the dinners of which she has read in her local paper; that she will get her name in the newspapers, and her dresses will be described, as was She learns that, while a congressman ma be a very big man in his district, he is very small man in Washington until he above the average. If he has money and tact he may soon attract attention and money, but much ability, he will reach hi destination by another route; but if he has neither one nor the other, if he is simply The prettiest style of coiffure orna- place intelligence, the social recognition for tea, even to a dinner at the fag end of the
