The Greater Issue

Arbuckle is to be tried for his life. The evidence against him is strong enough that there is much doubt if his money combined with that of his friends, can save him from spending a considerable portion of his life behind the bars. But that is a small matter compared with the case that has been put to that greatest of all juries—the American people.

Whether Arbuckle is guilty of murder or not, there is no doubt that he is a heavy drinking lawbreaker from the gutter with morals that are conspicuous for their absence. He boasts of having wronged helpless girls and is so devoid of a sense of decency that he is unable to feel a twinge of conscience over the beastly life he has gloried in. He now looks forth from the jail bars, with the eyes of the fleeced lamb, at beholding the spectacle of the enraged American public driving his films from the screen.

It matters little whether Arbuckle hangs or goes free so far as he individually counts, but it is a matter of great concern as to whether such lawlessness and such immorality as that of Arbuckle—along with a host of others in the motion picture business—shall go unpunished. The conviction of Arbuckle would do much to improve the moral conduct of motion picture actors—but the verdict of the American people expressed in the crushing of his films will accomplish vastly more.

The greatest farce of the day is that of Mrs. Arbuckle, estranged for five years from the man with whom she found life unendurable, rushing across the continent to plant camera warm kisses upon the lips of her spouse while reciting phrases of endearment and faith and trust for the reporters and through them for the ears of the public. Hand us some dispepsia tablets, please.

Watch Your Step, Charlie!

Charlie Chaplin, browsing de luxe about Paris, compliments the Parisians upon their insistence upon Arbuckle plays being continued there and is pleased that they should have increased their orders for Arbuckle films, since Fatty changed his lodgings to a San Francisco jail. He compliments the French upon refraining from "hysterics" like those displayed by the American public. Better mind your step, Charlie. You are sadly off about those "hysterics." It was righteous indignation and not hysterics that drove the Arbuckle films from the screen in America. Those holding Arbuckle's views on morality would best keep their views to themselves.

Keeping the Home

Fires Burning
Recessing Republican Congressmen have found one spot hotter than Washington and that spot is Home. According to the Washington correspondent of the New York World, "they are coming back to Washington as fast as trains can run" after only two weeks of the recess period. "The reason is that they get too warm a reception at home. The folks wanted to know generally why the administration had been six months doing none of the big things promised, and how it felt to be a Congressman and taking a rest at such a time."

"One Republican who is back on the job today," the correspondent continues, "went home to spend at least a month. He stood the gaff just three days. He told some of his colleagues the situation politically was serious. 'The folks back home are hot,' he said. They besieged me with questions the whole time I was there.'"

THIS SUBSCRIBER APPRECIATES HOME PAPER

Mr. F. E. Wells,
Williams, Ariz.

Dear Mr. Wells:
Enclosed find check for $2.50 due for a year's subscription to the News.

I have taken the News for the past fifteen years and would miss it a great deal especially while away from there.

Keep it coming to my present address until notified to change.

Have spent considerable time at the Beaches and mountain resorts in sunny California but have failed to find anything to compare with the Williams climate. Wishing you luck I remain,

Sincerely yours,
Willard L. Sevier

Styles for Fall

SHOE styles have changed very noticeably—the season's new styles have the square toe effect—brogues with fancy perforations and semi-brogues not quite so extreme.

Florsheim shoes have fine style—unusual style—with sturdy quality that means most in number of days' wear and in solid comfort. No shoe can give you more for what you pay.

We are now showing these new styles.
