Recruit's Answer Offers an Explanation of Why Some Army Drillmasters Go Insane.

The sergeant major was reaching the end of his patience in his examination of the recruit's squad.

"For the last time," he yelled, going almost purple in the face, "I ask you the simple question: 'What is a fortification?'"

Shoulders dropped and with faces void of intelligence as a vacuum of air, the recruits stood fast as a man. No one answered.

Flushing up to the most intelligent-looking man, the irate N. C. O. bawled: "Tell me, my man, what is a fortification?"

"The answer came like a cork out of a bottle: "Two twentifications, sir!"—London Answers.

The long-felt need of the Navy department for a place where new inventions that "looked good" might be tried out is being met with an experimental research laboratory, down the Potomac river, seven miles from the Washington navy yard, on the grounds of the Bellevue magazine, which is expected to be in operation this summer.

New Building Material.

At Marrero, La., there has been erected a factory for making building material from sugar cane bagasse, the equipment of the mill is very much like that in a paper factory. The bagasse is chipped, cooked and washed, and then sent to beaters, where it is worked up until the fibers are of the proper length. A special machine converts the pulp into board and this is dried for four hours, emerging as a finished product, quite dry and hard. It is known as celotex, and can be worked just like wood, and is solid and homogeneous.—Scientific American.
