ALL KINDS OF MONEY.

Washington is a Great Currency Clearing House.

A gentleman from the far West, stopping at one of the uptown hotels, handed a $100 note to the cashier this morning in liquidation of his bill, and received back ten crisp new $5 bills, which had never been even creased and were fresh from their original package as pinned together in the Treasury.

From repeated handling the $100 bill looked more like a piece of dirty, black, water-soaked paper than the real thing.

"That's nice money," he said to the cashier. "Where I come from some people might look askance at it before acceptance, as it appears too new and too much like what they might consider as counterfeit. In Chicago, in a restaurant, I once offered a brand-new bill of large denomination fresh from the Treasury and it was refused by the cashier, who had her 'suspensions' of its genuineness—fact, I assure you, on my honor, 'twas in Chicago, where they will take anything, from the bristles off a pig's back to your watch or your life. No; it wasn't in St. Louis, but in Chicago. I'll swear it! No jollifying now."

"However, we never see any of these fresh, crisp, new bills out in the far West, Southwest and in the far South. Whenever I come to Washington I always take away with me as much of this nice clean money as I can carry. I consider it a duty I owe to the public at large to cause its dissemination. Here, I understand, the residents fail to notice the money they handle, having become accustomed to seeing it."

"That's true," said the cashier. "Washington is the great currency clearing house for the entire nation, as well as the central point of issue of money. At this hotel we send daily to the Treasury a certain sum, which is exchanged for brand-new money, and I pass it out to our guests, taking their old bills instead. Guests are much pleased as a rule to receive it; they carry it away to all quarters of the country, it enters into general circulation and costs us nothing for our trouble. It is a good practice, and one which could be emulated."

"It is an actual privilege to handle this clean money, which all Washingtonians enjoy, but which they do not take into account by reason of their familiarity with it. The Government pays its employees semi-monthly in bills fresh from the Treasury, which quickly find their way into general circulation in the city and indirectly outside of Washington."

"Yes," resumed the Western man, "Washington is a city of clean money, clean streets, clean municipal government, clean, new electric cars, clean parks and circles, and is altogether as fresh, bright and new as these bills now in my hand, which I will take away as a pleasant reminder of my present visit."

"That man," said the cashier to a Star reporter, as the big Westerner's form disappeared out of the revolving storm doors, "represents a class of our visitors who are appreciative of our advantages and who does not hesitate to express himself. He will exhibit the wad of new money he has on him to his friends out West, tell them how it floats around this city like the lilies on a pond's surface, and so inspire them with a desire to see for themselves the beauties of the capital that many will conclude to stop putting off their proposed visit till 'next year' and will start at the first opportunity. I wish we had more of the same kind."

Crime and Criminals.

Crimes and criminals are decreasing in number. The judicial statistics afford indisputable proof of it. But it is no less a fact, although most people ignore it, that while crime in general is diminishing, professional crime is on the increase. The professional criminal is developing and becoming a serious public danger. But in this matter of crime neither science nor common sense is allowed a hearing. When, after repeated warnings, a man has proved himself to be a moral leper, an outlaw, a criminal in character and habitual practice, to set him at liberty is quite as stupid and as wicked as it would be to allow a smallpox patient to go at large in the community.

A single prison would suffice to hold the entire gang of known criminals who now keep the community in a state of siege, and a single wing of any one of our goals would more than suffice to provide for the band of outlaws who may be described as the aristocracy of crime in England. But while we are ready to sacrifice any number of valuable lives on the battlefield, to attain results that are often doubtful and sometimes worthless, the inalienable right of these human beasts of prey, not only to life, but to liberty, is maintained with all the blind fervor of a religious superstition.

If some small share of the labor and cost successfully expended upon keeping cholera and the plague from our shores, or even in stamping out rabies among dogs, were diverted in this direction, organized crime might be abolished in a single decade.—Assistant Commissioner of the London Police, in the Nineteenth Century.

Shah's Treasures Sunk.

Many of the purchases made by the Shah of Persia last summer in Europe, as well as some of the presents made to him, went to the bottom of the Caspian Sea by the sinking of the steamship Vera in a storm. Among them were the eighteen carriages bought in Paris. There is no chance of recovering anything, as the Vera went down in 500 fathoms.

HOME, SWEET HOME.

THERE IS NO PLACE LIKE HOME.

WHAT can make Home, especially a Suburban Home more beautiful than by surrounding it with some of nature's most beautiful plants, shrubs, evergreens, vines, &c.

Even a vacant lot will become more attractive, will improve in value, and find a more ready sale if planted with a few of the above mentioned stock.

During the dreary winter days a few well kept plants will make "Home" still more sweet and then they are much cheaper than short-lived cut flowers.

Studer, the well known Horticulturist, situated on Harrison Street, Anacostia, D. C., always keeps a large supply of reliable and healthy stock of the above and will gladly furnish same at very reasonable prices. Call on him or at his stands, 421 and 422 Centre Market, or write for particulars. A few items from his stock are mentioned below.
