LEGISLATURE OF 1888. "The Daily and Weekly Bulletin" contains the only correct and reliable reports of the proceedings of the present Legislature.

THE Daily Bulletin
Pledged to neither Sect nor Party,
But established for the benefit of all.
SATURDAY, JUNE 2, 1888.

RULE 94.
Rule 94 of the "Rules of procedure of the Legislature" provides that "Any member of the Assembly may ask any question of any Cabinet Minister relating to his respective department, by reducing such question to writing over his signature, and reading the same before the Assembly, and furnishing said Minister with a copy of such written question. Any Minister so questioned shall reply to such question upon the following day, unless the Assembly shall grant him a definite extension of time for replying."

This rule, which was introduced by Mr. S. B. Dole, is a reasonable one. Ministers should not be required, as a general thing, to answer questions without due warning, so that they may be prepared to give the information desired. Rule 94 provides for the warning; but we think it might be done in a better way. The question is asked to-day and answered to-morrow. The custom obtaining elsewhere is to give notice of the question or questions to be asked, furnishing the Minister with a copy in writing. When the notice has expired, the member rises in his place, propounds his enquiry, and receives a reply forthwith. By this method there is less probability of the subject being overlooked or evaded.

HOW IT IS DONE IN ENGLAND.
In reference to the admitted danger of Legislatures "postponing the more important to the less important bills," it may be said without fear of truthful contradiction, that the English method of legislation is about the best of any hitherto tried, for reducing the liability to a minimum.

In the British Parliament legislation is generally led and always controlled by the Government. Comparatively seldom are bills of general importance, or bills of any nature, introduced by private members. This work is usually expected of the Ministers. Private members, to be sure, are at liberty to bring forward bills of their own, and sometimes do; but they are not at liberty to monopolize any considerable portion of a session, or to thrust their bills in advance of Government measures. Days are appointed for the consideration and discussion of bills emanating from private sources, that is, from outside the Cabinet; but Government work always takes the precedence.

The Cabinet usually meets Parliament at the beginning of a session with its measures all carefully prepared and in readiness, and until they are disposed of private members' bills receive scant attention. These Cabinet measures involve the Government policy, by which it stands or falls. Failing to secure the support of a majority of the House to these measures, or any one of them, or failing to prevent the passage of a measure opposed by the Cabinet, the Ministry either resigns or dissolves the House, and appeals to the country. The failure in either case is considered tantamount to a direct vote of want of confidence. Thus the Government controls legislation, and prevents the "postponing of the more important to the less important bills," and when it can no longer do so for lack of the necessary support, makes way for a new Government from the opposition.

A remodeling of our political system, in one or two essential parts, would be necessary before the same method could be adopted here; but whether there is anything in the peculiar conditions of the country, to operate as a fatal objection against the remodeling necessary, is a controvertible point.

IT IS ABOUT SO.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—As a reader of the newspapers published in the English language in this city I have been somewhat amused at the very general assumption by the writers for the press that they voice public opinion.
It is a question with me whether the writers even succeed in forming an opinion in the minds of their readers. Moreover, it seems to me to be labor lost to attempt the formation of a general, or even a party opinion in a community made up, as this is, of citizens of the world. We have coteries of citizens representing all the phases of thought of all the civilized nations of the earth in the science of human rules of duty, and, besides all this, we have masses of people, aboriginal and foreign, who never do any "thinking worthy of the name of thought."

For this reason I say that I am amused at the utterances of writers for the press of this city.
The "Commercial Advertiser," as the mouth-piece of the present administration, a role lately assumed, would have us believe that there are political parties in this Kingdom, and that the present ministry represents a majority of those persons who may vote at the elections for members of the Legislative Assembly. So far as my observation goes we have an intelligent coterie of persons, moved mainly by self-interest, more or less public spirited, who believe in the administrators of the law, and then we have an equally intelligent coterie of persons, having motives equally personal, who think that the present administration is altogether wrong-headed.

Unfortunately, but quite naturally, the masses, who resent the restraints and restrictions of law, range themselves in line with those who are against the administration. We have no political parties.
It is also a misfortune that we have another element, a revolutionary league, formed by individuals more or less intelligent who dominate the Government.

Under stress of this league, and believing, by reason of promises, that some personal advantage was to be gained by voting for the candidates put forward by the revolutionists, the masses cast votes for the members of the present Legislative Assembly.
A recent writer, who represents a very intelligent coterie of citizens, suggests that the Ministers should be elective members of the Assembly. In my humble opinion, if the Ministers, and their appointees, value their offices they should not consent to run the gauntlet of ballot boxes, at least not at this stage of affairs.

Reading this effusion over I am most amused that I should try to interest public opinion.

KAMAANA.

NOTES AND COMMENTS FROM THE COAST.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 21.
People here look for news from the islands, and are surprised that no startling developments, political or physical, have taken place. The volcano even is quiet. It seems to have "paled its effectual fires" in expectation of the promised political outburst at the metropolis. But latest printed advices from Honolulu give no indication of change. Everything is serene.

The importation of sugar from Hawaii has been large for the season. The American refinery, or rather the New York Sugar Trust, is shipping a good deal East by sea, while nine large cargoes from Manila are on the way for the California refinery. This Manila sugar will be refined and marketed from San Francisco, while a heavy per cent. of the Islands' sugar consigned to the Trust, will find its market many months later, from New York. One cannot help regretting this, because it may play an important part in the tariff treaty fight that is impending. But the planters are voiceless and powerless. They have tied themselves up or the American refinery which represents them have done so for five years to that illegal and rapacious combination, the New York Sugar Trust. It is doubtful even if the Cuba basis will be respected as to price. The impression here is that the Trust will fix its own price for raws, and if so what can planters do about it?

The Sugar Trust is being investigated by the New York State Law department, complaint having been made that its operations and purposes are against public policy, and intended to arbitrarily enhance the price of a necessary of life. The complaint is well founded. The reply is an insolent appeal to have the memorial of the trades organizations dismissed, on the ground that it is an attack upon capital by labor, and is made for political effect. The Trust counts upon being able to buy the Attorney-General of New York as Gould and other railroad exploiters have so often bought not alone an Attorney-General but the entire Judiciary.

The conditions have changed somewhat of late, however, and in view of the coming presidential and state elections it is probable that the investigation will go on, with at least a show of earnestness. But the people look to Congress to kill the "Trusts." Just as it was compelled to kill the railroad "pools" by the Inter-State Commerce law. Long before the five years' contract has expired the Sugar Trust will have been dissolved, leaving no trace of its existence except in violated pledges and the impaired credit of the weaker refiners which joined it to "cinch" the consumers. And then the American refinery will be called upon to finance for the planters under contract, and find a market for their sugar. Meanwhile California beet sugar will be in the market. So will Manila under advance contracts. Where then will the American find a market for its raws? [Have the wise men of Queen street and Maui figured on that problem? If they have omitted it from their calculations it is about time they set about solving it, for it is certain to present itself in the not very distant future.]

Colonel Spreckels has taken his family to Philadelphia which is to be his future home. He was interviewed on his return East, when he spoke very confidently of the beet sugar enterprise in California. He says sugar can be manufactured from beets cheaper than cane sugar can be imported, and anticipates that within reasonable time the United States will produce all its own sugar.

The production of cane sugar in the South is now about 15 per cent. of the annual consumption, but it is not likely to be increased unless cane is extensively planted in Florida, which is spoken of. The Watsonville sugar factory is progressing and the beet crop is looking well. The farmers expect to make from $80 to $100 per acre. Half of these figures would be a great improvement on wheat averages. The bare mention of such probable returns has excited the farmers in the Eastern States, and should the Watsonville experiment prove a success, as there is every probability of its doing, a great impetus will be given to the cultivation of sugar beets.

ST. ANDREW'S CATHEDRAL.

A visit to the St. Andrew's Cathedral building, between Beretania street and Emma Square, will be well repaid in the examination of the beautiful structure of which the larger portion is now completed. We are told that if the building were finished it would be one hundred and fifty feet long, with an average width of fifty-five feet, and would consist of chancel and choir with nave of five bays and a porch. There would also be twin towers at the western end. Such a structure would accommodate no less than twelve hundred worshippers. Our Episcopal friends have wisely concluded to build for the generation now living, and have stopped with the second bay of the nave. The west end has been enclosed with red-wood in rustic pattern, neatly painted, and sanded on the outside. Doors have been added, and windows, so well ornamented with glacier window decoration that the effect is that of good stained glass. The suitable furnishing of the interior of the Church is still to come. Memorial stained-glass windows for the chancel and choir are on the way from England, and will add greatly to the beauty of the Cathedral. A hydraulic motor will be put in for the blowing of the organ. With these additions St. Andrew's will be a most attractive place of worship—airy, cool, impressive, a sermon in stone, pointing to religious ways of pleasantness and paths of peace.

The whole Christian community of Honolulu rejoice with our friends that they have at last a noble church to worship in. We understand that the present structure has cost about $70,000. For a much less sum a sufficient building might have been had twenty years ago. But it would be ungenerous to criticize plans and administration in view of the stately edifice now before us, an ornament to the city, a credit to its builders, and a fit memorial of a King and Queen of blessed memory. May it ever be the centre of pure worship and of earnest work for the good of humanity, for the Divine glory.

There has been a tendency in some quarters to regard this Church as a foreign exotic, as existing for English people and perpetuating English religious traditions. This is not the case. No form of religious service is less tintured with nationalisms than that of the English (or American) Episcopal Prayer Book. Its public services have a more truly Catholic tone than those of any body in Christendom. Statistics show a rapid growth of the Episcopal Church in America where its English origin is no argument for its popularity.

The services upon Sunday morning, the 3d inst., when the new part of the Cathedral will be used for the first time, will be most interesting. A cordial invitation is extended to the whole community, and we are confident that many will be present. A full choir will render the music, the building will be handsomely decorated and a special sermon will be preached.
