THE DAILY BULLETIN.

Pledged to neither Sect nor Party, But Established for the Benefit of All.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 23, 1893.

Our morning contemporary is extremely sensitive on behalf of the Board of Health. Nothing will satisfy the Advertiser, evidently, short of a quarantine of all opinion formed outside of its own cave.

Woman suffrage has been adopted by the Legislature of New Zealand. Last year the Legislative Council (second chamber) rejected the bill, but it has now passed by a majority of two. It is highly unlikely that the Ministry will advise the Governor to disallow the bill, so that there is a strong chance of the great experiment being tried in New Zealand.

NO FEAR OF AN OUTBREAK.

Somebody was calling for Ambrose Pierce the other day, to satirize something "royalist" here, which the dulled brains of the filibuster press could not cope with. Here is a gem from the brilliant Californian, which appears in a late Examiner. He says "rats" to the present occupants of the Hawaiian cheese:

The Hawaiian Provisional Government is said to derive a delicate comfort from a parting remark of Minister Blount, that the United States would not recognize no factor not in possession of the Capitol. The remark really has a certain significance when considered in connection with Admiral Skerrett's recent preparations to "check a threatened outbreak." If the United States will not recognize the Royalist until these have the Capitol, and will not let them rise to take it, the outlook for the gentlemen in possession is not uncheerful, and one can hardly wonder that they are reported as "highly pleased" by the Admiral's action in "keeping a ring" with the other fellows outside it. Their high pleasure might fitly have taken the form of uproarious hilarity. But evidently it was not an "outbreak" that the Admiral was concerned to check; it was an ink-blot. Heaven has never put it into the hearts of rats to break out of cheese.

WHAT WILL LIKELY HAPPEN.

Too much dependence on newspaper telegrams may be a mistake, one into which over sanguine people may fall. That the United States Government will order a ballot taken here to decide the form of government under which we are to live may not be literally correct; but that such a suggestion may be made to the Provisional Government is quite likely. That such a suggestion will receive respectful attention goes without saying when it is understood that the treaty of reciprocity expires by limitation in 1895 and a renewal of it will depend upon the action of the present administration in the United States.

A member of the Senate Committee on Ways and Means is quoted in a New York commercial paper, as saying: "We propose to abolish the bounty on sugar entirely, and to put a duty on it higher than the Mill bill did." The leaders of the annexation party were after the bounty on sugar when they deposed the Queen, and the prospect of being left without any protection to our chief industry, as will be the case with annexation impossible and the abrogation of the reciprocity treaty quite possible, will make the Planters' Labor and Supply Company a lively factor in politics, when we shall hear something drop on the corner of Hotel and Fort streets. The same selfishness that found expression in the overturn of the monarchy will be to the fore to decide our relations with the United States. See!!

AROUND THE CAMP FIRE

Happy Reunion of Heroes of the War of Rebellion.

Grizzly Veterans of the G. A. R. Vivaciously Relate the Gory Reminiscences of Thirty Years Ago.

There are two great celebrations in the year of the Grand Army of the Republic. One is of Decoration Day, when the veterans march in procession to the cemetery, to pay their beautiful tributes to the memories of dead comrades. The other is the annual camp fire of the Post, when in song and story the heroes of the Union, over a feast having camp fare as the principal viands served withal in camp vessels, recall their personal experiences in the mighty struggle for the life of their nation from 1811 to 1865.

In former years the camp fires of Geo. W. de Long Post were held at the Post headquarters in King street. Two years ago an agreeable change was made in holding the event on the beautiful premises of Comrade J. N. Wright at Little Britain, with a real roaring camp fire on the well-wooded grounds shedding a cheerful radiance on the company of veterans and their friends. This was the scene of the celebration last night. Before 8 o'clock when the company had mostly assembled, a huge pile of logs in the park was fired. The flames leaped as high as the trees, and comrades and guests so inclined gathered on benches and chairs to windward, where they could bask in the ruddy glow and tell and hear the tales that originated about the genuine camp fires of thirty years ago.

The personnel of the gathering was as follows: Post Commander J. N. Wright and wife, host and hostess of the occasion, aided by Miss Annette Wundenberg; Adjutant J. V. Simonson, Surgeon N. B. Emerson and wife, Quartermaster R. J. Greene and wife, Comrade S. McKagan and wife, Comrade Rhoads, wife and daughter, Comrades W. F. Williams, W. McCandless, L. L. La Pierre, Van Houten, Sherman and McCabe; Rev. E. G. Beckwith, D. D., Col. J. H. Soper, Mrs. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. J. King, Miss King, Mr. King, Sr., Messrs. C. M. V. Forster, Frank Godfrey, W. H. Wright, Wm. Norton, M. N. Sanders, Luther, A. E. Murphy and representatives of the BULLETIN, Star and Paradise of the Pacific.

The eaves of the front veranda were fringed with small American flags, while large specimens of "Old Glory" curtained the veranda on the side overlooking the camp fire. After the last-arriving guest had been welcomed, and a pleasant half hour of social intercourse passed, the company was invited into the dining room. There a long table was found spread with an abundant and most inviting collation, there being besides the army beans, cooked to a delicious flavor, and hard tack, a variety of toothsome edibles including apple and pumpkin pies, with the finest of coffee served hot. Willing hands of comrades waited on the ladies, while some of the strangers, in like manner, made all the strangers feel at home. Comrade Williams had supplied a large pot of big red beans done beautifully, on which there was a lively run until the ladle scraped bottom. When the feasting had waned the company was invited to seats in the parlor or within hearing range thereto.

Quartermaster Greene opened the literary exercises with remarks. Early in 1861 South Carolina seceded. Other young ladies joined her and it caused quite a little unpleasantness. It would be impossible for him to give details of that unpleasantness. One of its results was the Grand Army of the Republic. It numbered to-day half a million men, all of whom had fought for the Union, and received an honorable discharge. It was not necessary that each man should have been the hero of a hundred fights. It was enough that he had obeyed his commander, to entitle him to an honorable discharge. It was not even necessary that he should have seen the enemy, or charged up the slopes of Gettysburg. Suffice it if he had stood guard at a bridge. There were some who claimed to have put down the rebellion, like him whose daughter said, "Mama, what a pity Mr. Lincoln did not help papa to put down the rebellion." Mr. Greene then introduced Miss Rhoads who with voice and hands led the singing of "Rally Round the Flag" at the piano.

Comrade Van Houten of Iowa addressed the gathering on "Our Order." The subject was so large that he should confine himself to the organization itself. If there was time he might say something of the army that enlisted to put down the rebellion. The idea of starting the order originated with Stevenson of Illinois. The first post was organized at Decatur, Illinois, April 6, 1865. It received its first impetus by a paper of that city publishing its ritual in full. A striking circumstance was that every member of the staff of that paper was eligible for membership. Although the organization met with enemies and strong opposition, even with General Hurlbert as its first Commander and General Logan its second, it had steadily made its way until it now numbered half a million. It cultivated patriotism but also had been active in works of beneficence. He cited its work in the yellow fever visitation of New Orleans, and on the occasion of the almost destruction of the city of Charleston by earthquake. The speaker paid a high tribute to the work of the Woman's Relief Corps and the Sons of Veterans—organizations affiliated with the G. A. R.—at the same scenes of distress. Mr. Van Houten proceeded to speak of the order army that put down the rebellion, which numbered two and a quarter million enlisted men. He spoke eloquently of the numbers who went to the front and came not back—in many cases several from one household going to fill the known unknown graves; of the thousands that perished in the hospitals and prisons.

Surgeon Emerson spoke of his detail of "The Infantry." With a humorous introduction bearing on the advantages of fighting on one's own legs, drawing many examples from the wars of ancient and modern history, he proceeded to describe the superior effectiveness of the rifle to cannon in battle. The cannon ball made a great hole in the ground without perhaps hurting anybody, and troops learned to discount its awful roar, while there was no relief from the awe-inspiring "ping" of the rifle bullet. He told the story of an Indian whose description of the soldier with a magazine rifle was that he was a man who loaded all night and fired all day.

Comdr. J. N. Wright came to the defense of the horse. He only wished he had the nerve of the comrade who had just spoken. After awakening much merriment in retorting on the champion of the infantry, he related a thrilling experience of the cavalry with which he was connected, in carrying out orders in 1864 to burn Brandy Station and destroy all stores and supplies of the enemy. Then he gave a graphic description of that one of the most bloody fights of the war, the Battle of the Wilderness, in which he participated. His corps was ordered to ride to Petersburg, Va., and clear the city out for the reception of the wounded. They did their work so effectively that within 24 hours there were 25,000 wounded hospitalized in public and private buildings of the city. He wanted before ending, although his time was exhausted, to say a word for that great and good man, General Grant. The speaker had the honor of being the bearer of despatches to Grant, several times in one week at the time of the Battle of the Wilderness. At the last of these visits to headquarters, General Grant—after reading the despatches brought by himself and two couriers, the only survivors of thirteen men sent by Sheridan—attended personally to providing him with refreshments and seeing that he was made comfortable for the night, chatting and smoking with a comrade of his time as he waited for a word for that great and good man, General Grant. Comrade Rhoads undertook—as Quartermaster Greene introduced him—to show how "The Artillery" put down the rebellion. He evoked laughter by telling of how the cannon, on a certain occasion, cleared the way, while the infantry ran, and for aught he knew, were running yet.

Mr. Murphy, son of a veteran, gave a recitation on a war subject in good style. Adjutant J. Simonson represented "The Picket Guard." The picket's duty was one of the hardest services the soldier could be set to do. Out in the night, often amidst rain or snow, it was a hard, hard life. When sent forward he could never count of a surety on coming back. The speaker related an anecdote of his own experience on picket duty. An intruder was halted by him one night, and in his nervousness he (the speaker) discharged his carbine in the air, which brought the whole regiment to the outpost, and the prisoner was taken in—and the sentry too. (Laughter) He told of how the counter-jumpers of the cities proved superior in endurance to the stalwart men from the country on long marches. In conclusion, he took another crack at Dr. Emerson's infantry.

Miss Rhoads effectively sang "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" to the piano, the company joining in the chorus. Comrade Rhoads undertook—as Quartermaster Greene introduced him—to show how "The Artillery" put down the rebellion. He evoked laughter by telling of how the cannon, on a certain occasion, cleared the way, while the infantry ran, and for aught he knew, were running yet.

Mr. Patterson, a member of Garfield Woman's Relief Corps and daughter of a veteran who had gone forward to the great majority three years ago, spoke enthusiastically of her pleasure in meeting the veterans and their friends. She hoped the day would soon come when "Old Glory" would be floating over this country.

Mr. Luttier spoke briefly of the order of the Sons of Veterans, citing its ruling principles of patriotism. Mr. W. G. Smith of the Star responded to a call as representative of the press. He spoke eloquently of Grant's heroism in his latest days—as illustrative of Rebel's expression, "In the hands of a man truly great the pen is mightier than the sword,"—when, his family facing poverty owing to financial disaster not due to his own fault, he earned a competence for those near and dear to him by his pen. The speaker although he braved the year before the war, had attended a good many G. A. R. gatherings, but had never enjoyed one so well as that of this evening. He wound up with a humorous story of an Irish sentry, which brought down the house.

Mr. Frank Godfrey, editor of the Paradise of the Pacific, on being called on said that he had waited to hear from some one of the comrades who would speak for the services rendered by the naval forces during the rebellion. All of those who had spoken had, however, shrouded their cruelties and only showed how fields were won, while the heroes of the sea were as yet unused. He would say that the navy of Uncle Sam during the war of the rebellion did such deeds as made all the world wonder and the service done has been not forgotten, but duly appreciated. One of the bravest acts during the rebellion was that of the blowing up of the rebel ram Albatross by a volunteer force of blue jackets, and the success of which placed the Union forces in power in the States of North and South Carolina. Of the fourteen men who went with Lieut. Cushing on that expedition only three escaped with life, and those three were men from Maine, Massachusetts and Connecticut. Aply and well in many a hard fought fight with but a plank between them and death had the naval arm of the Union forces maintained the honor of the Stars and Stripes. With reference to the press he would say that it had been constant and ever vigilant in giving news to father, mother, sister, or sweetheart, of the ever varying fortunes of the war. Press men were in the front ranks and their duty was always done. The power and duty of the press is well expressed in a few lines which say:

"Man's noblest mission to advance, His woes assuage, his wrongs redress, His rights enforce, his wrongs redress, Mightiest of the mighty, is the Press."

Comrade Van Houten by request gave a recitation, a Ditchman's vindication of the privates in the great struggle, which elicited laughter at every verse. D. Logan of the BULLETIN in response to a call, added a few remarks as a comrade of the press. "America" being sung by the company, Dr. Beckwith closed the proceedings with prayer and benediction. It was now well on toward midnight, and the congenial party dispersed with mutual congratulations on the happy manner in which the camp fire had been conducted.

Is a tantalizing admonition to those who at this season feel all tired out, weak, without appetite and discouraged. But the way in which Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up the tired frame and gives a good appetite, is really wonderful. So we say, "Take Hood's and it will brace you up."

For a general family cathartic we confidently recommend Hood's Pills.

Hawaiian Hardware Co., Ltd

Saturday, Sept. 23, 1893.

Since this business was established and the people noticed that a little above the ordinary amount of energy and enterprise were among the attributes of the management, it has been a pleasure to a few persons to put upon the Hawaiian Hardware Co., the title, "the fresh young firm." In order to please every one, even those who look upon our success with a jealously inclined eye, and to remove imaginary appearances of freshness we have completed arrangements whereby we control the entire product of a certain salt producing company in this district, and offer to the people of these Islands a pure white salt of superior grade at a shade less than they have been accustomed to paying under the Salt Monopoly. Our arrangements are such that we can furnish either one bag or a thousand on short notice.

Hendry's Ready Mixed Paint is making the buildings on Merchant street look like new. The building occupied by C. O. Berger and Robert Grieve is the latest to take the new and best remedy for premature decay. Private residences throughout the city are being touched up to such an extent that when the old residents return from their World's Fair jaunt they will think there has been a building boom in Honolulu during their absence. Toilet sets are not often broken and when they are it is generally at an inconvenient time. We have a large stock of them suitable for these times when people require the maximum quality at the minimum price. Our sets, handsomely decorated, go to you at prices ranging from three dollars up. The handsomest are in the makai window. You'll smile when we tell you the price.

The difference between good and bad sporting ammunition is demonstrated every season. It is unnecessary for us to say that the good article comes from our store. For the season which opens October 1, we have selected cartridges of the sort used by the sportsmen in the States and if you use them you will not have to buy your game from the natives. By the return Australia we will have an assortment of canvas hats for use in the hunting field. In addition to our stock of cartridges we have a full supply of cleaning rods and other necessary shooting utensils.

Our San Francisco Agents sent us, the other day, a preparation for mending broken crockery, wood and leather that is destined to accomplish great results in its line. We have applied it to broken promises of some of our debtors and it worked like a charm. We have plenty of it in stock and if you want some of it for that or mending broken articles of virtu we will be pleased to supply you.

The Keystone Beater will do other things than beat eggs. It whips cream better than by any other means; it will reduce fruit to a fine pulp for almost any purpose more effectually than by the old style of mashing; it can be used in making puddings and almost anything else used as desserts, and it's cheaper in the end and better at all times than the dozen other egg beaters that have been on the market for the last ten years.
