WONDERFUL Blood-Purifying Effect -OF- Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Mr. Charles Stephenson, a well-known Railway Employee at Kalapoi, New Zealand, writes:

"About ten years ago, while engaged in shunting, my foot caught between the rails, and my leg was fractured below the knee. It healed in time, but I have been troubled ever since with swollen veins, and have been obliged, at times, to wear a bandage. About a year ago it became much worse, and I feared I should be obliged to give up my work. A friend advised me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I did so, and after taking four bottles the swelling disappeared, and I have not been troubled with it since."

PROFESSIONAL COMEDY

NAT GOODWIN AND COMPANY GIVE A PERFORMANCE.

Evening's Amusement from Professionals - Cast of the Play.

As announced in advance in yesterday's paper, Nat Goodwin and his talented company gave a performance in the Hawaiian Opera House yesterday evening. It was a grand surprise to the people of Honolulu, but they were not caught napping. Honolulu knows a good thing when it sees it. This was the case last night. Mr. Frawley's manager did not hurt his employer a little bit by letting go a trifle on his "exclusive" privilege of the first professional opening of the restored theater. Yet he scored a black mark for himself as a manager, through his small business in trying to grind every cent he could out of Mr. Goodwin and the public. Although he received a liberal commission from the company, he was too mean to afford programs for the audience, to enable them to follow the play properly. The excuse given out that there was not time was too thin. There is not a printing shop in town which could not have given him programs for the price of two or three cents at twenty minutes' notice.

Mr. Marks, so his name is given out, will not do as a theatrical manager in Honolulu, if such lowdown peevish business methods as that just mentioned are his criterion. He may as well pack his grip sack and take a ticket by the next steamer.

Not from any favor shown by Manager Marks—save the mark—but by the enterprise of the BULLETIN, even the cast of characters in "The Gilded Fool" is given as below:

- Chauncey Short.....C. Goodwin
- Matthew Ruthven.....
-Clarence Handyrd
- Bannister Straught.....
-Frazer Coulter
- (The firm of Ruthven & Co., bankers)
- Rev. Jacob Howell.....W. Ingersoll
- D. Ruyster Ruthven.....Louis Payne
- Jack Duval.....Arthur Hoops
- Perkins.....Louis Payne
- Morgan.....Neil O'Brien
- Mrs. Ruthven.....Miss E. Melville
- Jessica Rood.....Estelle Mortimer
- Nell Audrey Ruthven.....
-Ethel Brunnion
- Margaret Ruthven.....
-Miss Maxine Elliott

The foregoing cast has to be corrected in the part of Nell Audrey Ruthven. Miss Brunnion having been indisposed Mrs. Sterling, sister of Mr. J. J. Harvey of Honolulu, and wife of the shipwrecked captain on board the Alameda, not a professional actress, bravely took the role. She carried it out in a manner that the whole audience will agree reflected credit even on the brilliant company that she assisted in the pinch stated.

Nat Goodwin is too well known to waste words in his praise. The thought that must have been in the mind of the Honolulu public last night was what a splendid lesson was given to our local talent, very excellent as it is, in the fine points of dramatic exposition. He was simply grand—imperturbable, calm, "a gilded fool" to the world but a master of finance in reality—a lover with money enough to make a big hole in the national debt but winning his lady love on his intrinsic merits. Mr. Ingersoll, as a Pinkerton detective in the guise of a Congo negro missionary solicitor, carried off second honors among the gentleman performances easily where there was close competition. Miss Elliott was superb in presence and does not need her foreign reputation hereafter to make her name a drawing card in any company that may visit Honolulu.

There is no occasion to specify individual merits further. Honolulu will fill a house any time for a season of Nat Goodwin's company. The new Opera House was well filled on this occasion with a representative audience. Mr. and Mrs. Irwin in the proprietary box entertained the leading ladies of the amateur performances of the grand opera "Il Trovatore" and the drama "Jane"—Mrs. Dimond and Miss McGrew—also Mrs. Chas. L. Carter and Senhor Canavaro, Portuguese Charge d' Affaires. The other three proscenium boxes were occupied by officers and passengers of the steamship Alameda.

It was an evening of comedy in the restored Hawaiian Opera House long to be remembered.

LAST NIGHT'S FIRE.

Cottage Destroyed at the Hobron Place, Waikiki-kai.

The alarm of fire about 11:15 last night came from the Hobron place at Waikiki-kai. Mr. J. Gilman was passing the premises and saw one of the cottages was all ablaze. He rushed in and gave the alarm, but was too late to save the building. He kicked in one of the doors, however, and succeeded in saving some minor articles.

The cottage belonged to C. B. Gray but was temporarily occupied by W. R. Farrington, his wife and her mother, all of whom were at the theater and had not reached home. The Chinese cook was asleep in the servant's quarters and knew nothing of the fire. In another cottage Mr. von Gravemeyer was sleeping and knew nothing of the blaze until awakened by Mr. Gilman.

Engine No. 4 and Hose cart No. 2 went out in response to the alarm in charge of Chief Engineer Hunt and did good work after their arrival in preventing the flames from extending to the neighboring buildings. The blaze was seen by a BULLETIN reporter from Wilder avenue nearly 10 minutes before the alarm was turned in.

Mr. Gray loses the cottage and furniture and Mr. and Mrs. Farrington lose all their clothing, wedding presents, trinkets and souvenirs. The von Gravmeyers, who with one exception were temporarily staying at Nuuanu Valley, also suffered considerable loss, as they had a quantity of silver ware, trinkets and valuables recently brought from Germany stored in the cottage.

Mr. Farrington is of opinion that the fire originated from a porch lamp, which was left lighted by the Chinese servant in readiness for their return. The theory is that this lamp must have exploded, as there was no other light about the premises.

There was no insurance on any of the property destroyed.

Lost Their Mother.

Six children were put on board the Alameda at Auckland by their mother, who claimed that she was on her way to join her husband at San Francisco. When the steamer left the woman was not to be found. The children, who range from 3 to 14 years of age, are being kindly looked after by Steward Steward Haggitt, and by the kindness of some of the cabin passengers were given a wagonette ride through the city yesterday. It is probable they will be returned to Auckland if they cannot find their father in San Francisco.

COSMIC SHOWER COMING

WHAT IS EXPECTED IN THE HEAVENS TOMORROW NIGHT.

Great Swarm of Shooting Stars May be Visible—Every Thirty-three Years the Phenomenon Recurs.

Toward the close of the present century, probably in 1899, the world will again witness the great meteor shower that occurs every thirty-three years. This is the rarest of celestial phenomena visible at night time. Hundreds of thousands of shooting stars streaked the heavens with radiance for hours in succession on the last occasion in 1866-67, also in 1833-34, and in 1799, when observed by Humboldt in South America; and the historic record of the periodic display, which dates back nearly a thousand years, furnishes similar accounts. As the visibility of the swarm is not confined to every thirty-third year, but commences a few years before, and lingers on a few years after that period, it is now expected that during the present month the foremost ranks of the advancing host will make their appearance in unusual numbers.

Even as early as 1892 Professor Barnard of the Yerkes Observatory saw some indications of this, though the intervening years revealed only the few stragglers of the swarm usually seen on the 13th of November or about that date, for it requires some days for the earth to pass the inter section of the meteoric path.

During an eight hours' watch at the Mount Hamilton Observatory, California, on the 13th of last November thirty seven swift, pale-tinted Leonids were seen streaking the southern constellations. This is the name given to the November star shower that seems to radiate from the constellation of Leo. When a number of shooting meteors streak the firmament the area from which they all retreat in common, in divergent tracks, is named the radiant point, and it shows the direction in space from which they approach the earth's orbit.

Scientific investigation carried on chiefly within the last sixty-three years has shown that myriads of small, dark bodies are circling through interplanetary spaces, sometimes singly, often in groups, and also in immense swarms; that in weight they range from many tons to a few grains or less, and while too small to be seen individually shining by reflected sunlight and too far apart to glimmer conjointly, occasional friction with the earth's atmosphere gives them a luminosity that reveals their existence. When a small, cold, hard body ranging the realms of space with tremendous speed encounters even the vapory envelope of the swiftly moving earth the twofold velocity heats it to a blaze and generally reduces it to ashes in a few seconds. Hence the falling star that in golden script tells the route of the unseen host that is speeding by. The scientific observer marks the aspect, motion, distance or spectrum of the luminous wanderer, and if it falls to the earth before being consumed analyses its constituents.

Composed only of such well-known substances as iron, stone and sodium it nevertheless bears the brand of its non-terrestrial origin and also the traces of its fiery flight. The Leonids belong to the largest of known swarms. In a long elliptic orbit, intersecting that of the earth at one point and extending beyond that of the planet Uranus at the opposite curve, they revolve round the sun in about thirty-three and a quarter years, the elongated stream taking some years to cross the path of our planet. But the grand mystery of the meteoric host is their unexplained relationship to the wandering comet, so unlike in aspect and ways and still so evi-
