Well Matched.

A few years ago Bill Nye and Herrmann, the magician, met for the first time in a small Ohio town. They stopped at the same hotel, and were given seats at the same table in the diningroom. They bowed politely, and began talking about the weather, each believing that the other did not recognize his vis-a-vis. Just as Nye raised his knife and fork to cut a dish of lettuce salad Herrmann uttered a cry of protest. "Excuse me, sir," remarked the wizard, "but I thought I saw something queer there in your lettuce." The humorist carefully looked over the salad, leaf by leaf, but found nothing, and again raised his knife to cut it. Again he was stopped by a sharp cry from Herrmann, who added apologetically, "I beg a thousand pardons, but there is something there. Excuse me," and he pointed to a large lettuce leaf, raised it, and disclosed underneath a magnificent diamond cluster ring. Nye slowly picked up the ring, and, without the slightest manifestation of surprise, drawled out: "This sort of thing has gone just far enough. I'm continually shedding diamonds wherever I go. Day before yesterday I lost a solitaire in a sugar-bowl in Pittsburg, and in Cleveland this morning the chambermaid, in sweeping my room, found three or four more. It is positively giving me brainfag to keep track of these things, and I'm going to give it up as a bad job." Beckoning to a waitress, he slipped Herrmann's ring into her hand, and said, "Here's a trifle for you. Keep it to remember me by; it's yours." It took the owner of the ring about half a day to recover it.
