The Examiner of July 28 contains an article on a fourteen inning game between the Sacramento and Oakland teams which was won by just a little error. The Sacramentos made just one run in the last inning, the score ending 1 to 0. The costly error was made by Buck Franks. The story as told by the Examiner is as follows:

Finally, Unglaub, in the fourteenth soused the ball through the box to center, where Walters checked it.

H. Hogan, trying to do the proper thing, dumped the ball a few feet in front of the plate. Both Schmidt and Lohman were down on the chance like hawks. In their feverishness they failed to pick up. Unglaub gained second and Hogan a start.

Graham spilled a bunt to Streib. Julie snatched the leather O. K., but got suddenly foolish and played for the runner making for third. His throw was behind time several seconds and left all the cushions taken.

Stricklett banged one to Mohler, who hurled to Lohman and put out Unglaub at the tape.

Doyle clouted something to Francks. Buck stooped to conquer and gave the ball the knee. It rolled loosely toward third while Hogan plowed in with first run Sacramento scored against Oakland in forty-one innings.
