Mr. Ernest Verrill, wife and child.

We know that however often our country needs them, her sons will be ready to answer to her call; we know that her daughters will be ever willing to give of their dearest and best, in her hour of need. And, as we look back over the years that have flown, we can see that those who have mourned in the loneliness and silence of sorrowful hours, for the heroes who fought and died twoscore years ago, for the freedom of a race who had been born and bred in of a race who had been born and bred in slavery's chain, cheerfully gave up their sons and grandsons to the service of their country, when the oppressed and down-trodden of a foreign nation held out their trembling hands towards America for help and succor.

Proudly we watched them march away, under the starry folds of our mighty banner, knowing that many of them would find their last resting place in another land than ours. And now, all we can do for our fallen heroes is to keep their memory ever fresh and green in our minds, and come each year in the beauty of May, and, with loving hearts and reverent hands, place on the mounds heaped above each faithful breast, bright blossoms of spring that shall b an emblem of the unspeakable brightness and infinite beauty of freedom that glorifies the lives of those who have been freed from the shackles that bound them in slavery and oppression.

This we may do, and also, in grateful recognition of what our soldiers and defenders have done, it behooves us as a nation to keep forever burning on our altars the fires of patriotism, and our hearts forever open to the cause of right, of justice and of freedom; and our John Greeley sold his farm to L. R. hands ever ready to defend the helpless Giles in March, and this week the family and defenceless of all nations and all

Looking back, we see, all along the country, countless graves of heroic men who have yielded up their lives that America may in truth be called "The land of the free And the home of the brave." As we look back, we can see that the path the sons and daughters of America have trodden, in the years that are past, has been marked by hardship and priva-tion, by bloodshed and death, by sorrow and loneliness unspeakable, and on this Memorial Day, let us reverently, with bowed head and bended knee, dedicate to ourselves, to our children, and to our children's children the duty, the privi-lege and the pleasure of making this day a sacred day. Let us always keep it as the Nation's day of sorrow and gladness —sorrow for those near and dear ones who have gone out of our lives, and gladness for the unmeasured peace and happiness that the sacrifice of their lives brought to millions of our unfortunate brothers and sisters; and so, with sweet flowers and martial music under the happiness that the sacrifice of their lives brought to millions of our unfortunate brothers and sisters; and so, with sweet flowers and martial music under the stars and stripes of our waving banner we will do honor to our country's noble dead. Phebe Willey Bensel.

Miss Amy Heath, teacher in the Davenport Second District school in the town of Chelsea, was accidentally shot and seriously wounded Friday, by ten-year-old Jimmy Judge, one of her pupils. The children were gathered around the teacher in the school yard during the forenoon recess when Jimmy drew an old revolver from his pocket and aiming it at the teacher said "Look out teacher. I'll shoot you." He then pulled the trigger and the bullet struck Miss Heath in the head. Two physicians extracted the bullet from the wound, and the young woman is on the road to recovery.

NO LOSS OF TIME.

I have sold Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy for years, and would rather be out of coffee and sugar than it. I sold five bottles of it yesterday to threshers that could go no farther, and they are at work again this morning.—H. R. Phelps, Plymouth, Oklahoma. As will be seen by the above the threshers were able to keep on with their work without losing a single day's time. You should keep a bottle of this Remedy in your home.
