Santa Silvarum

A sudden hunt in the wood tonight, Her feet are light and her hair streams wide—
Sorrow, hide!

Full fast she flies, and her leaping pack
of shadows black flies faster yet—Lie low, regret.

The notes that trail from her windy horn of madness born beat where they will—Echo, be still!

What will she see when she leads the chase
The low, sweet place where the fern lies crushed?—
Ah, pain, be hushed!

What will she start from that dewy bed
When she leaps ahead and the pack sweeps by?—
Ah, memory, die!

—Anne Goodwin Winslow, in the North American Review.

DUCKS FOOL MR. FOX.

MADAM DUCK was tired of swimming, so she scrambled up the bank to look for bugs in the field by the side of the river. She was waddling slowly about, when all at once she espied a pair of bright eyes peering at her through the tall grass.

Madam Duck knew at once it was Mr.
Fox, and that he was waiting for a stray hen or anything that passed that way. She knew, too, that if she had happened to be near him she would now be on her way to his cave in the woods. "While there is life there is hope," she thought. "I will try to fool him."

Madam Duck began to limp. She spread her wings and let one drop, as though she had been wounded.

Of course Mr. Fox thought Madam Duck had not seen him, and when she limped he crawled slowly toward her.

"Some hunter has wounded that duck," he thought. "I will have to keep a sharp lookout that he does not see me, but I am thankful to him for helping me to get this fine bird, for I shall not have to hurry. She cannot get away."

Every time Madam Duck flapped her wings she made a wider space between her and Mr. Fox, but she was careful every time to let one wing drag as she limped along.

"I am sure to get her," he thought,
"so why run? It is a very warm day and, besides that, the hunter may be lurking about."

But when Madam Duck reached the river bank she seemed to be able to use her wings and legs without any trouble, and before Mr. Fox knew it she was at the water's edge.

"I am not going into that water after her," thought he. "I will grab her right off and end it."

Mr. Fox leaped for Madam Duck, but his front feet caught in a trailing vine, and down the bank he went heels over head and landed in the deep mud of the river.

He struck nose first, and while he was trying to get up, Madam Duck sailed gayly away, calling back to him as she went:

Oh, Reynard thought he had me—
He thought I could not fly.
But that's the time I fooled you, sir—Good-by, Mr. Fox, good-by!

Reedy Fox crawled up the bank a sadder but a much wiser fellow, his mouth and nose filled with mud, and as he cleaned his coat and made himself tidy he thought:

"Sing your good-by song, Madam Duck, while you can, for if I ever meet you again it will be the 'Swan Song' you will sing—I promise you that."

But Madam Duck knew better than to go to the field again, and I expect she lived to a good old age, in spite of Mr. Fox's threat.
