Seabury started from home at 7 a. m. with his ox team to gather sea weed from the shore of Seaconnet River on the water frontof the farm owned by Edward Davis. Washington, Dec. 2.—The joint select committee to investigate the causes of decline in American shipping met at the room of the Senate Committee on Commerce to-day. It was a meeting adjourned from Nov. 22d, at which time the committee closed its session in New York. There were present the chairman, Senator Conger, Senator Vest and Bepresentatives Robeson, Cox, Dingley and Page. Mr. Dingley, from the sub-committee appointed in New York, presented its report on the topics then submitted, accompanied by a bill. The full committee unanimously agreed to the provisions of the bill. The bill makes important modifications of the laws relating to the payment of extra wages to seamen, and provides for the payment of extra wages then a seaman is discharged from an American vessel in a foreign port, only when the vessel is sold, when the voyage is improperly continued beyond the port to which the seaman shipped, and when the vessel is found by inspectors to be insufficiently provisioned and the master reuses to correct the deficiency. It is also provided that when a seaman is injured in the line of duty, contracts disease in consequence of want of proper food on shipboard, the vessel shall be held respons ble for the payment of the expenses of sickness. The bill also amends section 7548 of the Revised Statutes so as to give adequate compensation to vessels for the transportation of disabled sailors. It also remits all consul fees for service to American ships and the payment of consuls from the United States transports the transport of the consuls from the United States transports the transport of the consuls from the United States transports the transport of the consuls from the United States transports the transport of the consuls from the United States transports. portation of disabled sailors. It also remits all consul fees for service to American ships and marchants in consuls from the United States treasury for such service. It authorizes the importation in bond, free of duty, of ships' supplies for vessels engaged in the foreign carrying trade, to he used only on foreign voyages. It provides for a reduction of the Marine Hospital tax on seamen from forty cents to twenty cents, as it was before 1871. It abrogates the tonnage on vessels engaged in trade with the Dominion of Canada. It further provides that the liability of a part owner of a vessel shall be limited to the proportion of all liabilities that his individual share bears to the whole. It amends section 4131 of the Revised Statates by allowing, in the case of death or disability of one of the mates of a vessel on a foreign voyage, the employment of a foreign seaman to supply his place, if necessary, until the vessel returns to the United States. As some members of the committee objected to a report on the above point, upon which the committee is agreed, until the whole question of free ships and free material can be acted upon, no report will be made until the whole ground can be covered, which will be likely to defer the report to a late day. The committee adjourned until Monday night.

Death of the Archbishop of Canterbury. LONDON, Nov. 3 .- The Archbishop of Can-The Archbishop of Canterbury died at 7.15 this morning.

The Archbishop of Canterbury passed away quietly and apparently without suffering in the presence of his three daughters, Mr. Davidson, his son-in-law, Canon Knollys and Dr. Carpenter. Yesterday he remained in a semi-proposed superstance of the consequently asking for Carpenter. Yesterday he remained in a semiunconscious state, eccasionally asking for water, about 11 at night he spoke his last words, "It is coming, it is coming." He was then seized with a sharp spasm and did not speak again although it is believed he was partly conscious to the end. At 7 in the mornho exhibited signs of dissolution.

It is understood that the Dean of Westmuster on behalf of the Queen has offered burial for the Archbishop's remains in Westminser Abbey. The decision rests with the While Dean of Carlisle he also held the position of Commissioner of the Oxford University, and when he succeeded Dr. Blomfield as Bishop of London he set himself vigorously at work to raise a fund of one million pounds for supplying the deficiencies of church accommodations in London in which undertaking he succeeded. Dr. Tait as Archbishop of Canterbury proved himself fully equal to the demands of the position, and has given to the church a vigorous and successful administration. As an author Dr. Tait was industrious, while it cannot be said that his writings were entitled to take high rank as literary productions. He published beside numerous essays and several volumes of sermons the following books: "The Dangers and Safegnards of Modern Theology" (1861) and "The Word of God and the Ground of Faith" (1863.) Dr. Tait had been failing for some time, and for the ten days previous to his death it was understood that he could not recover, a fact of which he was fully aware and on Friday last took his final farewell of his servants and intimate friends.— ED. he set himself vigorously at work to raise a
