LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

Yesterday's Session Develops Very Little of Importance.

first time in the House yesterday. Mr. Taylor, of Davis, proposed a resolution to inquire into the expenditures in connection with the new insane hospitals. A similar resolution is in the bands of the committee, and for this reason the consideration the special order for to-morrow. The House resolved itself into a Commit tee of the Whole yesterday afternoon and took up the consideration of the General Appropriation bill. There was little discussion except upon an 'amendment appro priating $1,500 for repairs of the Supreme Court room and to insure the law library thereof. Some of the members were opposed to insurance, and the subject was discussed at length. The amendment was finally he "had received an anonymous letter, postmsrked at Chicago, attacking a bill which was now in the hands of the committee." He said ti at he did not like that manner of communicating on the subject, but did not feel at liberty to destroy the letter before calling the attention of the House to it. In answer to the query, "what shall be done with it? the answer came from all parts of the House "Burn this letter."

In the Sanate yesterday a number of bills were reported from committees, but very little business of importance was transacted. Mr. Winter introduced a bill to make election ballots distinguishable as to the party voted for and inflicting penalties for fraud The committee reported that Bailey's liq for bill be made to apply only to cities having a voting population of 5,000 or more and that saloons in such cities shall close be tween 12 midnight and 4 a. m., and that

An old bill, vetoed by Gavernor Parter after the Legislature of 1883 adjourned, was reported to the Legislature yesterday by the Secretary of State in accordance with the law governing in such cases. The bill re lates to certain dams, and was introduced by Mr. Smith, of Perry, who was present yester day and wanted the consideration of the bill postponed. The Speaker questioned the right to postsone consideration of the bill and the matter was submitted to a vote. A number of gentlemen who voted for the bitt before now voted against it, explaining that the same measure was substantially before the House. The veto was sustained by a vote of 69 to 5. The question of paying three janitors at the State offices led to several passages at arms yesterday. Mr. Browning moved an amendment appointing but one janitor. Mr. Schley took issue with the gentleman from | Brown and Monroe and said that three junitors were not more than necessary to do the work. Mr. Browning caused some mercial ment by stating that the "State officers were paid enough money to furnish their own janitors." Mr. Schley thought it beneath the dignity of a State officer to carry a coal scuttle or make his own fires. Mr. Brownia thought that they should then pay tor themselves. An amendment by Mr. McMul len limiting the number to two, at a salary of $600 each, was adopted.

The business of the Columbus, Greensburg and Hope Road is increasing rapidly, so say Big Four officials.

A large number of Indianapolis railroad men will be in attendance. begins to look as if the war between the trank lines will be even more bitter and destructive this year than it was in 1884," said a local railroad man yesterday. "There never was a time when the railroads could less afford to lose money than now, and it is singular that they do not come to some understanding as to rates." There was a meeting of the various lines comprising the Indianapolis East-bound Pool yesterday, at which time it was agreed to rescind the recent action in restoring rates, it being clearly demonstrated that other cities had not restored rates. The special joint rate adopted January 22 was restored and charges of rate cutting against the Wabash were considered, but there was no evidence to sustain the same and no action was taken relative thereto.

The projectors of the Lafayette, Burlington and Western are much elated over the prospects of their road on which work will begin again just as soon as the frost leaves the ground. This promises to be one of the most important coal roads in the State of Indiana and will make direct connection with several Chicago lines, at which point it will find a ready market for the "superior article." A portion of the road was built before the advent of the cold weather. Everybody who is interested in railroad business at all is well aware of the fact that the Toledo and Indianapolis Road is to be sold on February 25, under a decree of foreclosure granted by the United States Circuit Court, and many rumors concerning the future of the road are being circulated, many of them, no doubt, being without a shadow of foundation. The latest is that the Toledo and Indianapolis will fall into the hands of for said lot. The report was not concurred in. | a syndicate of eastern capitalists, who will spend a considerable amount of money in improvements and new rolling srock, event nally building it through to this city. I will be remembered that the minimum price of the road is $150,000, of which the pur chasers must pay $50,000 in cash. It has been said that the Indianapolis, Blooming ton and Western people would secure this road, but it is not now generally believed that they want it very badly.

. When a read carries at the same rates as other lines it can command, and, therefore, is entitled to such share of the business as its facilities, connections, etc., enable it to obtain, without regard to the business which it did under different conditions. It is true toat it may take it a little time to optain this position if it is a new road, or to recover it if it has given up the business for a time, and it is also true that if the times are frequent when it declines to meet the rates of its competitors, it will always be at a disad vantage; but as things are, when the rates ordinarily leave some profit to all the lines. this consideration need not weigh. I would weigh if ordinarily, or during a large portion of the time, the rates left a profit only to those lines which can carry at least cost. Then, properly, these lines would get the larger part of the business, and finally substantially the whole. But acta ally, if for a time the Vanderbilt roads take freight from Chicago to New York for difteen cents per 100 pounds, and the Pennsylvania or the Grand Trunk refuses to accept less than twenty cents, and then the rate by all lines is advanced to twenty five cents, it cartainly will not be expected that the Vanderbilt roads will preserve the proportion of the traffic which they had when leading roads did not compete for it, nor should it be expected that these roads will be content with a smaller share than their facilities enable them to secure at equal rates, and which experience has proved that they can secure at

The reduction in west bound trunk-line rates determined upon last week was a measure which must have been very unwillingly adopted, as it at once sweeps away the greatthrough business which had remained profitable. It was the consequence of cut rates and contracts at out rates by the Lackawanna Road, difficult to explain as the deliberate act of sane men. Cutting rates by a line which is behindhand in its percentage seems unwise in a pool like that of the New York roads, where the road which is behind receives payat full rates for its shortage from those which are over; but it is sometimes urged that it is so important for a trunk line to give west-bound freight to western connections which are able to give east-bound freight, that it is better to carry it and receive somewhat less than ordinary profit on it, than to get the full profit if competing lines carry it. But in this case it appears that the Lackswanne, thought it may have begun cutting rates when it was short, for many weeks before this reduction was ordered had carried more than its share, and consequently owed the other roads, and was frequently notified of that fact. If the cuts had been made only on current shipments, it would not have been necessary to reduce the rates, probably; but contracts had been made which would enable certain shippers to have their business carried at a considerable reduction, and to be fair to other shippers it was necessary to make the open rate equal to this con tract rate, until the contracts have been ful filled or otherwise disposed of. How long the contracts have to run, nobody seems to know.-Railroad Gazette.
