LESSONS DRAWN FROM THE INTER-NATIONAL DISPLAY.

Time of Peace Prepare For War"-Being Able to Fight Is Often a Protection

The pages which Secretary Herbert deotes in the North American Review to comment on the great show of ships at Norfolk and New York deal with it first as an illustration of the friendly feeling that now prevails between the United States and other nations. He recalls that this peaceful rendezvous took place in the very roadstead where the Monitor and Merrimac fought and near where the Leopard attacked the Chesapeake, while close by at Norfolk lay the old Constellation, successor to Truxton's frigate that overcame the Insurgente in 1799. 'Of the nine nations whose 30 warships were there gathered three were republics, but all the vessels put on the colors of Italy in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of King Humbert's marriage, just as the British Blake afterward at New York, where once the prison ships of the Revolution lay, flashed out the image of Washing ton in her fireworks display, and just as Decoration day ceremonies Secretary Herbert well says that the voyage from Hampton Roads, when the vessels of nine nations, in two parallel columns, steamed at a prescribed rate, all under the command, by courtesy, of an American officer, formed "a scene that has no parallel in history." Yet even this scene was surpassed in suggestiveness by the land parade in New York, which, "while it was the most Geo. Kent who has been buying significant act of good will to the Amerson? The secretary thus expresses it: "Every thoughtful observer was impressed with the idea that if our men should ever come to blows with their friends who were behind them in line they could never hope to win except with a fair supply of ships and guns. The stalwart Russians, with their sturdy tramp; the business looking Britons keeping step to 'God Save the Queen:' the quick stepping Frenchmen; the Gerbeen left there for their use had Italians, and indeed all the detachments, were drilled and disciplined into fighting machines. Never was such a sight witnessed before as the sailors of nine different nations marching together, and never was anything better calculated to for years have gone on the drive impress upon those who saw them the lesson that the American sailor can keep his place upon the seas only when his moral of the pageant for our countrymen. It taught not only the beauty of that while 70 years before Russia, Prussia and Austria had entered into a futile combination to reduce the Spanish-American colonies because they had set themselves up as independent republics, here were Russia and Germany joining their ships with those of republican France and the South American repub-

It was still more suggestive to find the armed forces of Russia and England marching one after another in the same streets and in the same column and the armed forces of France and Germany in the sight of them prompted Secretary Herbert to say that "Great Britain never formally renounced the right of search, will and respect have been testified in many ways and never more significantly than at this naval review." Yet it is not the peace note with which the secretary closes. He insists, as his conclusion, that in spite of Geneva arbitrations and Paris arbitrations, we have not yet found a safeguard against war. 'The Geneva arbitration was achieved only after the terrific battles of our civil war had demonstrated to the world the fighting capacity of our citizen soldiery. If America would keep her own peace with all the nations of the earth and maintain her place in the vanguard of civilization, she must be at all times prepared for war. This is the lesson of history emphasized by the rendezvous and the review." We may add that such lessons were wholly additional to the original purpose of the ceremony, which was to furnish some distinctly naval pageant as the fittest possible form of public festival in honor of the greatest Indeed it may fairly be said that the full benefits of this memorable pageant were not universally recognized when it was planned. Even Mr. Herbert himself, although a member of the house naval committee, voted against the joint resolution of congress which directed it to be held, but as its possibilities gradually became apparent he headed the successful effort at a subsequent session to increase the appropriation for it to the amount needed. The advantage derived from bringing our own new ships together for the first time in considerable numbers has been exceedingly great, and it has been increased by giving them the opportunity to compare themselves not only with each other, but with the picked warships of eight other nations.

Still the great benefit of the review, according to Secretary Herbert, has been in teaching what remains for the country to do in its naval preparations .- New York Sun.
