ZIMMERMAN

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Swanson and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Iliff pleasantly entertained the Social club last Wednesday night in the store building recently vacated by the Zimmerman Mercantile company.

This meeting was rather an unusual one as the regular program had been entirely omitted due to the busy holiday season. But the omission was scarcely noticeable, in fact it is doubtful whether any of that fun-loving bunch even thought of it so engrossed were they with such old-time games as London bridge, flying Dutchman, pig in the parlor, etc.

That they had a joyous time was manifested by the noise they made—such shouts of merriment and as much real pleasure had not been enjoyed for some time. A bounteous supper was spread at midnight, at least all the members say so, and if they can't judge about such matters it would be hard to find someone else more competent. The next meeting will be with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rust in four weeks.

The young people of the M. E. church had a splendid program last Wednesday evening and the hall was packed. "Miss Mischievous Nigger" was a comedy of several acts and caused much laughter. Ted Mallory ably took the part of Anthony, the nigger, and by his demeanor in acting his part kept the house in continued uproar. Homer Erickson, without doubt the boss of the establishment, with Rose Cheveny, his sister, were good. Floyd Nash, who wished to call on the maid (Marie Ady) had quite a time finding suitable hiding places. Alfred Brown was a Frenchman, who loved the boss' sister. Thoroughout the entire play the audience showed their appreciation. Mr. and Mrs. Purl Mallory had a sketch of Mr. and Mrs. Smith's unlucky day, which proved to be one of the best numbers on the program, being realistic of everyday life. Mr. and Mrs. Fido, by Ted Mallory and Mrs. Homer Erickson, with Homer Erickson as the Swede dog doctor, was good and caused much applause. Other numbers were recitations, songs and instrumental selections, all of which were enjoyed. The ladies of the M. E. Aid had useful and fancy articles for sale and also served coffee, sandwiches and cake. The net proceeds were $104.53. The young people of the church take this means of expressing their gratitude to all who so kindly assisted in making this entertainment a success. They are especially grateful to Wm. Swanson for acting as auctioneer.
