"The Prince of Tonight," the gorgeous musical fantasy, coming to the Grand, January 19th. As a great spectacular production it outshines everything that has been attempted by a management in stage settings. The iridescent glories of the Deltwood forest in the land of the Moon, and the glittering whirl of a blue and silver chorus is not only the climax of artistic efforts in the show itself, but the last word in contemporaneous extravaganza.

"The Prince of Tonight."

With its tuneful music, scenic magnificence, bandomely gowned beauty chorus and its noteworthy star, Tom Arnold, surrounded by a strong cast of principals, "The Prince of Tonight," which will be seen at the Grand theater, Sunday, January 19th, should draw heavily on local theatrical patronage Messrs. Adams, Hough & Howard, who are jointly responsible for this popular musical fantasy are said to merit public approval in this offering to a greater degree than in any of their contributions, which include "The Golden Girl," "The Goddess of Liberty," "The Time, the Place and the Girl," and many other noted musical comedies. "The Prince of Tonight" suited the popular so well that it lasted an entire season in Chicago, and created records for high receipts in most of the metropolitan theatres. Tom Arnold portrays the role of a college boy employed as a life saver and instructor of the art of swimming at Palm Beach. He promptly falls in love with a rich and proud summer girl who scents his poverty and rejects his ardent suit. But with the aid of an aged and uncanny gardner, who invokes magic at the moment of the blooming of a century plant, the lover becomes a mythical prince for the night and woes and wins the maid at the risk of his life. Beautiful stage pictures are essentially a part of the interest and "The Prince of Tonight" is one of the most gorgeous scenic productions ever seen on tour. Among the many song hits to be heard are, "I Don't Want to Marry Your Family," "You're a Dear Old World After All," "Tonight Will Never Come Again," "Can This Be Love," "Her Eyes Are Blue For Yale," "Follow the Rainbow Trail," and "The Best Thing That a Waiter Can Do is Wait."

Fat Actor Laments; Nobody Loves Him

That a fat man is the most sensitive creature in the world is the contention of Frank Harsh, who weighs 300 pounds, and is playing the part of Daniel Stuart, an eccentric comedian, in the musical spectacle, "The Prince of Tonight," coming to the Grand theatre Sunday, January 19, matinee and night.

To look at Harsh one would never imagine that he has been a soldier, his waist line of 100 inches or more, it would seem, could never have fit into one of Uncle Sam's uniforms, but Harsh explains that his corpulency developed after his service in the Spanish-American war. If he had remained a soldier he would not now be an actor fat man. And which is worse, he asks?

Harsh, who has been playing comedy roles for several years, says there is a difference between a fat man and a man who is fat. The fat man, according to his definition, is a fat headed slob who takes great pride and pleasure in patting himself and gloating over his avoirdupois. On the contrary, the man who is merely fat feels that he did not achieve it, but that nature trust it upon him. The actor says that his battle against flesh has been much warmer than any fighting he experienced against the Spaniards.

Mr. Harsh says, with grief in his tones, that he has found the old phrase, "Nobody loves a fat man," literally true.
