HEADACHE is the favorite sign by which nature makes known any deviation whatever from the natural state of the brain, and viewed in this light it may be looked on as a safeguard intended to give notice of disease which might otherwise escape attention till too late to be remedied; and its indications should never be neglected. Headaches may be classified under two names, Symptomatic and Idiopathic. Symptomatic Headache is exceedingly common, and is the pre-cursor of a great variety of diseases, among which are Apoplexy, Gout, Rheumatism, and all febrile diseases. In its nervous form it is sympathetic of disease of the stomach constituting sick headache, or hepatic disease constituting bilious headache, of worms, constituting of the bow-constitution and other disorders of the bow-els, as well as renal and uterine affections. Diseases of the heart are very frequently attended with Headaches; Anæmia and plethora are also affections which frequently ocalso very common, being usually distinguished by the name of nervous headache, sometimes coming on suddenly in a state of ap. For the treatment of either class of Head-

Great Discovery.

Amongst the most important of all the great medical discoveries of this age may be considered the system of vaccination for protection from Small Pox, the Cephalic Pill for relief of Headache, and the use of Quinine for the prevention of Ferers, either of which is a sure specific, whose benefits will be experienced by suffering humanity long after their discoverers are forgotten.

The present critical state of European affairs will render these publications unusually interesting during the forthcoming year. It is to these Periodicals that readers must look for the only really intelligible and reliable history of current events, and as such, in addition to their well-established literary, scientific, and theological character, we urge them upon the consideration of the reading
