per year. ST. PAUL, SUNDAY, DEC. 7, 1879.

COHO has developed a living petrified child, whose head, body and limbs are ossified to such an extent that one can make no impression upon them. Its parents contemplate rearing it tenderly, so that it may in the future become a formidable rival of Grant for the Presidency.

In seems that instead of a couple of lion getting loose in the woods of Southern Illinois and eating up the denizens, it was one of Jim Gordon Bennett's Castle Garden reporters, who took with him the habits inculcated in his mind during his brief stay in the New York Herald office.

A Boston preacher has recently delivered a course of sermons on "How Shall We Get to Heaven?" We don't know much about the subject, but would judge that about the surest way is to be hanged for murder. While there are doubts in the minds of the majority of Christians as to their final redemption, we do not know of the case of a murderer who was not certain of jumping from the scaffold into eternal bliss.

Ar last an Indian has been found who ad mits that he took part in the massacre of Major Thornburgh's command. Chief Jack came into camp a few days ago, and being placed on the stand gave a clear statement of the fight which, he claims, was justifiable on his part. He expressed the utmost contempt for those engaged in the outbreak on the agency, characterizing Chief Douglass as "a squaw man," the most opprobrious epithet one brave can bestow upon another. There is at last a hope that the guilty parties will be discovered and brought to justice through their own confessions and the recriminations of others.

THE New York Tribune has withstood the demand for a paper every day in the year until the present time, but at last succumbs, and to-day the first issue of the Sunday Tribunc is made. Heretofore it was published Monday morning and omitted Sunday. The Herald first inaugurated the plan of a paper every day in the year. Raymond, of the Times, followed some years later. Then Marble, of the World, fell into line. About five years ago Dana brought the Sun out on Sunday. The Star, the Tammany morning paper, also publishes seven days in the week, and last comes the Tribune. Every morning paper in that city is now published 365 days in the year. The GLOBE recognized the fact at the outset of its existence that the world moved every day in the year. There is no Joshua to command a halt, either on Sunday, Fourth of July, or Christmas. A paper to be a record of this busy world must be published daily or oftener. We look forward to the debttime when the GLOBE will be printed three times a day-morning, noon and night, with that day. We do not mean three papers per day in the sense of three editions of the same paper, but three full and complete papers each entirely different in contents from the other. The GLOBE has already done something in advancing journalism and the New York Tribune and other imitators will find much more to learn, than how to make a Sunday paper, by watching the revolutions of the GLOBE.

THE DANCE.

The dancing season has fairly begun, and promises to form as important a part of our winter's social amusements as ever before. Almost every circle of society has its dancing club which, once a fortnight or oftener, devotes an evening to Terpsichorean delights. The ladies think these evenings charming and the gentlemen declare them just the jolliest thing out. From nine o'clock to long after midnight the revelry continues, the waltz alternating with the quadrille, the schottische with the Virginia reel or moneymusk, until, wearied with the unwonted exercise, superheated with excitement, and flushed by the embraces of lovers or acquaintances, all seek their pillows conscious that the morrow will dawn and find them haggard, listless and suffering from headaches and almost utter exhaustion.

Until quite recently promiscuous dancing was interdicted by the Christian church. It was declared to be immoral and therefore unbecoming in those professing religion. There is, we are forced to admit, some justice in this claim, for every person knows in ment. And instead of improving, the dances of late years have been becoming more and more open to objections. Whereas the last generation was content with square dances and reels, with only an occasional round dance present. to lend piquancy to the close, all the fashionable dances of to-day are practically of the round variety. The steps of the waltz, the polka, the schottische and the gallop are all introduced into the quadrille, and there is in all the same familiar clasping of waists and given for the benefit of the organ fund hands, the same compressing of forms in voluptuous proximity required in the waltz. They are all shocking to genuine modesty.

The SUNDAY GLOBE cannot be justly accused of prudery. It has no fault to find with dancing in the home circle or among intimate friends. But the promiscuous dancing so much in vogue at the present day has a decidedly demoralizing tendency. A lady who accepts an invitation to dance with a stranger gives him consent to take liberties that should be permitted only to a husband or an affianced lover. This can not be oft repeated without perceptibly lowering her own self-esteem-her own maidenly or wifely delicacy.

In another light the dance does not commend itself to sensible people. Is it not an absurd sight to see a half a hundred or more grown-up men and women, supposedly rational, hopping around a hall like so many animated jumping-jacks? Dancing has been in it. It is a patent absurdity, senseless fashion and a harmful folly. If any lady thinks we have spoken too emphatically on the subject.

would do if a stranger, formally introduced for the first time, should proceed to clasp her about the waist, and press her to him? Would she not resent it as an insult and order him from the house with indignation? Yet, she permits far greater liberties than this at every ball she attends-liberties, which, if attempted in her own parlor, would never be forgiven.

Dancing has a strong hold upon the community, and will retain that hold as long as it continues to be fashionable. Leap-frog would be practiced just as extensively if it was fashionable, and we would soon cease to be shocked at the spectacle of a party of ladies and gentlemen vaulting over each other's backs, if it once became the custom in polite society. Yet, such a sport is no more ridiculous, senseless or immoral, than the modern dance.

PILLARS.

Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a realy mind; neither as being lords over God's eritage, but being ensamples of the flock.

PETER, v: 2-3. Such is the duty and such the qualifications of a pillar of the church as described by the apostle. It is an important office which only the most sincere and earnest Christian can fill satisfactorily. A pillar of the church should set an example to all his associate members that is worthy of imitaion; should live a life above reproach: should walk circumspectly before his brethren and the world, and above all should not assume to be the lord over God's heritage.

In these days there are various kinds of supports of the sacred edifice—in the churches. church. There is the financial pillar-a very great personage, both in his own and others' esteem. It is not that sarv should a professing Christian. He generally neither days as usual. Due notice of this collection is regards himself and wishes all others to regard him as the patron of the church. He says the religious exercises of the Sabbath day have a powerful influence on the morals of the community-restrain the poor from the commission of vice and reform the Rev. Edward C. M. by the pastor, Rev. S. Conn, D. to remember and reverence his name. He goes to church usually about once on each Sabbath. He arrives just after the close of the first hymn and as the minister is about to begin the reading of the morning lesson. The clergyman pauses while the pillar moves majestically down the aisle to a middle front seat, followed by his Smith. stately spouse, arrayed in silks and velvets and resplendent with jewels and precious stones. The whole congregation and Wabashaw streets—Preaching at 10:30 o'clock A. M., by the pastor, Rev. W. C. Gannett. Sunday school at 12:15 o'clock P. M. The pillar of deportment is another featimes a day—morning, noon and night, with an observance of the Sabbath by omitting the noon issue, and having but two papers that day. We do not mean three papers per that days are the p ccompanied by his wife and numerous the first notes of the voluntary. He lowers reprovingly over his spectacles at those who arrive after he has become seated or at those who venture to whisper or to smile during the service. When the hymn is announced he is the first on his feet and joins in with a voice that is not always in tune. But it is his theory that all the congregation should praise the Lord, and he wishes to show by his example that he practices what he preaches. His austerity seems to intensify as the service progresses, and not until the outer air has been reached does the gloom with which he has infected those around him disappear. This is his idea of reverence for God and his sanctuary, how-over, and he is consistent in it. The pillar of zeal is another prominent one in the churches. He is generally found at work. He acts as an usher if he can do so, and seats well-dressed strangers in the most comfortable pews in the church. He passes the contribution box with alacrity, helps everybody in his neighborhood to a regards its quality by time, still it is quite apparent that good has been done. They defer to the opinion of his own experience of grave immoralities the pillar, however, and make up their minds directly traceable to indulgence in this amuse—that the minister is a very elever orator after many awake to the work necessary to be done would be far more frequent than they are at

> The social pillar is by no means an unimportant factor in the composition of the church. He is generally young, good-looking, fashionable and unmarried. He takes a great interest in the social entertainments (every church now-a-days has an organ fund which needs an occasional benefit), and is always seen helping them along. He makes himself agreeable to the young ladies, pays court to the dames, defers to tue wisdom of the elders, and flatters the financial pillar. He is, aside from the latter person, the most popular pillar in the church. The young ladies regard him as "just too lovely for anything;" the matrons as a good example for the young men of the church; the pillar of deportment as a little too frivlous, but not to be dispensed with, while to 9:30. the financial pillar looks upon him benignantly, and tells him not to marry for money, but to remember that money is no detriment to a young woman, and besides. it gives a man an opportunity to do good. "Ah!" he exclaims, "if I didn't have a little money I could not have done : o much good to the church!"

In equity, the Northern Pacific railroad company has a suit against the St. Paul Prof. Weitbrecht of the High school, & Pacific railroad company. This latter who read a paper upon till also looms up on the old question of "debentures," "Dutch bondholders," etc., in suits brought by H. Sahlgaard, B. H. Stricker, A. Messehaert and D. Krophuller, who represent a minority of the Dutch bondholders, who claim their interests were ignored when the sale of the railroad occurred, which brought about a change of name to the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba railroad company. In the course of his litibe and was accountable solely on gious career, Isaac W.Webb has reached the scientific principles, in which the water dignified precincts of a United States court, for he is docketed as defendant in a case to which Bessie A. Quite a little discussion took place between the two, Profs. Wright and Weitbrecht, the upshot of which was that Prof. Wright held that the time had not come to discard the theory of a molten interior for the earth to bell, of the High school. He accepted the latter day theory, that the earth was a rigid mass between the rigidity of glass and steel. The greatest scientist of the age, Sir Wm. Thompson, advocated the theory that the world was rigid. He said this could be proved on theory—the super-abundant mass of matter, would, by pressure, cause solidi-Secondly, fication. Secondly, he proved it by fact, and argued mathematically, from the astronomical fact of the precessio of the equinoxes, which proved the rigidity and solidity of the earth. Mr. Donnelly thought if the earth wasn't rigid before it should be now, after the present discussion. [Laughter.] To arrive, however, at some conclusion, he moved the reference to a special committee. [Laugh-

With this the discussion ended, and was followed by a report from Prof. Slack on the subject of interest to the teachers, being in fact the suggestion of a method by which teaching might be made easier and more comprehensive to the pupil by taking objects in nature or in or about the person of the pupil to illustrate the subjects taught. Progress in this should be made in order, and at length Prof. Slack explained how the order should be established, and how step by step from simple objects to higher ones the pupil should be led.

In accepting the report, Supt. Wright took occasion to commend the committee for the care exercised in preparing it, and the exhaustive and comprehensive sugges tions, easy of practice, embraced in it. until the next regular meeting.

The other evening a fond grandmother was putting her little boy to bed, and had started his prayer for him, when she was interrupted by his exclaiming, "That isn't the way, grandma, vou should say, 'Hullo, God,' first !'

Spurgeon often draws largely on the sermons of other ministers for material with which to fill up his own. When he does so he tells his hearers about it, and generally informs them from whom hequotes. On a recent Sunday he credited about two-thirds of his discourse to a celebrated sermonizer. This is better than borrowing on the sly.

According to the Presbyterian, the diminishing number of candidates in the church is causing much apprehension.
