THE Cleveland Leader, the principal Republican paper of the state asks "Can the Republicans carry Ohio?" The Providence Press, also Republican says, "the prospects are not very bright, and the Republicans will have their hands full." It may be remarked that is about "the size of it," if not more so.

THE supreme court of Ohio is holding back the decision regarding the Scott liquor tax license law. Three members of the court are candidates for election upon the Republican ticket. Their politics render them timid in the discharge of their judicial duties. The people will take the cowards off the bench next October.

GOVERNOR FOSTER, of Ohio, was in Washington when the verdict of the star route jary became public. He very soon met Gen. Brady, and shook his hand warmly, saying: "I congratulate you on your vindication. I am glad of it, but I always thought it would turn out that way." If Foster isn't careful the Republican administration will have him indicted for being a horse-thief, or something of that sort.

In his position as secretary of the Republican National committee he was the receptacle of much valuable information-from a political standpoint-and treasured up that information in a retentive memory. He has ascertained that it has been the habit of the truly moral managers of the "grand old party" to burn the bridges behind them, to destroy the correspondence and records of every campaign as soon as the votes are counted or placed to the credit of the party by fair means or foul. He has, nevertheless, an abundance of evidence to discomfit many of these who have been the most furious in denouncing him when they thought him the under dog in the fight. It will certainly be interesting to learn of the devious doings of the truly moral managers of the party, and Mr. Dorsey cannot begin his revelations too soon.

CRYING OUT AGAINST DIVORCE.

The public mind is called upon to ensounter frequent shocks arising from some scandalous transactions made permissible by the diworce courts. In setting aside and annulling the fraudulent divorce procured by Major Nickerson, the Philadelphia judge said it was a great shame and disgrace that the laws of Pennsylvania made the procurement of a divorce under the circumstances that arose in that case pos-they would perform the marriage service for no divorced person except the innocent next campaign. party to a divorce granted for scriptural reasons. This is a step well taken in the direction of quickening the public conscience. Not that it will directly result in removing suits of divorce from the courts. or particularly hinder divorced persons from remarrying, for there are plenty of clergymen who are not as Spartan-minded as the eight of Los Angeles, but the stand taken is a starting point for the growth of a public sentiment through which the lax legal and moral abuse of marriage may be somewhat remedied. At the sitting of the Diocesan convention of Northern Ohio at Cleveland last week, the subject of divorce was extensively discussed and expressions made by resolution to the effect that divorce should never be granted except for adultery. A resolution was adopted requesting the president of the convention, Bishop BILLEE CHANDLER didn't cut any figure Bedell, to communicate with other recognized bodies of other denominations in that state, in order to secure united action upon the subject. It is to be hoped the movement thus begun will find general cooperation. If clergymen will take their again, all the creditors attaching his propstand, as in the cases cited, there will be lay support of great moral weight, and a egal reform instituted which the public conscience will sustain.

HINDSDALE "DIDN'T BLAB," B. A. Hindsdale, a former president of Hiram college, and now superintendent of public schools at Cleveland Ohio, was an intimate friend of President Garfield. whom the latter intended to appoint to a prominent mission abroad, but was prevented by the fatal occurrence of July 2. 1881. Since the President's death Mrs. Garfield appointed Mr. Hinsdale the editor of her husbands literary remains and confided to him all the correspondence, papers and materials neccessary for an authentic work. For some little time a report has been current at Washington that during the campaign of 1880 Garfield made a compact with Jay Gould to appoint Stanley Mathews a justice of the supreme court in consideration of $100,000 subscribed by Gould to the Republican campaign fund. Whitelaw Reid of the New York Tribune is said to have ingineered the scheme and after some persuasion got Gould to pay over the money. It was common rumor at Chicago at the time of the nominating convention that if Blaine was made the Re publican candidate for President, Gould would on the spot pay $250,000 to the campaign fund and further either secure from others or pay himself an additional sum making the whole contribution from that quarter not less than a half million dollars. This knowledge naturally induced a desire to secure from Gould a contribution to assist Garfield. That Gould was approached and that he contributed has always been known, though the terms of the compact have not been public property. Two or three days ago a report was telegraphed from Washington that among the papers in the possession of Mr. Hinsdale are letters and telegrams that passed between Garfield and New York politicians during the presidential campaign, and pending the trouble with Conkling growing out of the Robertson appointment. Among this documentary matter are said to be letters confirming the compact with Jay Gould. Another branch of the story is that the letters and documents held by Hinsdale, would if published show that Garfield was reluctant to break with the stalwarts and that he was persuaded by Blaine and Whitelaw Reid to take the course he did, which provoked the wrath of the stalwarts, and raised up a Guiteau, whereby he came to his death. All these things, the dispatch alleged would be substantiated if Hinsdale would give out the letters for publication.

In consequence of the direct statement associating Hinsdale with this store of information, a reporter of the Cleveland Plain Dealer called upon that gentleman to make inquiry in regard to The stealing, if any was done, was under the matter. In response Mr. Hinsdale dictated a reply to the effect that he had published no such documents and did not "intend to at present." To a direct inquiry as to whether he had any such documents, Mr. Hinsdald would make no direct reply, but intimated that he knew a great deal "that would interest the if "were blab," but that he "didn't blab." He further intimated that it was cincts of the Republican party, and no no business of the public whether he had Democrat, great or small, had any part in the documents in question or not. The at. Brewster must have had a bottle too treatment of the subject by Hinsdale is much when he endeavored to bring the very like that gentleman, and was intendquestion of politics into a matter that had ed by him to be an exceedingly adroit and wise reply, one that would throw every body off the scent. But does it? well, hardly. The public will not fail to draw its own inference, and it will draw a correct one.

BUT LITTLE UNDERSTOOD.

If there is any question the American people do not understand, but over which they will go wild about as quick as a wild bull over a red rag, it is the tariff and free trade question.

Set a dozen of the most commercially educated minds to work for their opinion on this vexed question and they will come in with a dozen different opinions, at variance with each other as perfectly as though they had started in with the purpose of determining how far they could get apart in arriving at conclusions,

When tariff matters are adjudicated upon in congress, the work is done by a committee who are for the most part made up of men skilled in legal lore, but with as much practical knowledge of the commercial wants of the union as a whole, as a country blacksmith is of the intricate and delicate machinery of a detached lever or cylinder escapement.

The fact of it is the American people are too busy in forwarding the great enterprise and growth of the country, either by the threshing of keen intellect or with the vigor of the brawny arm to settle down to the attempt at a thorough solution of this vexed question, and their passing it over to whom we purchase our stock, and I can vexed question, and their passing it over to the adjudication of statesmen with full as little understanding of the subject as themselves, if not less, leaves them in heathen darkness from the close of one presidential term to the conclusion of another, and so on ad infinitum.

Now, the war having been over twenty years, and the political arguments and sible. But the laws are loose and lax contingencies growing out of it having nearly everywhere, and there seems to be been whipped into threads, the last one by student. He shuns social life, and spends no such pricing of the public conscience the getting together of the people of the his evenings in his study mastering "writas to restore to marriage the lapse north and south in commercial relations, ten politics," whatever that may be, and which now renders it but little more than in which friendly relations were sure to pining over history and political econobigamous and polygamous license. > The evidence of the ignorance of the general public, in fact almost everybody. on this subject was well illustrated in the last presidential campaign, when by the assertion of the Republicans that the Democratic party were the advocates of a nonprotective tariff and that under it wages would be reduced, they persuaded the Indianians to rush blindly into their ranks, and elevate taxation on quinine, the one article of their home consumption on which, from the quantities consumed, every mother's son of them was personally interested to have the tariff entirely taken

The people of this country certainly should have free trade in all articles which their necessities require for food and health, and on all raw articles for manufacture, and in other matters on which they might vote intelligently they certainly should have a good square commercial and non-partisan education from their best business minds.

In this age of associations, amalgamations and the gathering together of men for the forwarding of mutual interests, a gathering of the practical commercial minds of the north, south, east and west in national convention, to compare opinions and to settle upon tariff and free trade questions from the standpoint of practical observation and experience and promulgate the result of their deliberations broadcast for the nation's highest interest. would remove this great and vital question from the political arena in which it has been used as a foot-ball by both parties for the past fifty years, and give the world of commerce and business a welcome, grateful rest.

Such action would remove from the fields of our political action the conferring party matadors who shake the blood red mantles of danger of political tariff and free trade in the eyes of the people in the attempt to vote them on a basis of fear rather than of fact, and by this prevent them with their suffrages from securing the reforms in government in which they stand at this moment in perilous need, and which a reconstructed republic now must and will have, be the day longer or shorter to its attainment, not by leaders or office holders, but through the ballotbox.

A Verdict Against the Spy System, On the evening after the acquital of the star route defendants Col. R. G. Ingersoll was seranaded. In response he made the following re-remarks: Well, my friends, if you must have it. I will say that to-day has proved that we have twelve honest men in the District of Columbia. [Cheers.] The verdict was right for two reans: First, because the jurors were honest urageous men. Second, because the dedants are innocent. The verdict will be of incalculable benefit to the District, and I will tell you why. It means the end of the spy, de-tective, and informer system here. The Department of Justice must now rely upon the evipartment of Justice must now rely upon the evidence of honest men. It is glory enough for us to-night that we are not to be under the system of espionage that prevails in nearly every despotic country in the world. We want it so that every case can be tried on its merits. We want ries to find their verdicts on the facts and evience. We want every clerk in every department to know that it has rights to decide honestly and without fear or favor; that he need not sacrifice his manhood in order to keep his place. We want to teach the administration that they cannot terrorize juries in this country. We want to teach presidents that they cannot force jurors to decide against their honest convictions. We have done something of this sort. We have shown the people that there is justice in the District. The verdict is a triumph for the whole American people. It is the end of the spy and informing system. It is not my victory, but the triumph of justice. [Cheers and shouts.]

Now, come in boys and see me. [Renewed shows.]

The Y. M. C. A. The twenty-seventh anniversary of the Young Men's Christian Association of the city of St. Paul was held last evening at the House of Hope church. Owing to the order of exercises consisted of singing, prayer, reading of scriptures, the reading of the treasurer's and president's report and an address by Rev. Robert West, Chicago, Ill., on "Christ's Kingdom on Earth." The two reports were up to the first of June and were printed at the time in the GLOBE. Financially the association is in a very satisfactory condition, but, like all such organizations, it needs a good deal more money to enable it to accomplish what it wants to do. It is an association that ha marked out for itself a good deal of work. but it cannot accomplish all it wants to, or all it seeks to without several thousand dollars, and the point in hand is to get the neceisary money. It is to be hoped gentlemen interested matter will succeed in their endeavor and that the money will be forthcoming from some source.

The Minstrels.

The Barlow, Wilson & Co. minstrel troupe that open at the opera house to-morrow evening, have an enviable reputation. An exchange speaks thus of the organization:

Minstrelsy has such a charm for the people of this ancient borough that the rain of yesterday afternoon, and the elevation of the storm signal last night, were not sufficient to deter them from venturing into the academy of music. Barlow, Wilson & Co. may well felicitate themselves upon their reception. The academy was filled with a multitude of appreciative people, and they testified by unmistakable methods the pleasure afforded them by the popular airs of a superb orchestra, the melodies of the Clipper quartette, impersonations of negro characters, dancing, and a long catalogue of new and refreshing specialties. The audience was large, refined and discriminating, and this minstrel combination won its unstinted applause. They can safely repeat their call in the assurance of a warm greeting from the patrons of music and mirth. "Italian Restaurants."

To the Editor of the Globe: ST. PAUL, June 17th. Can I call upon you for space to answer a communication appearing in the P.P. of June 16, relating to Italian restaurants and fruit stands on corners, which statements in regard to same are false, and the person causing such statements to be published is an ignoramus or a fit subject for an insane asylum, and if "Merchant" will send his name to us we will gladly furnish him with safely say we expend more money for stock than "Merchant" does in a year. London, June 17 .- The terrible calamity on Saturday evening is the subject of universal unhappy comment. The hall has been surrounded to day by distressed and excited crowds. The stairway from the gallery to the top of the landing where occurred the pressure which led to the accident, was from five to six feet wide, and the gallery, through which the children were allowed to pass, only one at a time which circumstances, is regarded as the direct cause of the calamity, was fitted with a bolt which lodged in a hole in the floor, thus narrowing the passageway for the purpose of facilitating ticket taking when the audience was entering the hall. The janitor says the scene behind the gallery door was fearful. Some children were fixed upright in a heap and actually gasping for breath, so great was the pressure of the crowd behind them. A majority of the children in the hall were under twelve years of age.

Madrid, June 16,—John W. Foster,
American minister, presented his credentials to King Alfonso to-day. Foster expressed the warm friendship of President Arthur and the American citizens generally for the king and the Spanish people The long unbroken friendship between the United States and Spain was he said a source of pride to both, and he would endeavor, if possible, to strengthen the present cordial relations between the tw countries. Foster dwelt upon the great debt the American continent owes to Spain and said he hoped the peace now enjoyed by Spain would continue and that through improved commercial relations Spain and the United States might share other's prosperity. Alfonso cordially reciprocated Foster's good wishes.

him to come to her house that day and give her a lesson on the guitar. He plied and when he went in he told her it was a warm day, and asked if she had any objection to his taking off his coat during the lesson. She said certainly not. He took off his coat, and his boots were large and heavy and he took them off. He was sitting in a chair and had his feet on another chair when Sitze came to the window, opened the blinds and looked in. Mrs. Sitze said, "Pa, come round to the door." He did come to the door, and rushed by his wife and grabbed a hatchet and started for Straight, but dropped this weapon and took a large knife, when Straight caught his arm and held him. In the preliminary examination of H. C. Straight accused of adultery, John Sitze, the complaining witness, testified that he went to Northfield on the 7 a.m. train Thursday morning, came back on the noon freight, went down to his house and found the doors locked and the blinds down. His suspicions were aroused. He tried to get in at the front door but found it locked, tried the side door and found it locked; went around to the bed room window, opened the blinds, and saw Straight and his wife in bed. They jumped out, I ran to side door and broke it in and found Straight under the stairway partly undressed; got a knife from the shelf and tried to my arms, and I could not use it.
