

NOT ON THE PROGRAMME

A Performance Interrupted by Mr. Rankins Failure to Settle With a Baggage-man.

The Play Continued After One of Helena's Millionaires Shows His Generosity.

The Count de Lestry's Public Spirit Induced Him to Draw a Check For the Benefit of the Audience.

The people who were at the opera house last evening to witness McKee Rankin and company play "The Runaway Wife," had the additional enjoyment of an act not on the programme. The cast was enlarged by the appearance of Count Louis DeLestry as the hero of the evening. It never was known that the count, versatile as he is, aspired to glory in the histrionic art. Nevertheless, the audience last evening was indebted to his magnificent generosity for the pleasure of seeing the fourth and fifth acts of the play. The first acts of the play were rendered with the harmony and ease that characterized the performance on Monday evening. After the third act in which Mr. Rankin as the blind and wronged husband came face to face with the charming lady who played the runaway wife the curtain came down with a noticeable bang. The orchestra rendered a selection after the customary length of time; everything seemed to be moving nicely. A long wait followed the music. This was rather annoying, but it was attributed to the length of time required to set the elaborate scene of the next act. But after the musicians had played and other tedious wait followed, it was evident that something was up behind the scenes. The hoots and cat-calls from the gallery that resulted were stopped by the pushing aside of the curtain and the appearance of Mr. Rankin himself. He was dressed for the fourth act and in his hand he carried a silk hat, which he waved with an important air in the course of his remarks. In a deep bass voice, which is the most impressive part of his acting, Mr. Rankin told the audience with some hesitation of the manner in which he had been abused. The combination of grand eloquence with pathetic appeals brought many of the tender hearts on to tears. Mr. Rankin's rich bass voice informed the audience he was hired by one Bart J. Kendrick for which he received a weekly salary. Mr. Kendrick had arranged for a performance at Marysville for Sunday evening last and incidentally had agreed with a baggage-man, one Warren, Mr. Rankin was not altogether certain as to the name, that the company's baggage should be carried from the depot to the hotel and return for one dollar, a ridiculously low price, said Mr. Rankin, with the added remark in an ornate tone, that a bargain was a bargain. When the company left Marysville on Monday the baggage-man refused to take the trunks from his wagon at the depot unless he received six dollars for his work. Mr. Rankin failed to explain the incidents immediately following this protest, but said that the baggage was placed on the cars and sent to Helena. This left the impression with the audience that the once famous actor had employed means not unknown to pugilists to carry his points. "To-day I was arrested," he continued, "and my baggage was now the box office receipts, amounting to $19.50, have been attached for the payment of six dollars and costs, but," he remarked impressively, throwing his shoulders back, and banging himself on the chest with his silk hat. "I, McKee Rankin, have been arrested for this sum and Mr. Kendrick runs the show, and therefore the box office receipts belong to him." This lucid explanation producing no effect, he continued: "I have demanded the box office receipts as Mr. Kendrick's representative, and the manager refusing to give them up, I announce that my performance will not be continued. You must look out for your money at the office." With a magnificent bow, as though he had been called before the law, Mr. Rankin retired from the view amid yells and hoots from the audience. He had hardly left the stage before Manager Remington appeared. In a few words he explained that the box office receipts had been attached and were in the hands of the law. He had no power to turn them over to Mr. Rankin if he desired. He greatly regretted Mr. Rankin's refusal to continue the play, but he was compelled by the law to hold the attached receipts, and if he gave them up he would be arrested for contempt of court. Mr. Remington's explanation was thoroughly satisfactory and the audience could be laid upon him. The restless audience was wondering what would come next, when the true hero of the evening's entertainment arose to the rescue and quieted all fears. The Count de Lestry who had been an interested observer of the scene, got up from his seat and casting his eyes over the audience to see what effect his presence produced, turned his right hand in the air and bringing it down with a pronounced gesture, he exclaimed: "Let de blay go on. I will pay de nineteen dollars and a half. This mizet effect on the audience. The gallery howled and hooted, while a few cheers and a good many laughs came forth from the lower floor. Mr. De Lestry's friends rushed upon him, overwhelming him with congratulations upon the exhibition of noble generosity. The count smilingly acknowledged these favors with graceful bows and gentle waves of the hand. It was evidently a matter of gratification to him to know that the intelligent portion of the audience appreciated the nerve and magnificence of the man who could grasp the situation, solve the problem in a flash and put up the necessary funds for the continuance of the entertainment. To show that he meant business the count made out a check and tendered it to Mr. Remington who received it with a smile. The manager then went to the stage and announced that through the princely generosity of Mr. Louis DeLestry the programme would be continued. He had received a check for the necessary amount. "Head the check," shouted someone from the gallery. The orchestra rendered another selection and in a few minutes the curtain went up on the fourth scene of the play which was finished without further trouble. The company retired to the dressing rooms and the next act followed. While Mr. Rankin was pulling his shirt off preparatory to washing the point of his face, Officer J. A. Hendricks of Marysville, assisted by Officer Raddick of this city arrested the actor for breach of the peace at Marysville. Then the portly actor got mad. He roved around much to the amusement of the spectators, but was finally taken away to the police station. Next to Mr. Rankin, Miss Mabel Bert, the leading lady, was the maddest person in the theatre. While disrobing she talked in a tone loud enough to be heard in Marysville. Her language was very direct in its meaning, though it was of a kind not often heard in the higher circles of society. When the party reached the station Justice of Peace Padbury, of Marysville, was there to greet them. The little judge laid a wip the cold law to the astute actor and told him he was under arrest for a breach of the peace. This was the second case against Mr. Rankin. During the day Constable Kendrick Goss served a paper on him for his arrest on the charge of debt, rendered by D. J. Goss, the Marysville baggage-man. Col. Casey, the attorney, discovered that the complaint was made out to read the "Territory of Montana," and the constable was bluffed off. It was his first case and the old man was in a quandary. He telegraphed to Justice Padbury, who hurried to Helena on the first train and, under instructions from Goss, preferred the second charge. The breach of the peace consisted of this: The baggage-man took the company's nine trunks and a valise to the depot, where Mr. Rankin refused to pay $5 as demanded. The driver started back for town intending to hold the trunks until he was paid, but Rankin was bound to have them, and stopped the team, and by force the trunks were tipped off the wagon on to the platform and soon thrown on board the train, which was to leave in a few minutes. Rankin claimed that he was not responsible for any contraband his advance agent made. He played to all that Warren's bail could hold and still expected the baggage-man to haul nine heavy trunks from the train up to town, then up a long flight of stairs, arise the next morning at 4 o'clock, take the trunks down stairs again to the depot, and all for $1. While this action on the part of the company, which made at least $300 for one appearance, was very profitable, it exceeded by another small trick which the company played on a hotel proprietor at Marysville. The company of ten people made an arrangement with the proprietor whereby they were to pay $1.50 a piece for supper, one night's lodging and breakfast in the morning. The proprietor, of course, served the meals with extras, because the people were actors and actresses. When the morning arrived they refused to take breakfast which was prepared for them and would only pay $1 each.

The company will next appear at Salt Lake and Mr. Rankin at the jail last night, got Head Clerk Garret of the Cosmopolitan to go on his bond for $100. Realizing that he could not remain and much less go back to Marysville, the village judge informed Mr. Rankin he could have an immediate trial and if he would plead guilty, he would be lenient with him and would only impose a small fine. This was satisfactory to Mr. Rankin and he pleaded guilty to a breach of the peace. Judge Padbury fined him $19 and costs, amounting to $22.10. This was exclusive of the baggage-man's suit for $5, which Mr. Rankin intends to fight and left the matter with Attorney Casey. Old man Kendrick, the constable, clucked in his sleeve when this result was brought about, but his spirits drooped several degrees after Mr. Rankin settled the bill and he received his share of the costs only to find that the judge neglected to add the constable's mileage bill to the costs.

JOTTINGS ABOUT TOWN.

Thos. Cronin is building storm doors for the Arcade. Homer Jennison has on exhibition the latest gem art from the brush of M. W. Wood, the artist. The house of lords will meet to-night at Encore hall to perfect organization. By order of Lord High Executioner Lockey. Will the person who borrowed Vol. VI of Appleton's American Cyclopaedia from THE INDEPENDENT'S library please return the same. It was reported yesterday that John Worth was shot. This was supposed to be funny because Billy Beloit was at his usual post behind the Atlas cigar counter.

FORREST NEARLY FINISHED.

The Great Cronin Case is Drawing to a Close. Chicago, Dec. 10.—Forrest resumed his address to the Cronin jury to-day, claiming that the stains and print on the floor of the Carlton cottage might have been put there by a reporter to get up a sensation, just as was done with the bloody cotton batting found in the basement.

MARRIAGE WAS A FAILURE.

The Wife of a Cattle King Obtains a Divorce and a Large Allowance. Chicago, Dec. 10.—On Saturday last, it is learned, a divorce was granted Mrs. Wilson Waddingham from her husband, the millionaire cattle king, well known throughout the west, and the foundation of whose fortune was a land grant obtained in Mexico. It is said Mrs. Waddingham objected to their extravagant style of living, and when her husband began the erection of a palatial residence in West Haven, ten years ago, which has since been completed at a cost of $965,000, she protested loudly. Six years ago their relations became strained and it was mutually agreed to separate. Having agreed to a yearly allowance of $25,000 to the wife and $10,000 to each of his children, Waddingham left for his family. His wife then began her suit for divorce in a Chicago court last summer. The decree carries with it an allowance equal to the previous alimony. New York, Dec. 10.—Mrs. Helen B. Scitua has brought suit for absolute divorce from her husband, Edgar Saltus, the novelist. Two co-respondents are mentioned, and adultery is claimed as the ground for the divorce.

SUPPOSED TO BE LOST.

Fears That Prominent Seattle Citizens Have Been Drowned. Seattle, Washington, Dec. 10.—Dr. T. T. Miner, the well known physician and politician, Geo. Morris Haller and Louis Cox, prominent attorneys, are supposed to have been drowned while hunting on the waters of the lower Sound. They left Seattle Thanksgiving evening and were to have returned home last Wednesday. The boat was found today floating in the bay near Whidby island, and also a pair of oars. The boat is believed to be the one belonging to the missing party. The general belief is that the gentlemen intended to cross the Sound in a small boat and were capsized and drowned.

Answered Correctly.

A teacher in one of the public schools of Detroit was giving a lesson on patriotism. The children seemed to know very little about Washington except the latest story and the fact that he was a great and good man, which they had read in the Second reader. At last the teacher said: "You may have heard from school on Washington's birthday, but you never do so on your birthday. Why not?"

And with surprising emphasis came the answer: "Cause he never told a lie."

JACK BACK IN BUTTE.

The Cause of the Montana Deadlock Returns From the East.

BUTTE, Dec. 10.—[Special.]—Wm. Jack returned to Butte to-night, after an absence which dates from the day following the decision of the Silver Bow county returning board in regard to precinct 34. It was given out when he left that he had gone to Scotland, but Jack states he has not been outside of the United States. He was not met at the depot by a brass band or, in fact, by anybody except the usual mob of hucksters, who wanted to haul him up town for four bits. Jack repaired to his hardware store on Main street, where he shook hands with his clerks. It was here that he was seen by the INDEPENDENT correspondent. He positively declined to be interviewed, saying that there was nothing of public interest about which he could speak. He had read what the eastern papers had to say about Montana politics, but did not know how much to believe and which to discredit. He would give no expression of opinion in regard to the deadlock, or the far reaching effects of the throwing out of precinct 34. He said he was tired out from the trip, and after staying a few minutes in the store, went to his hotel. His actions as president of the canvassing board evidently do not weigh on his conscience, as he looks hale and hearty. He was a 250-pounder before his trip and rather gained than lost since. He held no communication with any of the republicans of Butte to-night.

The Red Man's Owing.

BISMARCK, Dec. 10.—[Special.]—Agent McLaughlin, of the Standing Rock Indian agency, has started for Washington with a delegation of leading Sioux chiefs. The main object of the visit is to have a talk with the great father at Washington before the Indians' land is given up. They have no hopes of keeping the reservation from settlement, but they seem anxious to have an eastern trip, and a big feed at Uncle Sam's expense. They will travel in Pullman palace cars and stop at the best hotels.

Killed by a Falling Rock.

LAVINOSKOT, Mont., Dec. 10.—[Special.]—News comes from the Horn mines that a man named Long was killed at the mines Saturday by being caught under a mass of falling rock. Nothing is known as to whether he has friends or relatives in Montana.

The Bookkeeper Has Left.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 10.—Thomas L. Lavin, bookkeeper for J. E. Dall & Co., dry goods commission merchants, left the city Tuesday and has not since been heard from. Dall declares Lavin has wired him that he forged checks and otherwise obtained money belonging to the firm.

Herbert Nicholson & Co. are now prepared to deliver fine dry wood in any quantity. Telephone 245. Office opposite N. P. freight depot.
