FISHING A TROUT STREAM

Hints That Are Timely and Valuable for Anglers After Speckled Beauties.

The Outfit Necessary to Insure Success and to Afford Personal Comfort.

How to Work a Pool for All There Is It-Selecting a Spot to Fish,

Having fixed your mind upon some un-tried or tried and favorite trout stream, and the time when you will start, the excita-ment and preparations begin. Your recis are overhauled and Ibbricated, your sight-onnes split hamboo rods examined, the fly-book replenished, new casting lines made, and old onces repaired, your fishing 'tank" reviewed, to make sure that it contains a small box of tools, a "hank" of gat for ex-tra smoods and costing lines, a pair of mip-pers, ecossors, drinking cup, and small bot-ties of oir, of tar, and shohol, to keep of the gats and mosquitoes, a lump of shoetra snoods and costing lines, a pair of nip pers, secsors, drinking cup, and small bots ilse of oil, of tar, and shohd, to keep off the gnats and mosquitoes, a lump of shoe maker's war, seconcely wrapped in a fold of bladder, fuss, and common matches, a knife, hammer, and a corksorsw, gloves, neater lines, linen thread, and wraced ends, needles and thread, beswax, and a barom, eter, and then await with heroic patience the starting day, says the American Angler. For the first trial in the pool where your practiced sey has already selected the spot you loop on a "golden pheasant" for a "stretcher," a "governof" for a "coazer," and a "conchman" for a "dorper," and then ensak (yes, "aneak" is the proper, word here,) cautionity toward the "spot." Noiselessly and skilffully whip out your line to the desired length, and with a quick water anough to indicate hus size to your practiced eye, and is gone. An electric thrill short through your dipper, and water anough to indicate hus size to your practiced eye, and is gone. An electric thrill short through your drop-fly, breaks the water anough to indicate hus size to your prestise to the ording one dows and darts along your spine. With a quick motion you retrieve your line and cast again, but thrill short through your drop-fly, breaks the instat your gine. With a quick motion you retrieve your line and cast again, but thrill short through your chows and darts ato there again, che-chug che-r-r-you next there again, che-chug che-r-r-you met the air, with the hook in his mouth or three again, che-chug che-r-r-you neat there again, che-chug che-r-r-you met the air, with the hook in his mouth or threa again, che-chug che-r-r-you mat do so with a fly; you cannot strike alwaye do so with a fly; you cannot strike alwaye do so with a fly; you cannot strike alwaye do so with a fly; you cannot strike alwaye do so with a fly; you cannot strike alwaye do so with a fly; you cannot strike too quick ster you have seen or felt the ort. Having fairly hooked him, and beliving, there are moo mouth or throat as it aver will be; therefore it is sound to ispect, you cannot "strike" too quick after you have seen or feit the troat. Having fairly hooked him, and believing there are no-c like him in the same pool. lead him gently and noiselessly away where you can give him play, and fixely land him with your net and deposit him asfely in your creed. Be particularly careful not to "slosh around" and scare every troat within ten rode of you. The cool and skilled sportsman will often take from one to twenty out of the same "troat hole" in the same day. Having "done" that pool, glide cantionsly down to the "tilles" and eddie, behind the boulders that aro likely to be there, cast in the best places first, and then cover the whole groend, leaving no nook or spot un tried. Yon will in this way soon learn whether the troat are likely to be there, cast in the best places first, and then cover the whole groend, leaving no nook or spot un tried. Yon will in this way soon learn whether the discovery is made, work the ground accordingly. The reasons for always fishing down the stream (especially if the brook or river be a rapid one) are so numerous and plaphle that they need not be recounted here. When the watter is unushally how and the day clear, seek the deep pools and shady biding places. But when the watter is at modium height, just after a rain, fito troat are apto lis close shore the unsmally how and the day dear, are bent place the article shady when you are itsel and it is 11 o'clock, a heatiful grass its and carried along by the trapid and, where he is a hener, except when you are itsel and it is 11 o'clock. If troat are place you do not rise, change your flies and tackers until they do, or, fail-ing in that, whod up and go loome and moke your pine. It is an of do how not most your price, list an of do, or, fail-ing in the, whole the grass of which rise andais, in which hobanils are thickly riveted, or obbasile shores use long rub-ber boots for wading to the soles of which are flitted accurrely for soles

lipping on the slimy pebbles

I have tried them all, funcing, wreatling, rowing, swimming, riding—that no one of them has the many advantages of busing. As an all-round developes it is unequaled; not one of the boy's missides romain in-active, back, stomach, logs, arms, all are chiled upout for vigorous service. But what I consider its Lest feature in its recommendations for boys to the very thorough drilling which the disposition of the boy must nature. If a lad is quick to lose his temper, boxing will care him; it will teach him that no one who lets his temper get the better of him will become an expert sparter; it will speadily courince him of the absolute necessity of keeping cool and in entire possession of his wits in order to assian his efforts and avoid defeat. The boxer who cannot cou-trol his temper is practically at the mergy of a cool, skillal oponent. One cannot spar successfully and become fustrated. A boxer must ever be on the alet, his wits constantly alive, looking for an opportunity of assault, ho must be ablo to ater instantly and with cool deliberation. He need do no running to develop the muscles of his leags or his lungs; then are all continuously in action.—Harper's Yong People.

Automatic Manners. But time charges minds as well as man-ners, though even now when making changes from one circle to another, it often requires that adaptability which could be said found in one who has automatic man-ners. However, such radical changes not only appear in drawing room repartee, street drees, etc., smong people, but niso 'n the sonveniences and lumines affords.] mankind. Railroad travel is one instance. A few years age, comparatively, one had to consume much valuable time in an uncom-fortable way to make what is now thought nothing of as a night's journey in a sleeper.
