

GREATER INTEREST THAN EVER IN THE MISSOULIAN'S CONTEST SINCE THE HUDSON "33" CAME

The Home Bungalow Is Getting Nearer to Completion Every Day and the Voters Are Making Great Totals

The Extension Bonus Offer Makes It Possible to Do Good Business This Week by Calling Again Upon the People Who Were Visited When the Contest Was Young.

Have you seen the "33"? This was the question which was asked in Missoula yesterday more often than any other.

The Missoulian's "33" was on parade yesterday.

The announcement of its arrival, which was made in The Missoulian yesterday morning, attracted attention and there was general expectancy until the car appeared.

Jack Conley, manager of the Valley Mercantile company's automobile department, brought the machine down from Hamilton, and it was he who was at the helm yesterday.

You will be able to see the machine any time.

The contest man will tell you about the connection between the Hudson "33" and the Home Contest.

Ralph Stiff or Jack Hayes will tell you about the machine.

The stories which you will hear if you will investigate this proposition will convince you that The Missoulian Home Contest is wonderfully interesting.

There were no acquisitions to the millionaire calls yesterday, but there is another contestant who is ready to step over the line. No. 6 has a total now of 904,000, and it is but a little way from that point to the million mark.

There will likely be some changes today. Yesterday was a light voting day, and it has invariably been the case that a heavy vote follows a day off.

Miss Geiger holds position in No. 1 again this morning.

Her phenomenal spurt of Wednesday has been one of the noteworthy features of the contest and has awakened new interest in the race.

Maude Cyr, who is in second place, is only 3,000 votes behind No. 1, so there are possibilities of developments in this situation.

One day may mean a reversal.

Then there are other possibilities down the line.

There is not a contestant who may not enter the millionaire class in a single day, so small is the margin which separates the racers.

The Missoulian Home Contest is right in its prime; the first vote was announced four weeks ago, and four weeks from last Tuesday morning the result of the contest will be known.

Extensions

Any one who gave you a three or six months' subscription during the first part of the contest can now extend this to a year or more and give you the advantage of the extra votes. If you secured three months when such a subscription was worth 4,000 votes and the subscriber now pays for the rest of the year, or nine months, it will count you 21,000 votes.

An extension from six months to one year will count you 15,000 votes.

An extension from one year to two years will count you the difference between the original rate for one year and the rate for two years, or 35,000 votes.

We are at the half-way point and there is plenty of time for the last one in the list to mount to first place.

The extension bonus which was put into effect Monday helps a great deal.

This bonus offer makes it possible to get almost double value for subscription extensions obtained this week.

During the early weeks of the contest candidates visited a good many who took short-term subscriptions and promised to extend them later.

Now is the time to call again.

This is the week to get the extensions.

A year's extension is worth 35,000 votes.

The year by itself is worth 25,000 votes.

It is better by 10,000 votes to get the extension.

So the best plan is to make this call again week.

Drop around and see them all.

There are some of the candidates who are making a great success of their campaign by correspondence.

They are interesting their friend in the contest to the extent that there are many subscriptions coming in which show that the influence of the contest is broadening.

All of the contestants are settling down to a steady, mind-your-own-business pace and the results are apparent.

The Missoulian has added greatly to the size of its subscription list; there are many more people reading The Missoulian now than there were a month ago.

This is in the interest of the advertisers, and it is in the interest of the city.

The more people who read The Missoulian, the more there are who know about Missoula.

And that's what we are after.

If you haven't voted in the Home Contest, vote now.

Get the habit.

It helps.

The young ladies in the Home Contest are authorized to issue receipts in the name of The Missoulian and with each receipt will be found a coupon which entitles the payer to a number of votes depending upon the amount paid. Here is the scale:

Three months, $2.25 4,000 votes
Six months, $4.00 10,000 votes
Nine months, $6.00 15,000 votes
Twelve months, $8.00 25,000 votes

A coupon of 1,000 votes will be issued for each odd month not provided in the above.

The earnest worker will win the Residences addition bungalow. There are a good many ways of working and each receipt will be found a coupon which entitles the payer to a number of votes depending upon the amount paid. Here is the scale:

Three months, $2.25 4,000 votes
Six months, $4.00 10,000 votes
Nine months, $6.00 15,000 votes
Twelve months, $8.00 25,000 votes

A coupon of 1,000 votes will be issued for each odd month not provided in the above.

Remember, all the time, that The Missoulian is the newspaper of western Montana; that it covers the field thoroughly and that it is the best paper in the state to have back of you in a contest of this sort.

These rules and regulations govern The Missoulian's Home Contest:

Nominations will be received at any time either in person or by mail at the Missoulian office. Each nomination should be accompanied by two references.

Any young lady, 16 years of age or more, coming well recommended, is eligible to compete for the prizes, except that:

No employee or member of the family of an employee of the Missoulian will be permitted to enter or take any part whatever in the contest.

The Missoulian will see to it that every candidate gets an absolutely square deal and reserves the right to suspend any candidate at any time for any unfair method.

It is the intention of The Missoulian to assist, rather than hinder, each contestant and any one detected in sharp practice will be fined 5,000 for the first offense and subject to suspension when The Missoulian deems advisable for the good of the contest.

The Missoulian reserves the right to make any change at any time in the voting schedule that it may deem to be the best interest so long as it works no hardship on the candidates.

Votes will be issued on subscriptions in arrears the same as on advance payments.

All moneys collected by the candidates must be turned into The Missoulian at least twice a week.

After the votes have been issued to one contestant they will not be transferred to any other contestant.

OVERTURNING STAGE FRIGHTENS FIFTEEN

L. L. Kuhl, who was injured in an accident on the reservation Wednesday, arrived home last evening from Ravalli. Mr. Kuhl brought word that the overturning of the stage in which he and 14 other passengers were riding, occurred at Post Creek and was caused by the vehicle sliding into a deep rut. All of those in the rig, several women being included, went down in a heap with the stage and all were more or less scratched and bruised. One woman suffered a severe scalp wound, but the others' injuries were not serious. Another woman had a miraculous escape. When the roll was called after the horses had been cut loose from the overturned rig, she was missing. She was finally discovered pinned beneath the front end of the conveyance and it required eight men to set her free. Although breathless and bruised she was soon able to continue her journey.

Mr. Kuhl's injuries, although painful yesterday, were of minor importance.

AFTER HOT CLUE.

Following a hot tip that someone in Butte had secured a clue to his missing grip, J. "Pollywool" Phalen, the popular Puget Sound dispatcher, left for the Siskiyou City hurriedly yesterday morning on passenger No. 4. He returned last evening but was so engrossed in his own thoughts that it was impossible to secure an interview and just what he accomplished in Butte will, perhaps, never be known. However, it was noticed, as he stepped from the train, that he carried no handbag and his friends are inclined to believe that his trip was a failure from the satchel point of view.

CORONATION GOWNS

Among the many special features of The Missoulian for Sunday, April 23, will be an article on Coronation gowns by Frederick J. Haskin. This article will be of particular interest to our women readers, for the reason that it will contain the first published description of the gowns to be worn by Mrs. John Hays Hammond, wife of the special ambassador from the United States to the coronation of King George V.

The heavy court train on Mrs. Hammond's coronation gown will be of magnificent brocade purchased in Moscow, Russia. It was woven on the same loom used for the coronation robe of Catherine the Great and for all the czarinas of Russia, succeeding her.

Mrs. Hammond has appeared at the English court on several other occasions and in her interview with Mr. Haskin she gives a most interesting account of the rigid customs that will be observed at this magnificent ceremony.

SWEET, TENDER PEAS PLEASE ALL PALATES

Fairest of all sunshine, invincible man with a hoe and ever-ready irrigation have kissed and caressed and quite satisfied the thirst of mile-high Colorado to have her yield a greater percentage of saccharine to her sugar beets than those grown elsewhere, as well as to make her contribute a larger amount of sweetness to her sugar peas, which she always does—Colorado's sugar peas are naturally sweet and not the outcome of being closely related to a sugar refinery. Colorado sugar peas are tenderer and far more palatable than other peas. Those two points, together with their natural and unequalled sweeter quality, make them go decisively wherever they are known, wherever they are shown. There is no method of description unless one has tasted them, and one cannot imagine how much finer in flavor they are to others that are sweetened with so much or more sugar. Colorado sugar peas are much preferred to the oftentimes unjustly termed "fresh garden peas" by all who have contracted the delightful habit of eating them. When you order today, kindly tell the grocer to put a can of Colorado sugar peas in with the rest of the good stuff that helps to make life an enjoyable and not a miserable proposition—then you also know.

Immature or green peas are highly valued as an article of food in most countries, and the view is substantiated by eminent scientists everywhere that green peas contain a goodly amount of proteid material, an utmost essential in the maintenance of good health. But peas must be freshly gathered, quickly shelled and properly cooked to taste their very best—overcooked peas are yellow or brown in color and not at all inviting or palatable. Just so you know cooked right peas even when you see them. Fresh garden peas are hard to get fresh, and considerably harder to jar loose from their pods when you are in a hurry. Canned peas are always fresh and ready to serve. Canned peas are placed in cans within 15 minutes after being separated from the vines and shaken from their pods by machinery; the vines with every pod clinging to them come from the fields into the canner—a great deal fresher than any so-called fresh peas one gets at any grocery store or market place, where they steadily deteriorate in both flavor and quality. The very best peas canned are known as Colorado sugar peas, which contain a natural and not an artificial sweetness, due entirely to Colorado sunshine and pure melted snow water irrigating when the peas need moisture most—a condition vastly different from waiting for a gentle rain which cometh not, or, sometimes, yet, Colorado sugar peas are to be had at almost any grocery store or can be gotten for you, and mighty easily.

BUILDING NOTES.

Plans are now completed by Architect H. J. Hamill for an attractive house on the bungalow order to be built by D. J. Haviland of the Missoula Mercantile company. This new home is to be located on Daly avenue and it will be modern and beautiful in every detail.

The contract for the heating plant to be installed in Dr. Dunway's new home has been let to W. H. Reid, mayor-elect of this city. The Missoula Plumbing & Heating company has the plumbing contract.
