Missoula's Yellow Rose

I think of all the blossoms that the botany expert knows, there's none that's any finer than

MISSOULA'S yellow rose; it's a mighty cheery blossom—with the color of the sun—it's a greeting in the morning, it's a blessing when day's done; it makes June a blaze of glory when its golden color shows; it's a regular sunshine peddler—Missoula's yellow rose; I like the way it brightens I admire the way it cheers; with raindrops on its petals, it's like laughter's gleam through tears; it grows beside the mansion and it thrives beside the shack; whatever place it graces, it hits Old Gloom a whack; it grows so very willingly, I like it all the more; without any tender petting, it thrives beside your door; and it hails you in the morning with its cheery color bright; it welcomes you returning when your work is done at night; and it doesn't play favorites—it just blooms for all of us; it offers cheer and sunshine without making any fuss; wherever it is planted, it just takes hold and grows; it's a happy inspiration, this Missoula yellow rose.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Glasscock have returned from a fortnight's stay at Brown's lake, up the other side of Ovando.

Mr. Glasscock has been fishing, but Mrs. Glasscock has been starting an experiment on her farm which will be watched with interest. She has planted 200 orchard trees, most of them McIntosh Red and crab, and is certain they will thrive there. There is no orchard in the Blackfoot valley now; it has been considered always that the altitude is too great to make it possible successfully to grow fruit there. Mrs. Glasscock has studied conditions carefully for several seasons and has reached a conclusion which is entirely different. She is certain the fruit trees will grow well. Experiments with small fruits and with the more tender vegetables have proved that these thrive at Brown's lake. If this is so, the apples should mature without trouble. When orcharding was first tried in the Bitter Root, the same prediction was made by the wiseacre—that the climate was too severe and the fruit would not ripen. In the Bitter Root the pessimistic prophets have lived to see themselves discredited. Now Mrs. Glasscock has undertaken the same job in the Blackfoot and people here will watch her experiment with keenest interest, hoping it will prove tremendously successful.

Some time ago, a former member of the Missoula band suggested that it would be a good move to erect a bandstand in Greenwood park and in this way encourage the band in its Sunday afternoon concerts. The suggestion seemed to meet with popular approval and it was thought that something would be done in the matter. However, there has been no move on the part of the council to help the park and the band in this direction. "I can't see why the city council does not take some action along this line," said a musically-inclined citizen. "If it was an improvement that would call for the expenditure of a good deal of money, it would be a different proposition, but it would not cost very much to erect a stand that would be suitable until such time as the city could see its way clear to put up a better structure. Commissioner Price is improving the park and doing all he can to make it attractive. Why not do something to attract the crowds to the park? A bandstand would cost but little and it would bring out the crowds, so that they could enjoy the beauties of the park and listen to some good music at the same time. Missoula should encourage its band as much as any other organization of which it boasts and the erection of a bandstand would certainly be appreciated, both by the citizens and the members of the band itself."

A considerable crowd was collected before Otis Worden's grocery store yesterday afternoon.

The cause of the concourse was a collection of bearskins brought down from the Blackfoot valley by a few trappers. Some of the skins were good ones, particularly a large silver-tip, which now decorates the door of Lou Kennedy's clothing emporium. Otis Worden fell for the skin. It is a big one and in good condition. It will make a fine rug, but Mr. Worden says that it is for sale. It is a good chance for anyone who wants to make an impression as a hunter to slip one over on the folks back east.

Division Freight and Passenger Agent Merriman of the Northern Pacific was one of the road's officials, who accompanied the Northwest Development League's delegates to Missoula.

"Of course, we didn't have much time to spend here, but they all enjoyed their trip around the city and were greatly impressed with the town. Such advertising helps greatly and the chamber of commerce does a good work for Missoula every time it extends such a cordial welcome to visitors."

"I certainly was somewhat surprised this morning," said Charlie Johnson.

"Last evening I was one of those present at the pavilion dance and the unquestioned belle of the ball was Joe Earley. He was the little white-haired child and undoubtedly was a sensation. There was no doubt about that. This morning as I was coming down town, I noticed that they had commenced work on the grading of Front street and I stopped for a few minutes to watch the work. Along came the big eight-horse plow. As it passed me I happened to take a good look at the man riding the handle. It was no other than Joe Earley, whom I had last seen figuring in the role of a stillion leader. I tried to get him off the plow so that he could explain the change, but he was enjoying his ride too much to stop and talk with me."

LOCAL BOY KILLED BY GUN TRICK

statement that Gartman had shot himself. When help arrived at the scene, it was seen that the young man was past any assistance, as the bullet touched the heart and death must have come instantaneously.

His companion, who was also a Missoula boy, is being detained in the St. Regis jail, pending an investigation of the case. It is not thought that he was in any way connected with the shooting, as the two were on the best of terms all day. It is surmised that Gartman stopped off in St. Regis to see a girl he knew there. Following is the story told by his friend:

"We went into the brush a short distance from Middle Town and Gartman told me that he had a trick he would show me. He took out his gun, which was an automatic, and removed the clip or magazine. He said that he intended to whirl the gun on his finger and shoot. He had one bullet in the barrel. I told him not to try the stunt and ran away when he began it. I was some distance away when the gun went off. Gartman fell instantly and I ran for help."

Well Known Here.

Albert Gartman was well known in Missoula. He had been employed as callboy at the Northern Pacific here until about a month ago. His companion's name is thought to be Palmer. He is survived by his widowed mother and two brothers. His brother, Frank, is in Missoula and his other brother is working in Spokane. Chris Gartman, the father, was injured while working on the Chicago, Milwaukee and Puget Sound at St. Maries, Idaho. He died on August 4 of last year from the effects of the accident.

Coroner Marsh was notified of the shooting by telephone and left on the Olympian last evening for St. Regis. He will bring the body in with him today.

THE ONE GREAT CELEBRATION BEING PLANNED BY GARDEN CITY

Committee on Arrangements for Observance of Fourth Decides on Two Days and Arranges List of Attractions to Crowd Every Minute Full of Joy—Greatest Crowd Since Roosevelt Day.

When the committee which first decided to give Missoula a two-day celebration for the Fourth of July modestly announced that it would be a "celebration well worth while and something better than Missoula had attempted for some years," it stirred up considerable interest throughout western Montana. After two weeks of work in soliciting funds and laying plans this same committee met yesterday afternoon to compare notes. It took all the afternoon to get through the business of that session and when it was finished it was evident that the real truth of what is in store for the people of this section of the state in Missoula on July 3 and 4 had only been hinted at in the first announcement. "The one greatest celebration that Missoula ever had," better expresses what is to be the outcome of the work now being done by the committee in charge. "Two whole days of glittering fun" say the big posters which came from the press yesterday, two of which will be sent out today to every village and hamlet in western Montana to be posted. That is certainly putting it mild enough and those who make their plans to celebrate in the Garden City want to go into training immediately, for even with two days and nights to run the attractions that will be offered will keep everybody on the jump all the while, else they will miss something good.

Sells-Floto to Help.

It was first decided to have the usual one-day celebration in connection with the Sells-Floto circus, which comes here to show on July 4, but as the enthusiasm commenced to warm in the preparations it was evident that one day was not enough. The plans were enlarged accordingly. A big display of fireworks was ordered immediately and have already been received. Then the committee planned some feature for every hour of the day and night and yesterday had gotten far enough with these plans to give some hint of what the celebration would be like. Of course, there will be a big industrial parade—no celebration of the natal day could be complete without it. But this one will be on a scale that surpasses any other ever attempted here. The merchants have taken to the plan heartily and a number already have their floats "doped" out. The committee, headed by M. G. Martin and James Montgomery, will start out this morning to thoroughly canvass the city. Substantial prizes have been offered so that beautiful creations may be expected. The parade will also have its civic and military features, as most of the lodges will be out for a competitive showing of numbers and uniforms and the soldiers of Fort Missoula will all be in line. The parade will be followed by patriotic exercises.

Afternoon.

The afternoon of the third will be given over to the sports programs. The athletic events, for which the prizes already amount to $250 in cash, will include all of the usual events of field and track together with a variety of other sports.

Shipment of the service seemed heavy and excessive, but they were only in the same proportion as that of any big business enterprise. Of the total amount spent during this six years about $5,000,000 went for permanent equipment for each field district. It included the establishment of each of the headquarters, the building of trails, telephone lines and other permanent improvements and did not make up any of the salaries or expenses of the working force. About $5,000,000 more was spent in handling lines of work which, in the beginning, have to be done without the return of revenue. This comprised much reconnaissance work, the examination of land and its classification, especially the listing of agricultural land to be opened to the homesteader.

Really Self-Supporting.

But, to consider the revenue-producing work, the figures show the service to have been self-supporting from the beginning. The income from national forests is derived from timber sales, grazing permits and special uses. These various uses, provided one by one as the work of the service has advanced, comprise a list of nearly 100 items. And they are increasing, for with the advancement of the permanent development work, which first makes each forest more accessible through the building of roads and trails, the opportunity is made broader and the use of the forest becomes more practical for a greater number.

Valuet for the State.

According to the provision of the forestry laws a certain percentage of the annual income of the national forests in every state is turned over to the states themselves. This is all velvet money for the states. They have no responsibility and are at no expense, simply receiving in the most liberal manner for their proportion of this income. The amount at first was not large. Its growth is well illustrated in the case of Montana. The first year its proportion of the forest receipts was $5,767. Last year this had grown to $80,000, and it will probably be not less than that from now forward. This is one of the features urged by those opposed to the state administration of all forest land and the abolishing of the national service. It seems to be a strong point in favor of the efficiency of the national administration, especially when it is remembered that the conservation of forests in the United States is but in its infancy.

DEER LODGE RANGERS ALIVE AND CAPABLE

District Forester F. A. Silcox returned yesterday from the Deer Lodge forest, where he attended a rangers' meeting being held at Bernice station. Mr. Silcox stated that there is a good attendance and that the men are getting much practical good from the session. "There is a live and capable bunch of fellows over there," said Mr. Silcox. "Meeting right out in the field they have an opportunity to illustrate every lecture and much more real good comes from the discussions. I could remain only two days, but the meeting will be continued to the end of the week, closing with a competitive rifle and pistol shoot."

"One of the subjects taken up when I was at the meeting was the methods of management of lodgepole, which abounds on the Deer Lodge. Methods of marking, thinning, utilization and logging were each discussed and as we talked we were right in the timber being considered. It is one of the best meetings the rangers of the Deer Lodge forest have ever held."
