TELEGRAPHIC.

Crook's Movements.

El Paso, Texas, June 6.—A dispatch this evening from San Jose station, California, on the Mexican Central, states that today at Montezuma station, some miles below Ojo Calientes, that General Guerra with the Mexican force stopped the up train and conferred with the Mexican officer in charge of the guard. The General was enroute to Chihuahua where he would again take the field in the west and southern section. As far as could be learned, the Mexican officers being very reticent, the Apaches have moved south instead of being expected surrounded in the northern end of the Sierras. A dispatch dated, enroute from San Jose indicates this course as a probability on the part of July. The only direct statement General Guerra made was that nothing positive was known of Crook's movements except that it seemed certain that he was driving the Indians out of their present range and fastnesses.

Coroners science in China.

One curious piece of superstition receives the sanction of the Board of punishment in connection with suicide by hanging. Beneath the spot, where the crime was committed, a depth of three or more feet below the surface of the soil, there will be found a deposit of charcoal, and by this test, should any one doubt exist as to the scene of the suicide, the matter may be settled. The directions given in the case of deaths by drowning are voluminous, and, speaking generally, accurate. The habit of generalizing from insufficient data, which is so common with Chinese, is occasionally leads them astray here as elsewhere. It has been observed for them, for example, to discover the law that bodies take a long time to float in water and the beginning of spring that in the summer and end of autumn. That a drowned man floats on his face and a woman on her back is mentioned, and it is left to be implied that in case of bodies have been thrown into the water after death this does not hold good. With the same no notices every possible circumstance on each case connected with death by fire is gone into at length to the presence of traces of ashes in the mouth and nose being described as a certain test of death by burning.

Slaves in Arizona.

It has just been discovered that the Navajo Indians in Arizona and New Mexico have slaves. The agent became aware of the fact by the killing of a slave boy by his owner. The original slaves were two girls of the Moqui tribe who were bought by the Navajos for corn, four general as usual. All the descendants of these girls, as well as some others taken captives in war, have been held as slaves and treated in the most cruel and brutal manner, and the owners treat them as if it had been a coyote. The agent writes to the territorial department that he insisted on his rating all the slaves held by the tribe, some three hundred in number, at a dollar much parleying his demand was complied with.

What seems strange about this affair is that a tribe of Indians who have been under the supervision of an Indian agent for years should have so many slaves, whom the white people have saved and tortured by turns, and saved the owner's agent did discover them until a slave child was murdered by its master in the presence of the agent.—Silver City Enterprise.

The Famous Veta Madre Lode.

The New York Daily News comes to hand this week with an interesting article by Mr. Henry B. Clifford the mining engineer on the famous Veta Madre of Mexico. We regret that our space will not permit us to give the article in full. We clip the following points:

The lode was discovered by the early invaders on the 15th day of April, 1538. Its product of silver was at one time so great that it was the cause of political discussion and an army has at all times been stationed near Guanajuato.

For fourteen miles this geological wonder traverses the mountains, the surface showing at its most remote distances the same commanding appearance that distinguishes it at its largest and richest openings. As far north as Providence, the mineral is identical with that of Guanajuato, while the great works of Sierro upon the south, proves conclusively the power of the vein. There is no perceptible difference in any of the explored ore lodes, the mineral of Valenciana is the mineral of Rayas, being that class known as free milling ore, which has made the name of Nevada known to millions in mining circles. I speak conscientiously when I state that in my estimation the mineral bodies of the Veta Madre are continuous for its entire length. Although a broad section considering the fabulous amount already extracted, I hold to the belief that the prospect of this vein has not yet passed its infancy. The mines have never been worked or explored in the manner their magnitude demands, and today their methods of operations are the same they were 300 years ago, which can scarcely be credited, for in this, the "Century of Advance," there should be such total and suffering as I have seen during my recent visit. Upon this vein there are 1,100 men employed in picking upon their backs, from the depth of 1,000 feet, the ore of the mines, and I don't do our machinery full justice when I say that ten men, with hoisting power, can raise more ore than this army of slaves, for it is, but a system of slavery.

The vein is worked in the most miserable manner imaginable, and so complicated are the works that were a person to lose himself, he would die a horrible death, for there are but small chances of his ever seeing the light of day again. In the Valenciana and Rayas mines there are over 6,000 works, aggregating fully ninety miles of drifts, slopes, tunnels and cross-cuts, so gouged and cut up that the catacombs of Paris are secondarily.

These works extend over an area of 4,500 feet in length, by an average of 1,400 feet in depth (calculating the two mines together), the width varies; the average ore lode in Rayas is 300 feet, carrying a body of ore in place the entire distance, and where such was the case the workings are best described by comparing them with the cells in a lumber-camp; the intervening ground between the excavations are miserably low, while among the refuse in the dark and gloomy corridors are the millions of cargoes of valuable mineral. The eminent Francisco Gienie, the director-in-chief of the mines, informed me that in passing out some passages between Mellado and Rayas he extracted 80,000 cargoes of ore that had been left in the cells by the old Spaniards, and it is his opinion, also that of Ygnacio Yanguengue, director of Rayas, that in Valenciana, Mellado and Rayas there are to-day full $70,000,000, not to mention the amounts in the intervening bodies.

These old workings have exposed bodies of mineral of a magnitude never equaled, and if there is to be discovered the mythical gold foundation that will cause silver to lose its commercial value, I think it will prove to be the Veta Madre. It is a vein that in 333 years of steady work has given thousands of the world's terror, war and famine has never ceased to send it to the world as a stream of glittering metal, and is today producing millions, annually giving work to ten thousand men and a town of sixty-seven thousand people.

While the Conestogas lived and flourished it was called the great vein of the globe, but after yielding $291,000,000 and enriching many a million, it lies today like a dead lion, and the world has never been interested in its future. Were it not for this assistance the miles of level drifts would sink in a sea of debris and water, and even the product of $1,145,280 which was its production in 1881, would never again be equalled, while on the other hand the great old "Veta Madre" stands today in a flourishing condition, even under its primitive management, with the glorious record of $593,000,000, and it is wealth not yet touched. It is true the product of the Conestogas was made with the twenty-three years, still every once and while a discovery was at hand, a massive machinery was invented, during capital and brilliant engineering, in fact every facility an enlightened and progressive age could bestow was given to these mines, "the Pride of America," while the Veta Madre was unfortunately situated far from the civilizing influence of steam and rail, in a country to be by the ravages of war, with no friendly hand to raise them to eminence, even without help for the commonest mining appliances, with all their obstructions, now into circulation a sum sufficient to cause our American mines were it possible, at their utmost, to work with Valenciana and Mellado for the latter mine alone has produced two hundred millions more than the entire Conestoga vein, having the unprecedented record of $505,000,000 and today produces a large sum by working the same conditions, then the Veta Madre is a stock tale, with its only outlet.

COMMON COUNCIL.

The City Council was in session yesterday, adjusting accounts, passing upon bills, etc., and appointed Mr. H. A. Knapp City Recorder for the ensuing year; also J. Y. T. Smith as a committee of one to look after small pox cases.

The Council met this afternoon for the special purpose of taking sanitary measures for the purpose of ridding the city of small pox, which still seems to be lingering about it.

Dr. R. T. Osborne was appointed Health Officer, with full power to make examinations of cases and to quarantine the same or have them removed to the pest house.

There has been an alarming carelessness among the people, and sanitary measures were too soon abandoned, so that there are again a number of cases which have appeared within the past day or two.

If the town suffers from its criminal neglect, it is merely its own fault, from tardiness in taking the matter earnestly in hand at first. It is to be hoped that the Common Council pursue the matter until the city is entirely free from the disease.

The proposition of A. C. Baker, to act as Town Attorney, has been put out of files when conviction was had, and accepted, and the gentleman was made the Town Attorney.

THE FLAG.

The flag of the United States now "known and honored throughout the world," was adopted by a resolution of the continental congress, on the 14th day of June, 1777. The committee applied to Mr. Ross, who carried off business in a building now known as No. 239, Arch street, Philadelphia, to make the flag.

The design prepared by the committee was to make the flag with 13 red and white stripes, 13 stars, a union, blue in the field, spangled with 13 six-pointed stars, but Mrs. Ross suggested that the stars should be five-pointed instead of six, and this the committee agreed to. The next day the flag was finished and approved by the continental congress.

The flag was first hoisted up on board the ranger, commanded by Paul Jones, the bravest of the brave, and who added so much glory to the American navy in the armistice of the British ship, the Bellerophon, off the coast of S. O. land, on the night of the 23rd day of September, 1779.

A dispatch from Cleveland Ohio of a late date has the following: The National City Bank, after employing five different experts continually day and night since last Friday morning in an attempt to get its vault open, as a last resort to-day tore it out of its brick and stone enclosure, and conveyed it to the works of the City Engine and Iron company, where it was blown open by dynamite. In order to remove the vault it was necessary to remove the plate-glass windows of the bank. The thing had been done, the vault was removed, and showed how impracticable an arrangement it is by successfully resisting the efforts of all the experts.

Maricopa Gladley and Juan Jose two captains of the Maricopa band of Indians on the river below town came in this morning and reported that the Pima Indians were attempting to force them to take part in the jail delivery which they have in contemplation. The Maricopas are not favorable to the project. At the post-work held on the 6th yesterday we hear that the Pimas have determined to demand the release of the confined Indians. If there is nothing against the Indians that would hold a white man under similar circumstances it would have been a matter of policy to have discharged the Indians long ago rather than incur an enmity which will be a source of annoyance so long as the Indians are in the country.

Our townsmen Mr. A. H. Henshaw has had a little adventure with rustlers, according to the Courier. A few days ago Mr. Henshaw, of Phoenix, was riding along in a light wagon, in the direction of Ash Fork, he found a very gentle horse on or near the road. Securing the animal, he had not proceeded for when he came across two or three footmen, who were apparently resting under a tree. He asked them if they knew anything about the rustler horse. One of them said he did; that the animal belonged to a citizen of the county. The speaker said he had orders to take the animal and deliver him to the owner. Henshaw, suspecting the fellows to be "rustlers," requested to show their authority. They could produce none; so Mr. Henshaw drove off and arrived at Ash Fork in good time. No man there knew aught about the horse. Meantime, some of the rustlers came into the Fork, but soon left. Mr. Henshaw brought the horse to the O. K. stables, West Prescott, where the horse was recognized as belonging to Mr. Akard, of Peoples valley.
