

Our Showing along Business Lines

THE STATESMAN is publishing free a business and professional men's guide. This is to inform the people and general public of the men and women who are in business and what they are doing and where they are located. Look over the list carefully and see if any one is omitted; if so notify us at once and their names will be inserted. Then if you have need of any service they can render call on them. Say you saw their names in the Business Directory of THE STATESMAN. As soon as the list is complete and verified it will be published on a large card and hung up in public places so that the general public may know where we are at.

The business columns of The Statesman are open to all for free discussion of industrial topics of local importance. If you are possessed of business knowledge that is practical and has been proven in Colorado, it is your duty to give it to give it to your fellow citizens. Men, minds and dollars are turned this way looking for an opening. What we want are facts demonstrated here in Denver and not a thousand miles away.

This column of business enterprises cannot be filled up all at once but will be arranged in alphabetical order. Each week new letters will be added to the list and all the business enterprises under the heading of those letters will be inserted. The names and location will be permanent so that all you need to do is to look at your paper to see who is in that column.

Farmer Abner Benson Astonished Church Gathering.

This story has been told times enough to be true, and I presume it is several years ago there lived at North Paris, Me., a prosperous farmer by the name of Abner Benson, who was a good Methodist, and also a member of the grange. The grange meetings were held in the church as well as the religious meetings, and this fact was the cause of the following contretemps:

Abner was a red faced, portly man of rather pompous appearance. The four words, "he knew it all," might have described him very well. One afternoon as he was riding past the church he noticed that a meeting was being held there, and, not knowing that any church meeting had been called, he at once took it for granted that it must be a grange meeting.

He hitched his horse, went into the entry and knocked on the door, after the fashion of the grangers, and, as it happened, the doorkeeper of the grange was there, and on hearing a knocking, got up and opened the door, whereupon Abner stepped in, and, with a pompous bow and flourish, gave, in a voice loud enough to reach every ear in the church, the grange password, "Cul-ti-va-tor!" "Cul-ti-va-tor!" You can imagine the smile that illuminated that Methodist class meeting.--Boston Herald.

Practical Joke on a Minister.

Not a few preachers would be glad to be the victims of such a practical joke as was recently played upon the Rev. Mr. Hagerman of Oxford, Mich. At the annual meeting of the church of which he is pastor the question of hiring a preacher comes up for discussion.

At the last meeting of this society, when the subject was brought up, a good deacon arose and said: "All those in favor of retaining Brother Hagerman for another year—at the same salary—will please rise."

Not a person rose, and the minister, who was present, felt as uncomfortable as possible, and heartily wished himself anywhere else. Then the good deacon who had put the question arose again and said, with a twinkle of the eye: "I see no one favors that motion, so I will put it again in this way: All those in favor of keeping the Rev. Mr. Hagerman at an increased salary—will please rise."

Everyone got upon his feet. Then it dawned upon Mr. Hagerman that he had been the victim of a joke, and a smile lighted his eyes and the color returned to his cheeks. Some of his best friends had planned the surprise, and the little scheme had worked to perfection.—The Ram's Horn.

What a Desert Waste is.

The pupils of a sixth grade in Boston school were taking an examination in geography. One large girl, remarkable for her dullness, had been unable to answer a single question until the following was written upon the blackboard:

"What is a desert waste?"

After reading this she seized her pen and wrote rapidly. Her teacher, filled with curiosity, passed down the aisle, and this is what she found upon the girl's paper:

"A desert waist is where no man is."

A Fortunate Citizen.

"I won't pay any taxes on a house any more."

"Why not?"

"Cyclone blowed it clean into the next settlement."

"How about the land?"

"I don't know yet; but a man as fortunate as I am may confidently expect an earthquake to come along and swallow it; then I'll look for a big rain to fill the hole in the ground and start a fishing industry."—At lanta Constitution.
