> anecdote of his old associate, Horace Greeley : one day a stranger came into the office, looking angry and inquired for Greeley, I pointed him to the tittle den where Greeley was scratching away for dear life, and he made for it. As he went in I heard him say, You - old bypocrite! Greeley did not look up or even pause, but kept driving his pen madly on. his nose within a couple of inches of the paper and his lips waispering the words after the pen, as was his wont. The fel' low continued, calling Greeley's attention to an article which had offended him, and denouncing bim as a villain, a coward and a liar, with an oath about every other word, meantime threatening to knock his head off. Greeley didn't stop for a moment, but jabbed his pen into the ink and wrote on unruffled by the blasphemy. At last the intruder exhausted his vocabulary, and turned to leave the room, when Greeley jumped up and squeaked out to him, Say, neighbor, don't go! Stay and free your mind.
