NOTICE.

Mr. W. H. Sparks.

Of Shreveport, is authorized agent for that city, to whom parties desiring to advertise in or subscribe for THE DAILY HERALD are respectfully referred.

To the City Subscribers of the Daily Herald.

The subscription list of the DALLAS DAILY HERALD, on and after Sunday, September 7, 1873, passes to the control of the undersigned. From the above date, all collections for subscription will be made weekly, at thirty cents per week, the carriers collecting the same every Monday, and in order that the conditions of the agreement between the proprietors of the paper and myself may be punctually and fully observed, all parties standing in arrears for two weeks will be stricken from the list.

Two carriers will be engaged for the city distribution, and THE HERALD will be left in any part of the city and suburbs at an early hour in the morning.

Subscribers must give reasonable notice of any intended change of residence or business location, so that their names may be transferred in season to the proper route. A request to do so will not attach to the undersigned any responsibility for the non-delivery of the paper after such removal.

It is the duty and agreement of the carriers to deliver the paper whenever ordered by the subscriber, and the undersigned will thank the patrons of the paper to promptly report every default in the premises.

J. N. BARTHOLOW, Local Editor.

Notice.

Under the new regulation of furnishing the Herald to our city list, all those who have paid for the year or less period will be supplied as usual, up to the time their subscription expires.

Mr. Kenn is one of the officers of the Institute, and will remain in the city a few days in the interest of that institution. He has been traveling over the State, and proposes to leave Galveston on the 16th instant, and will take charge of some young ladies on way wish to enter the school.

The Yellow Fever at Shreveport

Excitement in Our City over the Conflicting Reports.

Action of the City Council—Quarantine Established.

Last Night's Train on the Texas Pacific Stopped near Mesquite.

Reports received from Houston state that the yellow fever has been prevailing in Shreveport since the 25th of August. Nineteen deaths are reported yesterday. There is no doubt that it is spreading rapidly. Many persons are leaving that city.

Quarantine regulations will be enforced at Houston this evening or tomorrow. A gentleman at Sherman this morning received a letter from his wife, stating that the fever was spreading to an alarming extent.

We have given the above when we deem good authority, and have heard from persons who left the city of Shreveport yesterday morning, that the fever was prevailing to an alarming extent. The following letter from Dr. G. R. Booth, who is in charge of the City Hospital at Shreveport, to Judge Ira C. Mitchell, of this city, is published for the information it contains, but it should be remembered that it is dated four days ago, and most of the rumors we have are of date since then:

SHREVEPORT, August 31, 1873.

Dear Sir—Doubtless the report of the prevalence of yellow fever here has reached your city ere this. I would say that there has not been a case here this year. We have, however, had and are still having the usual fall fevers which are here every year, such as intermittent and remittent fevers, which is attended with more or less congestion. Some of our citizens I am sorry to say have been frightened from their homes by the report that has been circulated concerning the type of sickness here.

I have interviewed several physicians practicing here, and all say the report is groundless. About the only deaths that have occurred here lately are those men who have been employed on the river above here, moving the raft, working there all summer in the sun, drinking Red River water, exposed to the influence of malaria (that is always present in such places at this season of the year); such sick up there, and are discharged and come to Shreveport to obtain medical aid. Many times they are on the way two or three days, some having to walk. The valuable time for medication is being lost, and often when they reach here "are too far gone" (to use the expression) for medicine to have any, or but little effect. This constitutes the cause of the great scare I have reference to. Every city or community have in it a class of "beliefs" who have no other motive in view but to get up such reports—having nothing at stake to suffer by the result, consequent of such a rumor about, and not possessing brain enough to see the folly of such an action.

There has been but few deaths in the Hospital this month—in all, but six. Those who have entered have been affected with intermittent bilious fever. This is about all the sickness we have here. This is a critical period in the commerce of Shreveport, having just been connected with Dallas and other cities of Texas by rail, and the merchants of those places have not yet fairly tried the place as a market for their cotton and the purchase of their supplies, and should this report be believed, it will be a great injury to our merchants.

The papers here are doing all that can be done to dispel the foolish and unjust report; and no doubt you will have a much better demonstration of its falsity in a day or two from the doctors here. So come on to Shreveport and tell all others to do likewise.

GUS. R. BOOTH.

STOP HER.

The Pacific train was stopped last night by direction of the authorities of this city at Mesquite Station, a point on the road four miles from Dallas.

Whether this precaution turns out to be too long for Yellow Jack to get over, or whether it is just long enough for a uicer pleasant walk for him into the city, is a question to be decided shortly.

THE LATEST.

From gentlemen who arrived from Jefferson last night we learn that Jefferson, Marshal and Longview have established a rigid quarantine. They inform us that there is no doubt that yellow fever, in its most virulent form, exists in Shreveport, but attribute it to local causes, and think our citizens need entertain no apprehension in regard to its appearance in our city.

UP Pacific avenue, the other night, a man went home drunk and pulling off his boots and removing his hat laid them with his cane on the steps and started down town again. About two hours afterwards he returned and found his wife standing on those steps, with his boots and hat on and his cane raised with blood-curdling and disencanting grace and an intonation peevish with gravity, pressing him to step into the house. He stepped in, but as he passed over the threshold there was a feeling union between his back and that cane, so much so that the neighbors sent over to inquire if anything had "busted" in Smith's house.

THE first fire of the season took place in a small new frame house near the street-car ticket office yesterday. About noon a lighted cigar was laid on a pile of shavings, under the impression, we suppose, that they were chips of stone. Upon the shavings lusting out in flame, the proprietor of that cigar at once sprang upon that pile of shavings and sat on it, and now his wife dresses him every thirty minutes with a flax seed poultice.
