Housekeeping in Martinique.

Housekeeping in Martinique would seem very queer to American housewives. In the first place how would they like to see their maid servant, cook, housemaid and all, in fact, appearing upon the scene at any moment, in drawing room, dining room, in undress uniform? What a revelation this national costume was to me! The natives have, notwithstanding this scantiness of clothing, the redeeming quality of cleanliness. The houses are furnished to suit the climate, Vienna bent wood and rattan being the favorite styles. There are some few exceptions to this rule; when the people are so thoroughly French, they must imitate the customs of their mother country and fill their apartments with upholstered easy chairs and divans, giving the whole a most stuffy and inappropriate effect. The floors are without exception bare, being relieved by an occasional carpet rug. Most of the salons and dining rooms or galleries, as they are termed in creole, are paved. Some are very artistic, in colored tiles; most of them, however, in simple red tiles about six inches square. These floors are scoured usually twice a week, which, in addition to the paved courtyard, also to undergo the same process, makes no little occupation for one servant, and it generally falls upon the housemaid. The creoles pride themselves upon their boudoirs and sleeping apartments. The furniture is very elaborate, even among people in moderate circumstances, and it necessitates a deal of labor to keep it in order. They are very exacting of the housemaid in this respect. Judging from what I have seen, I should say that many hours were spent simply in polishing the furniture.—St. Louis Republican.

An Injurious Shampoo Mixture.

"Speaking of adulterations," said a medical friend to me, "one of the most outrageous I have lately discovered is the use many barbers are making of washing soda for a shampoo mixture. It comes cheaper than ammonia—to the barber. To his customer it is a great deal dearer. It has an injurious effect on the hair and scalp, and it does not clean the head. The refreshing sensation that comes from the evaporation of ammonia is absent, and altogether it is a swindle of the first order. I began to notice some time ago that at certain barber shops where I was in the habit of being shaved up there was no smell of ammonia about the shampoo. Then I noticed that my head, in spite of shampooing, remained dandruff and that it lathered up when I put water on it. This led me to investigate. I have got a barber now who uses proper shampooing materials, but I tried a dozen before I found him. Considering the charge of a shampoo, the barber who is not willing to give his customers an honest one don't deserve to have any customers."—Alfred Trumble in New York News.

Little and Lively.

The times change and we change with them. Hardly larger than mustard seeds but composed of highly concentrated vegetable extracts, Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" have caused the old style, large drastic, cathartic pills to be abandoned by all sensible people. The little sugar-coated pellets are a sure cure for constipation; for persons of sedentary habits they are invaluable. They are little and lively, pleasant and safe.
